(a.3) in the case of one or more impairments in physical or mental functions the effects of which are such that the individual's ability to perform more than one basic activity of daily living is significantly restricted, a medical practitioner has certified in prescribed form that the impairment or impairments are severe and prolonged impairments in physical or mental functions the effects of which are such that the individual's ability to perform more than one basic activity of daily living is significantly restricted and that the cumulative effect of those restrictions is equivalent to having a marked restriction in the ability to perform a single basic activity of daily living, where the medical practitioner is, in the case of

(i) an impairment with respect to the individual's ability in feeding or dressing themself, or in walking, a medical doctor or an occupational therapist, and

(ii) in the case of any other impairment, a medical doctor,

where

A is the appropriate percentage for the year,

B is $6,000, and

C is

(a) where the individual has not attained the age of 18 years before the end of the year, the amount, if any, by which

Proposed Amendment — 118.3(4)(b)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 21, will amend para. 118.3(4)(b) to substitute "(1)(a.2) or (a.3)" for "(1)(a.2)", applicable to 2005 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 118.3 provides a tax credit, generally referred to as the Disability Tax Credit (DTC), for individuals who have a severe and prolonged mental or physical impairment. Paragraph 118.3(4)(a) provides a requirement for certain persons to provide, upon request of the Minister of National Revenue, additional information with respect to an individual's impairment. If this information is provided by a medical practitioner referred to in paragraph 118.3(1)(a.2), paragraph 118.3(4)(b) provides that the information is considered to be in the form of a certificate required for the purpose of claiming the DTC.

Paragraph 118.3(4)(b) is amended to add a similar reference to a medical practitioner referred to in paragraph 118.3(1)(a.3), which was added by the 2006 budget.

Related Provisions: 162(7) — Penalty for failure to comply with request for information.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 118.6(1) defines the expression "designated educational institution", which is relevant for the purposes of the child care expense and attendant care expense deductions and the tuition fee and education tax credits. Generally speaking, a designated educational institution is an institution that provides post-secondary education, an institution certified by the Minister of Human Resources Development that furnishes or improves skills in an occupation, or a foreign university. This amendment to subparagraph (a)(i) of that definition, applicable to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, is consequential on the change in the name of the Quebec statute under which financial assistance is provided to students as well as the change in the name of the responsible Quebec ministry.

(ii) certified by the Minister of Human Resources and Skills Development to be an educational institution providing courses, other than courses designed for university credit, that furnish a person with skills for, or improve a person's skills in, an occupation,

(b) a university outside Canada at which the individual referred to in subsection (2) was enrolled in a course, of not less than three consecutive weeks duration, leading to a degree, or

(c) if the individual referred to in subsection (2) resided, throughout the year referred to in that subsection, in Canada near the boundary between Canada and the United States, an educational institution in the United States to which the individual commuted that is a university, college or other educational institution providing courses at a post-secondary school level;

Proposed Amendment — CPP contributions for age 60–69

Canada Revenue Agency notice, July 14, 2011: Changes to the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) for individuals who are at least 60 years of age but under 70

As of January 1, 2012, the rules for contributing to the CPP will change.

1. Do the changes apply to you?

The changes apply to you if you are an employee or self-employed and you are:

- at least 60 years of age but under 70; and
- receiving a CPP or Quebec Pension Plan (QPP) retirement pension.

You will not be affected by the changes if you stay out of the workforce.

2. What are the changes?

Individuals under 65 years of age

Starting January 1, 2012, you will now have to contribute to the CPP if you are:

- receiving a CPP or QPP retirement pension; and
- working.

Individuals at least 65 years of age but under 70

Starting January 1, 2012, unless you elect to stop contributing to the CPP, you will now have to contribute to the CPP if you are:

- receiving a CPP or QPP retirement pension; and
- working.

3. How do you stop contributing to the CPP?

The method is different if you are an employee, self-employed or if you are both an employee and self-employed.

Employee

If you are an employee, at least 65 years of age but under 70 and receiving a CPP or QPP retirement pension, you can elect to stop contributing to the CPP.

You can elect to stop contributing to the CPP, by:

- completing Form CPT30, Election to Stop Contributing to the Canada Pension Plan, or Revocation of a Prior Election;
- giving a copy to all your employers; and
- sending the original to the Canada Revenue Agency.

Details about this form will be available at a later date.

The election takes effect on the first day of the month following the date you give a copy of the completed Form CPT30 to your employer. For example, if you give Form CPT30 to your employer on June 22, 2012, the election will take effect on July 1, 2012.

Notes: You cannot elect to stop contributing to the CPP until you are at least 65 years of age. The election stays in effect until you turn 70 years of age or until you revoke the election.

Self-employed

If you are self-employed, at least 65 years of age but under 70 and receiving a CPP or QPP retirement pension, you can elect to stop contributing to the CPP.

To do so, complete the applicable section of Schedule 8, CPP Contributions on Self-Employment and Other Earnings for 2012 and file it with your Income Tax and Benefit Return for 2012. Do not use Form CPT30, Election to Stop Contributing to the Canada Pension Plan, or Revocation of a Prior Election.

You cannot elect to stop contributing to the CPP until you are at least 65 years of age. The earliest month an election can take effect is the first month following the month of your 65th birthday. For example, if you turn 65 on July 15, 2012, the earliest month an election can take effect is August 2012.

Note: The election stays in effect until you turn 70 years of age or until you revoke the election.

Individuals receiving both pensionable earnings and self-employed earnings

If you are both an employee and self-employed, at least 65 years of age but under 70 and receiving a CPP or QPP retirement pension, you can elect to stop contributing to the CPP.

You can elect to stop contributing to the CPP, by:

- completing Form CPT30, Election to Stop Contributing to the Canada Pension Plan, or Revocation of a Prior Election;
- giving a copy to all your employers; and
- sending the original to the Canada Revenue Agency.

Details about this form will be available at a later date.

The election takes effect on the first day of the month following the date you give a copy of the completed Form CPT30 to your employer. This date applies to both your pensionable earnings and self-employment earnings. For example, if you give Form CPT30 to your employer on June 22, 2012, the election will take effect on July 1, 2012.

Notes: You cannot elect to stop contributing to the CPP until you are at least 65 years of age. The election stays in effect until you turn 70 years of age or until you revoke the election.

4. How do you start contributing to the CPP again?

If you want to start contributing to the CPP again, you need to revoke your election to stop contributing to the CPP. However, you cannot revoke an election in the same calendar year that you elected to stop contributing to the CPP. For example, if you elected to stop contributing to the CPP in 2012, you cannot revoke this election before 2013.

Since you cannot revoke an election until 2013, we will provide information about this process at a later date.

To find out how the changes may affect you, visit the Service Canada Web site or the Human Resources and Skills Development Canada Web site.

119. (1) Averaging for farmers and fishermen [obsolete] — Where an individual's chief source of income has been farming or fishing for a taxation year (in this section referred to as the "year of averaging") and the 4 immediately preceding years for which the individual has filed returns of income as required by this Part (in this section referred to as the "preceding years"), if the individual, on or before the day on or before which the individual was required to file a return of the individual's income for the year of averaging, or on or before the day on or before which the individual would have been required to file such a return if any tax had been payable by the individual for the year of averaging, files with the Minister an election in prescribed form, the tax payable under this Part for the year of averaging is an amount determined by the following rules:

(b) determine the amount (in this section referred to as the "average gross income") equal to 1/5 of the amount by which

(i) the total of the amounts determined under paragraph (a) for the years in the averaging period,

exceeds

(ii) the total of the amounts that would be deductible in respect of the losses for the taxation years in the averaging period in computing the taxable income for the year immediately following the year of averaging if the individual's income from the same business for that year were the total of the amounts determined under paragraph (a) for the years in the averaging period,

(c) determine the amount (in this section referred to as the "average net income") for each year in the averaging period equal to the average gross income minus the deductions permitted for that year by section 109 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952,

(d) determine the amount (in this section referred to as the "average tax") for each year in the averaging period equal to the tax that would be payable under this Part for the year if the taxable income for the year were the average net income for the year and no amount were deductible under subsection 127(5) for the year,

(f) where

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount deemed by subsection 120(2) to have been paid on account of tax under this Part for a preceding year in the averaging period,

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (i) if the taxable income for each preceding year were the average net income for that year, add to the amount, if any, determined under paragraph (e) the amount of that excess,

(g) where paragraph (f) does not apply, deduct from the amount, if any, determined under paragraph (e) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount determined under subparagraph (f)(ii)

exceeds

(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (f)(i), and

(h) deduct from the amount resulting from the application of paragraph (f) or (g), as the case may be, the total of the taxes payable under this Part for the preceding years computed without reference to section 120.2, and the remainder, if any, obtained under paragraph (h) is the tax payable under this Part for the year of averaging and no further deduction may be made therefrom under any other provision of this Part except subsection 127(5).

(2) Refunds — Where this section is applicable to the computation of an individual's tax for a taxation year, the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) the total of taxes payable under this Part for the preceding years, and

(a) the amount described in subparagraph (1)(e)(ii)

shall be added in computing the individual's investment tax credit at the end of that year, and paragraph 12(1)(t) and subsections 13(7.1) and 53(2) shall not apply to any amount deducted under subsection 127(5) for that year, or any subsequent taxation year, that may reasonably be attributed to the amount added under this subsection.

(10) Idem — Notwithstanding the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9), where a taxpayer has filed an election under subsection (1) for a year of averaging, in computing the taxpayer's investment tax credit at the end of any of the preceding years, there shall not be included any amount in respect of property acquired, or an expenditure made, in or after the year of averaging.

(a) the amount specified in the individual's election for the year under subsection 110.4(2) and, where the individual's legal representative has filed on the individual's behalf an election under subsection (2) for the year, the individual's accumulated averaging amount at the end of the year is multiplied by

(b) the percentage referred to in paragraph 117(2)(c).

(2) Year of death — Where an individual dies in a taxation year before 1998 (and is resident in Canada at the time of death) and the individual's legal representative files with the individual's return of income (other than a return of income referred to in subsection 110.4(5)) for the year an election in prescribed form on or before the day on or before which the return is required to be filed, there shall be added to the amount that would, but for this section, be the individual's tax payable for the year under this Part with respect to the return of income an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of the taxes that would have been payable by the individual under this Part for the three immediately preceding taxation years if the individual's taxable income otherwise determined for each of those years were increased by ⅓ of the individual's accumulated averaging amount at the end of the year in which the individual died and if this Part were read without reference to sections 119 to 127.3

(b) the total of the taxes that would have been payable by the individual under this Part for the three immediately preceding taxation years if this Part were read without reference to sections 119 to 127.3.

(3) Deduction and additions — Each amount deducted or added under subsection (1) or (2) in computing the tax payable under this Part by an individual for a taxation year shall, notwithstanding those subsections, be equal to the total of

(a) the amount that would, but for this subsection, be determined for the year under subsection (1) or (2), as the case may be, and

(b) an amount equal to that proportion of 52% of the amount referred to in paragraph (a) that

(i) the individual's income for the year, other than the individual's income earned in the year in a province,

(ii) the individual's income for the year.

(4) Presumption — Where the amount deductible by an individual under subsection (1) exceeds the amount that would, but for that subsection, be the individual's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, the excess shall be deemed to be an amount paid by the individual, on the day the individual was required to file the election under subsection 110.4(2), on account of the individual's tax for the year under this Part.

(5) Reduction — Notwithstanding subsection (4), the amount of the excess referred to in that subsection shall be reduced by an amount equal to that proportion of 16.5% of the amount of the excess that

(a) the individual's income earned in the year in a province that, on January 1, 1973, was a province providing schooling allowances (within the meaning

(7) Application — This section does not apply to an individual described in subsection (6) unless the individual's legal representatives have, on or before the day on or before which they were required to file the individual's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the individual died (or would have been required to file such a return had tax been payable by the individual under this Part for the year), filed a return of the individual's income for each of the three taxation years referred to in paragraph (2)(b) in the same form and containing the same information as the return that the individual, or legal representatives, would have been required to file under this Part if the individual had been resident in Canada throughout each of those three years and if tax had been payable by the individual under this Part for each of those three years.

(a) the portion of the total of the individual's additional taxes determined under subsection (3) for the 7 taxation years immediately preceding the particular year that was not deducted in computing the individual's tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding the particular year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

Proposed Amendment — 120.2(3)(b)

(b) the amount that, if this Act were read without reference to section 120, would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year if the individual were not entitled to any deduction under any of sections 126, 127 and 127.4, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 72, will amend para. 120.2(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 120.2 allows an individual to apply additional taxes, imposed for a given year under the minimum tax in section 127.5, against the individual's ordinary Part I tax liability for following years. Paragraph 120.2(3)(b) is amended to remove the reference in that paragraph to subsection 120.4(2). This mendment ensures that an individual's additional tax in respect of the minimum tax does not include the special 29% tax imposed under section 120.4 on certain passive income of minors.

(c) that proportion of the amount, if any, by which that

(iii) the amount of the individual's foreign taxes for the year within the meaning assigned by subsection 127.54(1)

is of

(iv) the amount that would be the individual's foreign taxes for the year within the meaning assigned by subsection 127.54(1) if the definition "foreign taxes" in that subsection were read without reference to "2/3 of".

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under this Part for the eligible taxation year if the total of all amounts, each of which is the specified portion, in relation to the eligible taxation year, of a qualifying amount received by the individual before the end of the year of receipt, were added in computing the individual's taxable income for the eligible taxation year

(b) if the eligible taxation year ended before the taxation year preceding the year of receipt, an amount equal to the amount that would be calculated as interest payable on the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the eligible taxation year exceeds the taxpayer's tax payable under this Part for that year, if the amount that would be calculated as interest payable on that excess were calculated

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 73, will amend the opening words of para. 120.31(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 120.31 provides for the calculation of the tax payable on certain lump-sum payments. The amount of the tax is equal to the total of the additional taxes that would be payable for each relevant taxation year if the portion of the lump-sum payment that relates to that preceding year were added to the individual's taxable income for that year.

A notional amount of interest (using the rate of interest on tax refunds applicable to the relevant period) is added to the additional tax to take into account the fact that the calculation of the tax on the lump-sum payment should reflect not only the additional tax that would have been payable had the payment been received on an on-going basis, but also the fact that this additional tax was not paid during those preceding years.

The amendment to paragraph 120.31(3)(b) clarifies that the notional amount of interest is calculated on the amount of the additional tax for each relevant previous year and not on the whole tax payable for that year. This amendment applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years.

(i) for the period that began on May 1 of the year following the eligible taxation year and that ended immediately before the year of receipt, and

(ii) at the prescribed rate that is applicable for the purpose of subsection 164(3) with respect to the period.

120.4 Tax on split income [Kiddie tax] — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"excluded amount", in respect of an individual for a taxation year, means an amount that is the income from, or the taxable capital gain from the disposition of, a property acquired by or for the benefit of the individual as a consequence of the death of

(a) a parent of the individual; or

(b) any person, if the individual is

(i) enrolled as a full-time student during the year at a post-secondary educational institution (as defined in subsection 146.1(1)), or

(ii) an individual in respect of whom an amount may be deducted under section 118.3 in computing a taxpayer's tax payable under this Part for the year.

Related Provisions: 248(8) — Meaning of "consequence" of death.

History: The opening words of "excluded amount" in subsec. 120.4(1) amended by 2011, c. 24, subsec. 36(1), applicable to dispositions that occur after March 21, 2011. The opening words formerly read:

"excluded amount", in respect of an individual for a taxation year, means an amount that is the income from a property acquired by or for the benefit of the individual as a consequence of the death of

"specified individual", in relation to a taxation year, means an individual who

(a) had not attained the age of 17 years before the year;

(b) at no time in the year was non-resident; and

(c) has a parent who is resident in Canada at any time in the year.

Related Provisions: 248(1)"specified individual" — Definition applies to entire Act.

"split income", of a specified individual for a taxation year, means the total of all amounts (other than excluded amounts) each of which is

(a) an amount required to be included in computing the individual's income for the year

(i) in respect of taxable dividends received by the individual in respect of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange or shares of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation), or

(ii) because of the application of section 15 in respect of the ownership by any person of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange),

Proposed Amendment — 120.4(1)"split income"(b)(ii) opening words

(ii) can reasonably be considered to be income derived from the provision of property or services by a partnership or trust to, or in support of, a business carried on by

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 74(1), will amend the opening words of subpara. (b)(ii) of the definition "split income" in subsec. 120.4(1) to read as above, applicable in computing split income of a specified individual for taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, other than in computing an amount included in that income that is from a trust or partnership for a taxation year or fiscal period of the trust or partnership that began before December 21, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 120.4 provides a special 29% tax applicable to certain passive income of individuals under the age of 18. These tax on split income rules were first proposed in the 1999 Budget Plan. At the time, the Government indicated that it "would monitor the effectiveness of this targeted measure, and may take appropriate action if new income-splitting techniques develop".

The expression "split income" describes the type of income to which this measure applies.

Among other things, split income of an individual includes all amounts (other than excluded amounts) required to be included in the individual's income in respect of partnership or trust income if the source of the income is the provision of goods or services by the partnership or trust to, or in support of, a business carried on by

- a person who is related to the individual,
- a corporation of which a person who is related to the individual is a specified shareholder, or
- a professional corporation of which a person related to the individual is a shareholder.

The phrase "goods or services" in the English version of subparagraph (b)(ii) and clause (c)(ii)(C) in the definition "split income" is replaced by the phrase "property or services". This ensures that the split income rules will apply to income from property, such as rental income. This change applies in computing the split income of a specified individual for taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, other than in computing an amount included in that income that is from a trust or partnership for a fiscal period or taxation year of the trust or partnership that began before December 21, 2002. Also see the commentary to subsection 160(1.2) of the Act, which is amended consequential to this amendment.

(A) a person who is related to the individual at any time in the year,

(B) a corporation of which a person who is related to the individual is a specified shareholder at any time in the year, or

(C) a professional corporation of which a person related to the individual is a shareholder at any time in the year, or

(c) a portion of an amount included because of the application of subsection 104(13) or 105(2) in respect of a trust (other than a mutual fund trust) in computing the individual's income for the year, to the extent that the portion

(i) is not included in an amount described in paragraph (a), and

(ii) can reasonably be considered

(A) to be in respect of taxable dividends received in respect of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange or shares of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation),

(B) to arise because of the application of section 15 in respect of the ownership by any person of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than shares of a class listed on a designated stock exchange), or

(C) to be income derived from the provision of goods or services by a partnership or trust to or in support of a business carried on by

(3) Tax payable by a specified individual — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where an individual is a specified individual in relation to a taxation year, the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year shall not be less than the amount by which

(a) the amount added under subsection (2) to the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that

(i) may be deducted under section 121 or 126 in computing the individual's tax payable under this Part for the year, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 75, will amend the opening words of subsec. 122(2), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 122(1) provides that, instead of graduated income tax rates, inter vivos trusts are generally subject to top marginal rates of income tax on their undistributed income. Subsection 122(2), which does not apply to mutual fund trusts, permits graduated income tax rates for certain inter vivos trusts established before June 18, 1971. One of the conditions for an inter vivos trust continuing to qualify for graduated income tax rates is that it not receive any gifts after June 18, 1971.

The opening words of subsection 122(2) are amended to modernize the language and to clarify its intended scope.

(a) was established before June 18, 1971;

(b) was resident in Canada on June 18, 1971 and without interruption thereafter until the end of the year;

(c) did not carry on any active business in the year;

(d) has not received any property by way of gift since June 18, 1971;

Proposed Addition — 122(2)(d.1)

(d.1) was not a trust to which a contribution (as defined by section 94 as it reads for taxation years that end after 2006) was made after June 22, 2000;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 12, will add para. 122(2)(d.1), applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Paragraph 122(2)(d.1) is introduced so that the graduated income tax rates cease to apply to a trust in the event that, after June 22, 2000, a "contribution" is made to the trust. For this purpose, the expression "contribution" is defined in new section 94. Although the definition "contribution" in new section 94 encompasses more than gifts and loans from arm's length parties, it excludes most arm's length transactions. Generally, a contribution will result in an increase in the value of the trust's assets or a decrease in the trust's liabilities.

(e) has not, after June 18, 1971, incurred

(i) any debt, or

(ii) any other obligation to pay an amount, to, or guaranteed by, any person with whom any beneficiary of the trust was not dealing at arm's length; and

(f) has not received any property after December 17, 1999, where

(i) the property was received as a result of a transfer from another trust,

(ii) subsection (1) applied to a taxation year of the other trust that began before the property was so received, and

(iii) no change in the beneficial ownership of the property resulted from the transfer.

Related Provisions: 127.53(1)(b) — Trust under 122(2) has $40,000 exemption from minimum tax.

History: Para. 122(2)(f) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 105, applicable to 1999 et seq.

(3) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"non-deductible distributions amount" for a taxation year has the meaning assigned by subsection 104(16).

"taxable SIFT trust distributions", of a SIFT trust for a taxation year, means the lesser of

(a) its amount taxable for the taxation year, and

(b) the amount determined by the formula

$$A/(1 - (B + C))$$

where

A is its non-deductible distributions amount for the taxation year,

B is the net corporate income tax rate in respect of the SIFT trust for the taxation year, and

C is the provincial SIFT tax rate of the SIFT trust for the taxation year.

Related Provisions: 117(2) — Amount taxable.

History: The description of C in the definition "taxable SIFT trust distributions" in subsec. 122(3) amended to substitute "tax rate of the SIFT trust" for "tax factor" by 2008, c. 28, subsec. 18(2), applicable to 2009 et seq., except that it also appies for a SIFT trust's earlier taxation year if the definition "provincial SIFT tax rate" in subsec. 248(1), as amended, applies to that earlier taxation year.

Subsec. 122(3) added by 2007, c. 29, subsec. 12(2), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

122.1 (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section and in sections 104 and 122.

Proposed Addition — 122.1(1)"eligible resale property"

"eligible resale property" means real or immovable property (other than capital property) of an entity, in which a trust the investments in which are listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market holds a security,

(a) that is contiguous to a particular real or immovable property that is capital property of the entity or of another entity in which the trust holds a security; and

(b) the holding of which is necessary, and incidental, to the holding of the particular real or immovable property.

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(9), will add the definition "eligible resale property" to subsec. 122.1(1), applicable to 2011 et seq., and to particular taxation years of a trust that end after 2006 and before 2011, if

(a) investments in the trust are, in one or more of those particular taxation years, listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market; and

(b) the trust elects, by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year that includes the day on which this draft legislation is assented to, to have all of the amendments to s. 122.1 made by the December 16, 2010 draft legislation apply.

Technical Notes: Section 122.1 sets out rules that apply in respect of the taxation of specified investment flow-through (SIFT) trusts and, in some cases, SIFT partnerships. "SIFT trust" is defined in subsection 122.1(1), and "SIFT partnership" is defined in section 197; both definitions are made by subsection 248(1) to apply for all purposes of the Act.

Subsection 122.1(1) sets out a number of definitions that apply for the purposes of the rules for SIFT trusts and, in some cases, SIFT partnerships. The definitions in subsection 122.1(1) apply for the purposes of sections 104 and 122, as well as for the purposes of section 122.1.

Subsection 122.1(1) is amended by adding several definitions and modifying a number of others.

These amendments apply to the 2011 and later taxation years, and also, on an elective basis, for earlier taxation years (i.e., the 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2010 taxation years). The following notes describe the new and amended definitions in alphabetical order.

"eligible resale property"

The new definition "eligible resale property" is added as part of a series of amendments intended to allow REITs to hold certain kinds of non-capital property in limited circumstances.

"Eligible resale property" of an entity is defined as real or immovable property held by the entity if

- the entity itself is one in which a publicly-traded trust (i.e., the trust seeking to qualify as a REIT) holds a security,

- the property is contiguous to a particular real or immovable property that is capital property of the entity or of an entity in which the trust holds an interest, and
- the holding of the property is necessary and incidental to the holding of the particular real or immovable property.

This amendment is intended to allow for the temporary holding by a REIT's subsidiary of non-capital property which is contiguous to the capital property described above, as well as necessary and incidental to the holding of that capital property.

Such property may include a portion of a commercial development of a REIT that is to be severed for the ownership and use of an anchor tenant, where the holding of such property is necessary and incidental to the holding of the commercial development.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-125, Dec. 16, 2010: See under 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a).

Related Provisions: 122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(b)(ii) — Revenue from managing eligible resale properties; 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(b)(vi) — Gains from dispositions of eligible resale properties.

"entity" means a corporation, trust or partnership.

"equity", of an entity, means

(a) if the entity is a corporation, a share of the capital stock of the corporation;

(b) if the entity is a trust, an income or capital interest in the trust;

(c) if the entity is a partnership, an interest as a member of the partnership;

(d) a liability of the entity (and, for purposes of the definition "publicly-traded liability" in this section, a security of the entity that is a liability of another entity) if

(i) the liability is convertible into, or exchangeable for, equity of the entity or of another entity, or

(ii) any amount paid or payable in respect of the liability is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property, or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, or to income or capital paid or payable to any member of a partnership or beneficiary under a trust; and

(e) a right to, or to acquire, anything described in this paragraph and any of paragraphs (a) to (d).

History: The definition "equity" added to subsec. 122.1(1) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(8), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

"equity value", of an entity at any time, means the total fair market value at that time of

(a) if the entity is a corporation, all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

(b) if the entity is a trust, all of the income or capital interests in the trust; or

(c) if the entity is a partnership, all of the interests in the partnership.

"excluded subsidiary entity", for a taxation year, means an entity none of the equity of which is at any time in the taxation year

(a) listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market; nor

(b) held by any person or partnership other than

(i) a real estate investment trust,

(ii) a taxable Canadian corporation,

(iii) a SIFT trust (determined without reference to subsection (2)),

(iv) a SIFT partnership (determined without reference to subsection 197(8)), or

(v) an excluded subsidiary entity for the taxation year.

Proposed Amendment — "excluded subsidiary entity"

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-058 and Backgrounder, July 20, 2011: See under 122.1(1)"SIFT trust", under subheading "Excluded subsidiary entity — qualifying investors".

Related Provisions: 122.1(1)"SIFT trust" — Excluded subsidiary entity is not a SIFT trust.

History: The definition "excluded subsidiary entity" added to subsec. 122.1(1) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(8), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

Proposed Addition — 122.1(1)"gross REIT revenue"

"gross REIT revenue", of an entity for a taxation year, means the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) an amount received in the taxation year or receivable in the taxation year (depending on the method regularly followed by the entity in computing the entity's income) by the entity otherwise than as or on account of capital; or

(b) a capital gain of the entity for the taxation year.

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(9), will add the definition "gross REIT revenue" to subsec. 122.1(1), applicable to 2011 et seq., and earlier if an election is made for all these amendments to apply earlier (see Application note to 122.1(1)"eligible resale property").

Technical Notes: The new definition "gross REIT revenue" applies for purposes of the definition "real estate investment trust". The new definition clarifies that the concept of revenue in the context of REITs is comprised of gross receipts and receivables as well as capital gains. Accordingly, proceeds of disposition that are not included in capital gains, such as recapture, are not intended to be included in gross REIT revenue.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-125, Dec. 16, 2010: See under 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a).

Related Provisions: 122.1(1.1), (1.2) — Look-through rule.

"investment", in a trust or partnership,

(a) means

(i) a property that is a security of the trust or partnership, or

(ii) a right which may reasonably be considered to replicate a return on, or the value of, a security of the trust or partnership; but

(b) does not include

(i) an unaffiliated publicly-traded liability of the trust or partnership, nor

(ii) regulated innovative capital.

History: The definition "investment" in subsec. 122.1(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(1), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006. It formerly read:

"investment", in a trust or partnership, means

(a) a property that is a security of the trust or partnership; or

(b) a right which may reasonably be considered to replicate a return on, or the value of, a security of the trust or partnership.

"non-portfolio earnings", of a SIFT trust for a taxation year, means the total of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the SIFT trust's income for the taxation year from a business carried on by it in Canada or from a non-portfolio property, other than income that is a taxable dividend received by the SIFT trust,

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the SIFT trust's loss for the taxation year from a business carried on by it in Canada or from a non-portfolio property, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of

(A) all taxable capital gains of the SIFT trust from dispositions of non-portfolio properties during the taxation year, and

(B) one-half of the total of all amounts each of which is deemed under subsection 131(1) to be a capital gain of the SIFT trust for the taxation year in respect of a non-portfolio property of the SIFT trust for the taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the total of the allowable capital losses of the SIFT trust for the taxation year from dispositions of non-portfolio properties during the taxation year.

Related Provisions: 197(1)"non-portfolio earnings" — Parallel definition for SIFT partnerships; 197(3) — Ignore 96(1.11) when applying definition to partnerships.

(ii) securities of the subject entity that, together with all of the securities that the trust or partnership holds of entities affiliated with the subject entity, have a total fair market value that is greater than 50% of the equity value of the trust or partnership;

(b) a Canadian real, immovable or resource property, if at any time in the taxation year the total fair market value of all properties held by the trust or partnership that are Canadian real, immovable or resource properties is greater than 50% of the equity value of the trust or partnership; or

(c) a property that the trust or partnership, or a person or partnership with whom the trust or partnership does not deal at arm's length, uses at that time in the course of carrying on a business in Canada.

"qualified REIT property" of a trust means a property, held by the trust, that is

(a) a real or immovable property;

(b) a security of a subject entity, if the entity derives all or substantially all of its revenues from maintaining, improving, leasing or managing real or immovable properties that are capital properties of the trust or of an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest, including real or immovable properties that the trust, or an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest, holds together with one or more other persons or partnerships;

(a) real or immovable property that is capital property of the trust;

(i) capital properties of the trust or of an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest, including real or immovable properties that the trust, or an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest, holds together with one or more other persons or partnerships, or

(ii) eligible resale properties of an entity (other than the trust) described in subparagraph (i);

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(1), will amend the portion of the definition "qualified REIT property" in subsec. 122.1(1) before para. (c) to read as above, applicable to 2011 et seq., and earlier if an election is made for all these amendments to apply earlier (see Application note to 122.1(1)"eligible resale property").

Technical Notes: The definition "qualified REIT property" applies in determining whether a trust is a REIT for purposes of the SIFT rules. In order to qualify as a REIT, a trust cannot hold any non-portfolio property other than qualified REIT property.

The existing definition "qualified REIT property" describes four types of property. The second type of qualified REIT property, described in paragraph (b) of the definition "qualified REIT property", consists of securities of a subject entity that derives all or substantially all of its revenues from maintaining, improving, leasing or managing real or immovable properties that are capital properties of the trust or of an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest.

The description of this type of qualified REIT property is amended to extend qualified REIT property status to shares of a subject entity that derives all or substantially all of its revenues from maintaining, improving, leasing or managing real or immovable property that is either capital property, or eligible resale property, of the trust or of an entity of which the trust holds a share or an interest. Paragraph (a) of "qualified REIT property" is consequently amended to apply only in respect of real or immovable property that is capital property of the trust.

These amendments are intended to allow for the occasional holding by a REIT or its subsidiary of non-capital property which is contiguous to the capital property described above, as well as necessary and incidental to the holding of that capital property. For more detail, see the commentary on the new definition "eligible resale property".

The fourth type of qualified REIT property is property that is ancillary to the earning by the trust of rent from real or immovable properties and capital gains from dispositions of real or immovable properties. For example, a REIT can hold office furniture and computers that are ancillary to its operations. The description of this type of qualified REIT property is amended to clarify that only tangible personal property can qualify as ancillary in this regard.

Further to the above amendment, as part of the harmonization of federal legislation, the Government has undertaken to review all its legislation where provincial law concepts are found in order to reflect appropriately the common law and the civil law, in both official languages. As a result, the French version of the legislation is amended to add the term "bien personnel tangible" in order to reflect the common law, and the English version of the legislation is amended to add the term "corporeal moveable property" in order to reflect the civil law.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-125, Dec. 16, 2010: See under 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a).

(c) a security of a subject entity, if the entity holds no property other than

(i) legal title to real or immovable property of the trust or of another subject entity all of the securities of which are held by the trust (including real or immovable property that the trust or the other subject entity holds together with one or more other persons or partnerships), and

(ii) property described in paragraph (d); or

(d) ancillary to the earning by the trust of the amounts described in subparagraphs (b)(i) and (iii) of the definition "real estate investment trust".

Proposed Amendment — 122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(d)

(d) tangible personal property, or for civil law corporeal moveable property, ancillary to the earning by the trust of the amounts described in subparagraphs (b)(i) and (iii) of the definition "real estate investment trust".

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(2), will amend para. (d) of the definition "qualified REIT property" in subsec. 122.1(1) to read as above, applicable to 2011 et seq., and earlier if an election is made for all these amendments to apply earlier (see Application note to 122.1(1)"eligible resale property").

Technical Notes: See under 122.1(1)"qualified REIT property" before (c).

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-125, Dec. 16, 2010: See under 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a).

History: Para. (a) of the definition "qualified REIT property" in subsec. 122.1(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(3) to substitute "property" for "property situated in Canada", deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

Subpara. (c)(i) of "qualified REIT property" in subsec. 122.1(1) amended by the said c. 2, subsec. 36(4), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006. The subpara. formerly read:

(i) legal title to real or immovable property of the trust (including real or immovable property that the trust holds together with one or more other persons or partnerships), and

"real estate investment trust", for a taxation year, means a trust that is resident in Canada throughout the taxation year, if

(a) the trust at no time in the taxation year holds any non-portfolio property other than qualified REIT properties;

Proposed Amendment — 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a)

(a) at each time in the taxation year the total fair market value at that time of all non-portfolio properties that are qualified REIT properties held by the trust is at least 90% of the total fair market value at that time of all non-portfolio properties held by the trust;

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(3), will amend para. (a) of the definition "real estate investment trust" in subsec. 122.1(1) to read as above, applicable to 2011 et seq., and earlier if an election is made for all these amendments to apply earlier (see Application note to 122.1(1)"eligible resale property").

Technical Notes: A trust is a "real estate investment trust" (REIT) for a taxation year if it is resident in Canada throughout the year and meets a number of other conditions, including under paragraph (a) of that definition, the requirement that the trust at no time in the taxation year holds any non-portfolio property other than qualified REIT properties. This condition is amended so that only 90% of the REIT's non-portfolio properties must be, at all times in a taxation year, qualified REIT properties.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-125, Dec. 16, 2010: Government of Canada Announces Amendments to the Real Estate Investment Trust Rules

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today announced proposed amendments to the provisions in the Income Tax Act concerning the income tax treatment of real estate investment trusts ("REITs").

REITs are trusts that are exempt from the tax on specified investment flow-through entities. To qualify as a REIT, a trust must meet certain conditions that recognize the unique history and role of collective real estate investment vehicles.

"Our Government is committed to providing clarity in the application of the REIT rules," said Minister Flaherty. "These changes take into account constructive comments received from the public, helping to ensure that the REIT rules apply appropriately."

Proposed changes to the income tax rules will:

- allow REIT subsidiaries to hold certain non-capital property in respect of their real estate investment activities [122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(b)(ii) — ed.];
- allow REITs to hold up to 10% of their non-portfolio property as non-qualifying REIT property without losing REIT status [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a) — ed.] (with an associated clarification of the circumstances under which property can be considered to be ancillary REIT property [122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(d) — ed.]);
- allow REITs to derive up to 10% of their revenues from sources that are not qualifying sources (currently, a REIT must derive 95% of its revenues from qualifying sources) [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(b) — ed.];
- clarify that a trust's revenue for purposes of the two revenue tests in the definition "real estate investment trust" is to be computed on a gross, rather than net, basis and that it will include capital gains [122.1(1)"gross REIT revenue" and 122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(b), (c) — ed.];
- allow REITs to earn, as qualifying REIT revenue, gains realized by virtue of foreign currency fluctuations in respect of revenues derived from foreign real or immovable property including certain financing and hedging arrangements in respect of such property [122.1(1.3) — ed.];
- ensure that amounts distributed to a REIT, by an entity in which the REIT has a significant interest, will retain their character for purposes of the revenue tests [122.1(1.1), (1.2) — ed.]; and
- allow an entity to hold investments in a REIT without those investments being treated as Canadian real, immovable or resource property in determining whether the entity itself is a SIFT [248(1)"Canadian real, immovable or resource property"(d) — ed.].

Today's release includes for consultation draft legislative proposals to implement the changes described in the backgrounder. Interested parties are invited to provide comments on these proposals by January 31, 2011.

Backgrounder: Amendments to the Real Estate Investment Trust Rules

Real estate investment trusts ("REITs") are publicly-traded trusts holding non-portfolio property that are exempt from the tax on distributions from a specified investment flow-through ("SIFT"). The proposals announced today contemplate amendments to the rules for qualification as a REIT. The proposals will be effective for the 2011 and subsequent taxation years and also on an elective basis for earlier taxation years. Below are brief explanations of several key elements of the proposed amendments.

Use of Property Held for Resale in Incidental Business Activities

A REIT that acquires property and arranges for its development to hold as a commercial rental property may often resell a portion of that property to another party, such as a desired anchor tenant. A REIT may also acquire property for resale in the condominium and foreclosure contexts.

Today's proposals would allow REIT subsidiaries to hold, and generate the revenues associated with, certain real estate held for resale that is necessary and incidental to the REIT holding capital property that is qualified REIT property. [122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(b)(ii), 122.1(1)"eligible resale property" — ed.]

Qualified REIT Property

The proposals will permit REITs to hold up to 10% of their property in the form of non-portfolio property that is not qualified REIT property [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(a) — ed.]. Consequential to this relieving change, the existing provision for ancillary qualified REIT property is clarified to better describe the type of properties that can be considered ancillary. In particular, only tangible personal property, or for civil law purposes corporeal moveable property, (and, therefore, excluding securities such as equity and debt) can qualify as ancillary for this purpose [122.1(1)"qualified REIT property"(d) — ed.].

Gross REIT Revenue

In order to qualify as a REIT, a trust must meet two tests designed to determine the nature of its revenue. The REIT rules provide that at least 95% of a REIT's revenues must be derived from passive sources generally [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(b) — ed], and that, in particular, at least 75% of a REIT's revenues must be sourced from certain passive real estate sources [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(c) — ed].

The rule providing that at least 95% of a REIT's revenues be derived from certain passive sources is proposed to be modified to require that only 90% of the REIT's revenues be derived from qualifying sources [122.1(1)"real estate investment trust"(b) — ed].

Today's proposals will also clarify that, for both revenue tests, revenue is to be defined as gross revenue, and will include capital gains [122.1(1)"gross REIT revenue" — ed.].

Foreign Currency Gains

When REITs hold foreign real or immovable property, they may finance the acquisition of such property using debt denominated in a foreign currency. Also, given the potential foreign currency risk in holding foreign assets, REITs may choose to enter arrangements that hedge that risk.

Today's proposals will permit REITs to earn, as qualifying revenue, gains realized by virtue of foreign currency fluctuations in respect of revenues derived from such foreign real or immovable property including certain financing and hedging arrangements in respect of such property [122.1(1.3) — ed.].

Source Character of Revenue from a Subsidiary Trust

The proposals will ensure that, for purposes of the two revenue tests referred to above (the 95% and the 75% test), amounts paid by certain subsidiaries of a REIT to the REIT will have the same character as that revenue had when it was received or earned by those subsidiaries [122.1(1.1), (1.2) — ed.].

Canadian Real, Immovable or Resource Property

The proposals will ensure that an entity may hold investments in a REIT or transitional SIFT without those investments being treated as Canadian real, immovable or resource property in determining whether the entity itself is a SIFT [248(1)"Canadian real, immovable or resource property"(d) — ed.]. For this purpose, a transitional SIFT means a trust or partnership that would, but for the deferred application of the rules for entities that existed on October 31, 2006, be a SIFT trust or SIFT partnership.

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(8), will repeal subpara. Technical Notes: "Rent from real or immovable properties" is currently defined to include a payment out of the current income of a trust, but only to the extent that the payment is included in the recipient trust's income and is paid from the part of the payer trust's income that was derived from rent from real or immovable properties.

(b) investments in the trust are listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market; and

(c) the trust holds one or more non-portfolio properties.

Proposed Amendment — SIFT rules

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-058, July 20, 2011: Government of Canada Announces Amendments to the Taxation of Specified Investment Flow-Through Entities, Real Estate Investment Trusts and Publicly-Traded Corporations

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today announced proposed amendments to the provisions in the Income Tax Act concerning the income tax treatment of specified investment flow-through entities (SIFTs), real estate investment trusts (REITs) and publicly-traded corporations.

The SIFT rules, first announced as part of the Government's Tax Fairness Plan on October 31, 2006, have restored balance and fairness to the income tax system by leveling the playing field between publicly-traded trusts and partnerships and public corporations. Today's announcement reinforces the Government's commitment to fairness in the tax system.

"These proposed measures will ensure that the policy objectives of the Tax Fairness Plan continue to be met," said Minister Flaherty. "They also reflect our Government's ongoing commitment to address structures that frustrate those policy objectives."

The proposed amendments also include adjustments to the SIFT rules that are of a more technical nature.

The proposals include changes in respect of:

- publicly-traded stapled securities of SIFTs, REITs and corporations;
- excluded subsidiary entities under the SIFT regime;
- non-portfolio property of a corporation under the SIFT regime; and
- tax instalments for SIFTs.

The attached backgrounder describes the proposed amendments in detail. The Government will introduce income tax legislation to give effect to today's announced proposals at the earliest opportunity.

Backgrounder: Amendments to the Taxation of Specified Investment Flow-Through Entities, Real Estate Investment Trusts and Publicly-Traded Corporations

The Government's 2006 Tax Fairness Plan restored balance and fairness to the federal tax system by creating a level playing field between income trusts and corporations. The Plan's detailed rules, which were enacted in 2007 and became fully effective this year, treat "specified investment flow-through" entities (SIFTs) in much the same manner as public corporations. At the time that the Tax Fairness Plan was announced, the Government indicated that, if there should emerge structures or transactions that are clearly devised to frustrate those policy objectives, any aspect of those measures may be changed accordingly and with immediate effect.

Today's announcement reinforces the Government's commitment to the policy objectives of the Tax Fairness Plan. Recent transactions involving publicly-traded stapled securities have raised concerns about the use of these types of structures in a manner that frustrates those policy objectives. The proposals announced today therefore include measures to limit the deductibility of certain amounts payable in respect of publicly-traded stapled securities.

The Government will continue to monitor Canadian tax planning for structures and transactions that might frustrate the policy objectives of the Tax Fairness Plan and will, as necessary, take appropriate corrective action.

Today's announcement also adds a number of proposed amendments specific to the SIFT rules in response to issues that have been brought to the Government's attention by taxpayers and their advisors.

References in this document to today should be read as today's date.

Below are brief explanations of the proposed amendments announced today.

Stapled Securities

Some SIFTs, including real estate investment trusts (REITs), and corporations have introduced publicly-traded stapled securities into their capital structures. These securities have features that can provide tax advantages similar to those associated with earlier income trust structures.

What are stapled securities?

In general terms, a stapled security involves two separate securities that are "stapled" together such that the securities are not freely transferable independently of each other.[34] The proposed amendments announced today would apply to the stapled securities of an entity that is a trust, corporation or partnership, if one or more of the stapled securities is listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market and any of the following applies:

- the stapled securities are both issued by the entity,
- one of the stapled securities is issued by the entity, and the other by a subsidiary of the entity,[35] or
- one of the stapled securities is issued by a REIT or the subsidiary of a REIT.

What income tax amendments are proposed with respect to stapled securities?

In some structures involving stapled securities, a corporation or SIFT (alone or together with a subsidiary) might issue equity and debt instruments–at least one of which is publicly-traded — that are stapled together. The income tax provisions are proposed to be amended to provide that, notwithstanding the general rules applicable to the deductibility of interest, interest that is paid or payable on the debt portion of such a stapled security will not be deductible in computing the income of the payer for income tax purposes. Accordingly, stapling arrangements that involve only shares issued by publicly-traded corporations, the distributions on which are treated as dividends for tax purposes, are not intended to be affected by the amendment.

In other structures, a REIT (or a subsidiary of a REIT) might issue a security to its investors in circumstances in which the security similarly can be transferred only together with an interest in another entity, such as a trust or a corporation. Typically, the other entity, directly or through its subsidiaries, carries on a business or holds property that the REIT could not carry on or hold directly without losing its status as a REIT. The income tax provisions are proposed to be amended to provide that, notwithstanding the general rules applicable to the deductibility of amounts, any amount (including, but not limited to rent) that is paid or payable by the other entity (or its subsidiaries) to the REIT (or its subsidiaries, and including "back-to-back" intermediary arrangements) will not be deductible in computing the income of the payer for income tax purposes.

[For an example of a REIT targeted by this measure, see the discussion of InnVest in the Notes to 122.1(1)"rent from real or immovable properties" above — ed.]

What is the proposed effective date of the proposals for stapled securities?

The proposals announced today would apply to an entity in respect of an amount that is paid or becomes payable on or after today, unless the amount is paid or becomes payable during, and is in respect of, the entity's transition period.

An entity would have a transition period only if stapled securities of the entity were issued and outstanding on the day immediately before today. If those stapled securities include securities that were also issued and outstanding and stapled securities of the entity on October 31, 2006, the entity's transition period would be the period that starts today and ends on January 1, 2016. Otherwise, the entity's transition period would be the period that starts today and ends on the day that is one year after today. Notwithstanding these general rules, an entity's transition period would end on the earliest day after today on which either a security of the entity becomes a stapled security of the entity[36] or a stapled security of the entity is materially altered.

If the subsidiary of an entity does not itself otherwise have a transition period, the subsidiary's transition period would be that of its parent entity, except that the subsidiary's transition period would end on the earliest day after today on which either a security of the subsidiary becomes a stapled security of the subsidiary, or the subsidiary ceases to be a subsidiary of the parent entity.

Excluded Subsidiary Entity–Qualifying Investors

The SIFT tax applies to publicly-traded trusts and partnerships. Special rules can apply in certain circumstances to treat an otherwise privately-held trust or partnership as a SIFT, unless the trust or partnership is an "excluded subsidiary entity".

To qualify as an excluded subsidiary entity for a taxation year, an entity must meet two conditions at all times during the taxation year. The first is that the entity's equity (including equity-like debt) not be listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market at any time in the taxation year. The second is that its equity not be held at any time in the taxation year by any person or partnership other than certain qualifying interest holders. Currently, only REITs, taxable Canadian corporations, SIFTs and other excluded subsidiary entities are qualifying interest holders for this purpose.

The definition "excluded subsidiary entity" is proposed to be amended to expand the range of qualifying interest holders in such an entity. The expanded list would include a person or partnership that does not have any security or right, in the entity, that is, or includes a right to acquire, directly or indirectly either

- any security of any entity that is listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market, or
- any property the amount, or fair market value, of which is determined primarily by reference to any security that is listed or traded on a stock exchange or other public market.

This proposed amendment would be deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006. However, an entity that would, only because of this proposed amendment, be an excluded subsidiary entity for a taxation year that begins on or before today, would be able to elect to have this change apply to it only for taxation years that begin after today.

Non-Portfolio Property of a Corporation

A SIFT is a publicly-traded trust or partnership that holds "non-portfolio property". Non-portfolio property includes a holding in another entity that exceeds certain concentration limits (for example, where the property held represents more than 10% of the equity value of the underlying entity). The concentration limit rule does not apply, however, where the underlying entity is a "portfolio investment entity", being an entity that itself does not hold any non-portfolio property.

Today's announcement also proposes a measure that would clarify — consistent with the Canada Revenue Agency's current application of the SIFT regime — that non-portfolio property of a corporation has the same meaning as it does in respect of property of a trust or partnership. This change would also provide greater certainty as to which corporations qualify as portfolio investment entities. This proposed amendment would apply to taxation years that end after today.

Tax Instalments

The income tax rules contain an instalment system that imposes a requirement on affected taxpayers to pay a portion of their estimated tax liability for a taxation year in instalments over the course of the year.

SIFTs are currently subject to the instalment rules that apply to individuals. These rules require, when they apply, that instalment payments be made on a quarterly basis. Public corporations, on the other hand, are required to estimate tax instalments, and to pay the instalments on a monthly basis.

Today's announcement proposes that the instalment regime be modified so that SIFTs are subject to the same monthly instalment rules that apply to public corporations. This proposed amendment would apply to taxation years that begin after today.

Related Provisions: 85.1(8), 88.1(2), 107(3.1) — Mechanisms for conversion of SIFT trust to corporation; 104(6)(b)(iv) — Amount distributed not deductible to SIFT trust; 104(16) — Trust distribution deemed received as dividend; 122.1(2) — Application of definition from 2006-2010; 197(1)"SIFT partnership" — Parallel definition for partnership; 248(1)"SIFT trust" — Definition applies to entire Act; Reg. 2608 — Determining province of residence of SIFT trust.

History: The opening words of the definition "SIFT trust" in subsec. 122.1(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(7), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006. They formerly read:

> "SIFT trust", being a specified investment flow-through trust, for a taxation year means a trust (other than a trust that is a real estate investment trust for the taxation year) that meets the following conditions at any time during the taxation year:

"security" of a particular entity means any right, whether absolute or contingent, conferred by the particular entity or by an entity that is affiliated with the particular entity, to receive, either immediately or in the future, an amount that can reasonably be regarded as all or any part of the capital, of the revenue or of the income of the particular entity, or as interest paid or payable by the particular entity, and for greater certainty includes

(a) a liability of the particular entity;

(b) if the particular entity is a corporation,

(i) a share of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(ii) a right to control in any manner whatever the voting rights of a share of the capital stock of the corporation;

(c) if the particular entity is a trust, an income or a capital interest in the trust;

[34] In some cases, the securities may be "unstapled" at the option of the investor or the issuer. Under these proposals, the unstapling of securities under such a feature would be ignored at a given time in determining whether a security is a stapled security at that time, unless the unstapling is permanent and irrevocable.

[35] Under these proposals, a subsidiary of a particular entity would mean (a) an entity in which the particular entity holds equity that has a total fair market value that is greater than 10% of the equity value of the entity, and (b) an entity that is a subsidiary of an entity that is a subsidiary of the particular entity.

[36] For this purpose, a security of an entity would not be considered to have become after today a stapled security of the entity if either (a) it was issued as part of a transaction the parties to which are obligated to complete under the terms of an agreement in writing between the parties entered into before today, and may not be excused from completing as a result of amendments to the Income Tax Act, or (b) the issuance of the security is in satisfaction of a right to enforce payment against the entity of an amount that became payable by the entity before today on a stapled security of the entity if that issuance was made under a term or condition, in effect today, of the stapled security.

(d) if the particular entity is a partnership, an interest as a member of the partnership; and

(e) a right to, or to acquire, anything described in this paragraph and any of paragraphs (a) to (d).

"subject entity" means a person or partnership that is

(a) a corporation resident in Canada;

(b) a trust resident in Canada;

(c) a Canadian resident partnership; or

(d) a non-resident person, or a partnership that is not described in paragraph (c), the principal source of income of which is one or any combination of sources in Canada.

"unaffiliated publicly-traded liability", of an entity at any time means a publicly-traded liability of the entity if, at that time the total fair market value of all publicly-traded liabilities of the entity that are held at that time by persons or partnerships that are not affiliated with the entity is at least 90% of the total fair market value of all publicly-traded liabilities of the entity.

History: The definition "unaffiliated publicly-traded liability" added to subsec. 122.1(1) by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 36(8), deemed to have come into force on October 31, 2006.

(1.1) Application of subsec. (1.2) — For the purposes of the definition "real estate investment trust" in subsection (1), subsection (1.2) applies to an entity (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.2) as the "parent entity") for a taxation year, if

(a) the parent entity holds, in the taxation year, a non-portfolio property that is a security of another entity (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.2) as the "subsidiary entity"); and

(b) an amount (referred to in subsection (1.2) as the "specified amount") that has become payable by the subsidiary entity in respect of the security is included in computing the parent entity's gross REIT revenue for the taxation year.

(1.2) Sources of revenue — look through rule — If this subsection applies to a parent entity for a taxation year because a specified amount has become payable by a subsidiary entity, to the extent that the specified amount can reasonably be considered to have become payable out of the subsidiary entity's gross REIT revenue from a particular source, it is deemed to be gross REIT revenue of the parent entity for the taxation year from the particular source and not from any other source.

Technical Notes: New subsections 122.1(1.1) and (1.2) set out a rule clarifying the application of paragraphs (b) and (c) of the definition REIT in subsection 122.1(1). These two new subsections provide that where a trust has an interest in another trust, and that interest is non-portfolio property of the first trust, then the revenues flowed through the subsidiary trust maintain their source characterization in determining the source of revenues of the second trust. This rule is intended to clarify the application of the portions of the above definition that concern the trust's revenues.

These amendments apply to the 2011 and later taxation years, and also, on an elective basis, for earlier taxation years (i.e., the 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2010 taxation years).

Related Provisions: 122.1(1.1) — Conditions for 122.1(1.2) to apply.

(1.3) Currency fluctuations — foreign property — For the purposes of the definition "real estate investment trust" in subsection (1), in determining whether an amount included in gross REIT revenue of a trust for a taxation year is from a particular source that is in respect of real or immovable property situated in a country other than Canada, each of the following amounts is deemed to be from the particular source and not from any other source:

(a) an amount that is included in gross REIT revenue of the trust for the taxation year and that is a gain from fluctuations in the value of the currency of that country relative to Canadian currency, in respect of

(i) the particular source, or

(ii) debt incurred by the trust for the purpose of earning revenue from the particular source; and

(b) an amount that is included in gross REIT revenue of the trust for the taxation year and that results from an agreement that

(i) provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

(ii) can reasonably be considered to have been made by the trust to reduce its risk in fluctuations in the value of the currency of that country relative to Canadian currency.

Technical Notes: New subsection 122.1(1.3) applies for purposes of the definitions "real estate investment trust" and "qualified REIT property". This subsection is intended to allow a REIT to treat, as qualifying REIT revenue, foreign currency gains included in the REIT's gross revenue and realized in respect of

- qualifying sources of REIT revenue (such as rental revenue from real or immovable property situated in the United States); and
- debt incurred for the purpose of earning revenue from a qualifying source of REIT revenue (such as Euro-denominated debt incurred by the REIT to acquire real or immovable property in Germany from which the REIT earns rental revenue).

This subsection is also intended to allow a REIT to treat, as qualifying REIT revenue, amounts included in the REIT's gross revenue and received under, or as a result of, an arrangement that hedges risk stemming from fluctuations in foreign currency of a country in which the REIT holds real or immovable property.

This amendment applies to the 2011 and later taxation years, and also, on an elective basis, for earlier taxation years (i.e., the 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2010 taxation years).

Application: The December 16, 2010 draft legislation (REITs), subsec. 1(10), will add subsecs. 122.1(1.1) to (1.3), applicable to 2011 et seq., and earlier if an election is made for all these amendments to apply earlier (see Application note to 122.1(1)"eligible resale property").

Proposed Amendment — Normal growth guidelines

Letter from Dept. of Finance, August 8, 2008:

Mr. David Pauli, Executive Vice-President and Chief Operating Officer, CI Financial Income Fund, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Pauli:

I am writing following recent discussions between representatives of CI Financial Income Fund (CI) and officials of this Department regarding the normal growth rules for Specified Investment Flow Through entities (SIFTs).

I understand that CI holds as limited partner a substantial, but less than majority, interest in a Canadian partnership (LP), which in turn holds the principal business operations of what may be described as the CI group. All or substantially all of the other limited partners, whose combined interests represent a majority of the overall equity in the partnership, are either Canadian resident individuals or taxable Canadian corporations. Those other limited partners' investments in LP are convertible into CI trust units, but none of the equity investments in LP are themselves publicly traded.

This structure, which is a familiar one to us in the SIFT context, can be characterized as a "public" entity holding an interest in a "private" entity, using those terms more in a general sense than in a technical one.

I also understand that CI is a SIFT (for convenience, I use the term "SIFT" to include those trusts and partnerships that would be SIFTs but for the transitional relief provided under the SIFT rules) that existed on October 31, 2006, and therefore can qualify for transitional relief that will suspend, until no later than 2010, its taxation as a SIFT so long as it stays within certain "normal growth guidelines". Under the SIFT taxation rules, including as they would be amended by draft legislation announced by the Minister of Finance on July 14, 2008, there is a possibility that LP is also a SIFT, in which case we expect that it also would qualify for the benefits of transitional relief. If this is so, and if none of LP's units were publicly traded on October 31, 2006, then the transitional rules would preserve LP from SIFT taxation until 2011 only if it remained within the $50 million annual growth room provided under the guidelines. This is because LP would in these circumstances not have an October 31, 2006 market capitalization amount from which to measure growth under the alternative, more generous, growth measurement mechanism.

We understand that CI is interested in making an acquisition and that the related transactions would involve the issuance to some of the vendors of new equity in the form of LP units. Since it is expected that significantly more than $50 million in LP units would be issued, you are concerned that such a transaction would cause LP to lose its transitional status. As well, because the new LP units would be convertible into CI trust units, the issuance of the LP units would also count as the issuance of new equity of CI for purposes of determining CI's growth limits. Although the new LP units could be described as having different equity characteristics pertaining to LP from their characteristics as regards CI, CI's representatives have argued that what is in economic terms only a single increase in the equity of the CI-LP "group" would be counted twice. As a result, CI is now seeking a change to the SIFT taxation rules.

I can confirm — and indeed it has always been intended — that entities in which SIFTs have ownership interests may themselves be SIFTs in the appropriate circumstances. However, I recognize that in certain situations this Department's intention in the normal growth guidelines can be maintained without having both what I have termed a public SIFT and the private SIFT beneath it include the same equity units in measuring their respective growth amounts. I am prepared, therefore, to recommend that the normal growth guidelines be modified accordingly.

If modified, the guidelines would not require, in circumstances where new equity of a private SIFT is either convertible into equity of the associated public SIFT, or can reasonably be considered to have been funded with an issuance of new equity by the public SIFT, that new equity to be counted against the private SIFT's growth room. Under such a change, CI, by way of example, would treat the equity issued by LP in the same manner as if CI itself had issued it. For its part, LP would not have to recognize the equity at all for purposes of the guidelines.

I trust that this proposed modification of the guidelines responds to the concerns you have raised in this regard. For completeness, and mindful of the importance of the normal growth guidelines to a large number of SIFTs, I would nonetheless like to add a few further points of explanation.

First, we consider this "single counting" principle to be relevant only where the private SIFT is truly private — that is, where none of its own equity is publicly traded and it is thus a SIFT only indirectly. If instead one publicly-traded SIFT uses the proceeds of a new equity issuance to invest in new equity of another publicly-traded SIFT, both of those public SIFTs have indeed grown, and both can properly be required to count the growth.

Second, this recommendation is for a modification of the transitional normal growth guidelines only. It has no significance for any entity that was not a SIFT on October 31, 2006 (except those that may be formed on the merger or reorganization of trusts or partnerships that are themselves entitled to the SIFT rules' transitional relief). In addition, while we do not propose to require a public SIFT to have any particular level of ownership in a private SIFT in order for the latter to benefit from this change, the intended beneficiaries are structures that were already in place on October 31, 2006.

Finally, although we recognize that a private SIFT may issue new equity that is neither convertible into nor funded by the equity of a public SIFT, we would not propose that such equity be counted against the growth room of the public SIFT. Rather it should count against the $50 million annual room of the private SIFT itself. We realize that this allows the group as a whole access not only to the growth room of the public SIFT but also to that of the private SIFT, giving a more favourable result than would a strict application of the "single-counting" principle. However, as rules of general application, it would not be appropriate to seek to tailor the guidelines to every situation. To deal comprehensively with all such cases would require a disproportionate level of detail and insert an unjustifiable layer of complexity to the rules.

Having recorded these additional observations, I should perhaps add that none of them affects the central point of this letter in relation to CI's situation as I understand it. That is, what you have identified as the "double counting" issue should be resolved by the change I have described.

I trust that this statement of our position is helpful to you. Thank you for bringing your concerns to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Technical Notes: Subsection 122.1(2) limits the application of the definition "SIFT trust" in subsection (1) for the 2007 to 2010 taxation years. Where a trust (in this commentary referred to as a "transitional SIFT") would, under the text of that definition, be a SIFT trust on October 31, 2006, subsection 122.1(2) provides that the SIFT trust definition will not apply until the earlier of the trust's 2011 taxation year or the taxation year in which the trust exceeds its normal growth (as determined by guidelines issued by the Department of Finance on December 15, 2006), unless that excess arose as a result of a prescribed transaction.

For this purpose, the normal growth guidelines set the maximum growth from November 2006 to December 2010 as the greater of $50 million and a safe harbour amount. That safe harbour amount is measured with respect to the transitional SIFT's market capitalization on October 31, 2006 and is staged as follows: 40% for Nov 2006–Dec 2007; 20% for 2008; 20% for 2009; and 20% for 2010. These percentages are cumulative (the $50 million "de minimis" amount is not), meaning that a transitional SIFT will be able to issue, as of January 2010, new equity of up to 100% of its October 31, 2006 market capitalization.

This note is included to serve as notification that the Department's normal growth guidelines are revised, effective December 4, 2008.

The first revision applies to certain situations involving a transitional SIFT, units of which are publicly traded, that holds securities in another transitional SIFT (whether a trust or partnership and referred to in this commentary as the "second transitional SIFT") the units of which are not publicly traded. If the transitional SIFT's securities in the second transitional SIFT are non-portfolio property of the transitional SIFT (determined for purposes of this revision to the guidelines as through the definition "non-portfolio property" in subsection 122.1(1) were read without reference to its paragraphs (b) and (c) and as though a reference to "10%" in its paragraph (a) were a reference to "25%"), then new equity issued by the second transitional SIFT will count towards the growth of the transitional SIFT and not the second transitional SIFT, provided either or both of two conditions are met. Those conditions are:

- that the new equity is convertible into the equity of the transitional SIFT; and
- that the new equity can reasonably be regarded to be funded by the issuance of new equity in the transitional SIFT.

This revision of the normal growth guidelines is intended to prevent, in the particular circumstances described, an inappropriate duplication of growth as between the transitional SIFT and the second transitional SIFT where there is a sufficient level of non-arm's length relations between the two entities.

The normal growth guidelines are also being revised to accelerate the safe harbour amount for each of 2009 and 2010 so that it is available on and after December 4, 2008. This change does not change the maximum available growth of a transitional SIFT, but allows it to use remaining growth room in a single year, rather than staging it (i.e., at 20% per year) over the 2009 and 2010 years. As a result, for the period from December 4, 2008 to the end of 2010, a grandfathered SIFT's safe harbour will be a maximum of 60% of its market capitalization on October 31, 2006. For example, a SIFT that had issued in 2008 before December 4, 2008 new equity amounting to 15% of its market capitalization on October 31, 2006, would have a remaining safe harbour for the period from December 4, 2008 to the end of 2010 of 45% (i.e., 60% - 15%) of that October 31, 2006 market capitalization.

It should be noted that the annual safe harbour amounts remains cumulative. Thus for example a transitional SIFT that had issued no new equity in the period between October 31, 2006 and December 4, 2008 would, as of December 4, 2008, be able to issue new equity up to 100% of its October 31, 2006 market capitalization without exceeding its normal growth.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (41)(c), will add subsecs. 122.3(1.01) and (1.02), applicable to 2013 et seq.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Overseas Employment Tax Credit

Employees who are residents of Canada and who qualify for the Overseas Employment Tax Credit (OETC) are entitled to a tax credit equal to the federal income tax otherwise payable (calculated using the employee's average tax rate) on 80% of their qualifying foreign employment income, up to a maximum foreign employment income of $100,000 [122.3(1)(c), (d) — ed.]. The OETC is deductible in determining the employee's tax payable.

Generally, the OETC is available where:

- the employee is employed outside Canada for a period of more than six consecutive months by a person resident in Canada (or a foreign affiliate of such a person); and
- the employee's foreign employment income is derived from employment in connection with the exploration for or exploitation of certain natural resources, activities performed under a contract with the United Nations, or construction, installation, engineering or agricultural activities.

The OETC was originally introduced in Budget 1979 (as a deduction in computing income) as a targeted measure to maintain the competitiveness of Canadian firms in certain sectors in bidding for overseas contracts. At the time, the tax legislation of many of Canada's foreign competitors provided some degree of similar tax relief. The environment in which the OETC operates has changed significantly since then. In particular, the Government has implemented substantial, broad-based tax reductions that support investment and growth in all sectors of the economy and most of Canada's foreign competitors (for example, the United States, United Kingdom and France) do not have analogous tax preferences. In addition, recent court decisions have expanded the application of the OETC beyond its original intent [see Notes to 122.3(1) — ed.]

Budget 2012 proposes to phase out the OETC over four taxation years, beginning with the 2013 taxation year. During the phase-out period, the factor (currently 80%) applied to an employee's qualifying foreign employment income in determining the employee's OETC will be reduced to 60% for the 2013 taxation year, 40% for the 2014 taxation year and 20% for the 2015 taxation year. The OETC will be eliminated for the 2016 and subsequent taxation years.

These phase-out rules will not apply with respect to qualifying foreign employment income earned by an employee in connection with a project or activity to which the employee's employer had committed in writing before March 29, 2012. For example, if an employer has tendered an irrevocable bid in writing for a project before March 29, 2012, the employer will be considered to have committed in writing to the project irrespective of whether the bid has been accepted before March 29, 2012. In such instances, the factor applied to an employee's qualifying foreign employment income in determining the employee's OETC will remain at 80% for the 2013, 2014 and 2015 taxation years. The OETC will be eliminated for the 2016 and subsequent taxation years.

(1.1) Excluded income — No amount may be included under paragraph (1)(d) in respect of an individual's income for a taxation year from the individual's employment by an employer where

(a) the employer carries on a business of providing services and does not employ in the business throughout the year more than 5 full-time employees;

(b) the individual

(i) does not deal at arm's length with the employer, or is a specified shareholder of the employer, or

(ii) where the employer is a partnership, does not deal at arm's length with a member of the partnership, or is a specified shareholder of a member of the partnership; and

(c) but for the existence of the employer, the individual would reasonably be regarded as an employee of a person or partnership that is not a specified employer.

Proposed Amendment — 122.3(1.1)

(1.1) Excluded income — No amount may be included under paragraph (1)(d) in respect of an individual's income for a taxation year from the individual's employment by an employer

(a) if

(i) the employer carries on a business of providing services and does not employ in the business throughout the year more than five full-time employees,

(ii) the individual

(A) does not deal at arm's length with the employer, or is a specified shareholder of the employer, or

(B) where the employer is a partnership, does not deal at arm's length with a member of the partnership, or is a specified shareholder of a member of the partnership, and

(iii) but for the existence of the employer, the individual would reasonably be regarded as being an employee of a person or partnership that is not a specified employer; or

(b) if at any time in that portion of the qualifying period that is in the taxation year

(i) the employer provides the services of the individual to a corporation, partnership or trust with which the employer does not deal at arm's length, and

(ii) the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation or of all interests in the partnership or trust, as the case may be, that are held, directly or indirectly, by persons who are resident in Canada is less than 10% of the fair market value of all those shares or interests.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 76(2), will amend subsec. 122.3(1.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 122.3 provides an "overseas employment tax credit" to individuals resident in Canada who are employed for at least six consecutive months in a foreign country by a specified employer in respect of certain enumerated activities.

Subsection 122.3(1.1), which at present limits access to the tax credit in one set of circumstances, is amended so that the credit is also unavailable in another situation. New paragraph 122.3(1.1)(b) denies an individual the benefit of the credit if, at any time in the qualifying period, the services of the individual are provided to a firm with which the employer does not deal at arm's length, and less than 10% of the fair market value of all the interests in the firm are held directly or indirectly by persons resident in Canada.

Example:

Situation:

An individual is employed by a corporation that is a specified employer. The employer supplies the individual's services to a non-resident corporation, the shares of which are held as follows: 60% are held by a non-resident corporation that also controls the individual's corporate specified employer; 20% are held by a non-resident trust, all of the units of which are held by non-residents; and 20% are held by a second non-resident trust, half of the units of which are held by residents of Canada.

Result:

Since they are related, the specified employer does not deal at arm's length with the recipient of the services in this example. However, new paragraph 122.3(1.1)(b) would not apply in this instance because residents of Canada hold, indirectly through the second trust, 10% of the interests in the recipient corporation.

The set of circumstances currently described in paragraphs 122.3(1.1)(a), (b) and (c) is contained in amended paragraph 122.3(1.1)(a), and subsection 122.3(1) is amended to ensure that the term "qualifying period" applies to subsection 122.3(1.1), as well as to subsection 122.3(1).

History: Subsec. 122.3(1.1) added by 1997, c. 25, s. 31, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Proposed Amendment — 122.5(7)

(7) Effect of bankruptcy — For the purpose of this section, if in a taxation year an individual becomes bankrupt, the individual's income for the taxation year shall include the individual's income for the taxation year that begins on January 1 of the calendar year that includes the date of bankruptcy.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 25, will amend subsec. 122.5(7) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Section 122.5 provides rules for determining the goods and services tax (GST) credit for individuals. Subsection 122.5(7) is intended to ensure that the bankruptcy of an individual or the individual's spouse will not affect the amount of the individual's GST credit.

For most purposes, paragraph 128(2)(d) divides the calendar year in which an individual becomes bankrupt into two taxation years. A taxation year of an individual is deemed to have ended immediately before the day on which the individual became a bankrupt and another taxation year is deemed to have begun at the beginning of the day on which the individual became a bankrupt.

Existing paragraph 122.5(7)(b) provides that, for the purpose of determining the GST credit for the year that includes the bankruptcy of a single person with no dependents, the amount of the person's personal credit for the pre-bankruptcy taxation year will be used in the calculation. Paragraph 122.5(7)(b) originally achieved this by reference to clause 122.5(3)(e)(ii)(B), which in turn referred to paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1).

Paragraph 122.5(7)(b) is repealed consequential to the removal of the reference to paragraph (c) of the description of B in subsection 118(1) in former clause 122.5(3)(e)(ii)(B) by S.C. 1999, c. 26. The calculation of the GST credit for a single person with no dependents is now provided for in paragraph 122.5(3)(f), without reference to section 118.

A is the total of

(a) the product obtained by multiplying $1,090[42] by the number of qualified dependants in respect of whom the person was an eligible individual at the beginning of the month, and

(b) the product obtained by multiplying $75[42] by the number of qualified dependants, in excess of 2, in respect of whom the person was an eligible individual at the beginning of the month,

(c) [Repealed] [see History to 122.61(1) for transitional measure]

B is 4% (or where the person is an eligible individual in respect of only one qualified dependant at the beginning of the month, 2%) of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the numerator is the total that would be determined under the description of F in respect of the eligible individual if that description were applied without reference to the fourth and subsequent qualified dependants in respect of whom the person is an eligible individual, and

(ii) the denominator is the amount referred to in paragraph (a) of the description of F, divided by 0.122; and

$$N - (O \times P)$$

where

N is the product obtained by multiplying $2,300 by the number of qualified dependants in respect of whom both

(a) an amount may be deducted under section 118.3 for the taxation year that includes the month, and

(b) the person is an eligible individual at the beginning of the month,

O is the amount determined by the formula where the descriptions of J, F, H, K, and L are described in the description of C, and

P is 4% (or where the person is an eligible individual in respect of only one qualified dependant included in the description of N at the beginning of the month, 2%) of the amount determined for the description of O.

123.4 Corporation tax reductions — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"CCPC rate reduction percentage" [Repealed]

"full rate taxable income" of a corporation for a taxation year is

(a) if the corporation is not a corporation described in paragraph (b) or (c) for the year, the amount by which that portion of the corporation's taxable income for the year (or, for greater certainty, if the corporation is non-resident, that portion of its taxable income earned in Canada for the year) that is subject to tax under subsection 123(1) exceeds the total of

(i) if an amount is deducted under subsection 125.1(1) from the corporation's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, the amount obtained by dividing the amount so deducted by the corporation's general rate reduction percentage for the taxation year,

(ii) if an amount is deducted under subsection 125.1(2) from the corporation's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, the amount determined, in respect of the deduction, by the formula in that subsection, and

(iii) [Repealed]

Proposed Addition — 123.4(1)"full rate taxable income"(a)(iii)

(iii) the corporation's income for the year from a personal services business; and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 26(1), will add subpara. (a)(iii) to the definition "full rate taxable income" in subsec. 123.4(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 123.4 contains rules that allow a corporation to reduce its tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act by a percentage of its "full rate taxable income". The "full rate taxable income" of a corporation for a taxation year is, in general terms, that part of the corporation's taxable income for the year that is not exempt from tax and has not benefited from any of the various special effective tax rates provided under the Act. This amount is determined differently depending on the status of the corporation and the type of income.

Two amendments are made to subsection 123.4(1).

Subsection 123.4(1) is amended to exclude from the definition "full rate taxable income", income earned by a corporation from a personal services business, as defined in subsection 125(7). This amendment provides that the general rate reduction percentage does not apply to the portion of the taxable income of a corporation earned in the year from a personal services business.

(iv) if the corporation is a credit union throughout the year and the corporation deducted an amount for the year under subsection 125(1) (because of the application of subsections 137(3) and (4)), the amount if any, by which, the lesser of the amounts described in paragraphs 137(3)(a) and (b) exceeds the amount described in paragraph 137(3)(c) in respect of the corporation for the year;

(b) if the corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year, the amount by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds the total of

Proposed Amendment — 123.4(1)"full rate taxable income"(b) opening words

(b) if the corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year, the amount by which that portion of the corporation's taxable income for the year that is subject to tax under subsection 123(1) exceeds the total of

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 26(2), will amend the opening words of para. (b) of the definition "full rate taxable income" in subsec. 123.4(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph (b) of the definition "full rate taxable income" applies to Canadian-controlled private corporations. The preamble of that paragraph is amended to clarify that the general rate reduction percentage in subsection 123.4(2) does not apply to the portion of the taxable income of a corporation for which tax payable is not based on the general corporate income tax rate of 38% established under paragraph 123(1)(a).

(i) the amounts that would, if paragraph (a) applied to the corporation, be determined under subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iv) in respect of the corporation for the year,

(ii) the least of the amounts, if any, determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the year, and

(iii) the corporation's aggregate investment income for the year, within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(4), and

Proposed Amendment — 123.4(1)"full rate taxable income"(b)(iii)

(iii) except for a corporation that is, throughout the year, a cooperative corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 136(2)) or a credit union, the corporation's aggregate investment income for the year, within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(4), and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 77, will amend subpara. (b)(iii) of the definition "full rate taxable income" in subsec. 123.4(1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 123.4 contains rules that allow a corporation to reduce its tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act by a percentage of the corporation's "full rate taxable income" — a term that is separately defined in the section for Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs) and for other corporations.

From 2001 to 2004, that section also allowed a corporation that was a CCPC to reduce its tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act with respect to a portion of its active business income by a percentage that was usually higher than the general rate reduction percentage during those years. Such reduction was based on a portion of the active business income earned by a CCPC in a taxation year which exceeded its small business limit for the year for the purposes of the small business deduction under section 125.

The "full rate taxable income" of a corporation for a taxation year is, in general terms, that part of the corporation's taxable income for the year that is not exempt from tax and has not benefited from any of the various special effective tax rates provided under the Act. This amount is determined differently depending on the nature of the corporation and the type of income earned by it. Paragraph (b) of the definition applies to corporations that are CCPCs.

Under subsection 136(1) and 137(7), cooperatives and credit unions are deemed not to be private corporations for the purposes of the Act, except for the purposes of specific provisions among which is section 125. Pursuant to proposed amendments to those subsections, which apply to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years, cooperatives and credit unions would be treated as private corporations for the purpose of section 123.4 so that the appropriate corporate tax rate reductions apply to active business income earned by cooperatives and credit unions. Paragraph (b) of the definition "full rate taxable income" is amended to reflect the fact that the proposed amendments to subsections 136(1) and 137(7) are in respect of such income.

(iv) [Repealed]

Technical Notes: Section 125 contains rules concerning the small business deduction that may be claimed by Canadian-controlled private corporations in respect of income from carrying on an active business in Canada. Under subsection 125(1), a Canadian-controlled private corporation's small business deduction for a taxation year is calculated as 17% of the least of three amounts. One of these, set out in paragraph 125(1)(b), is the amount by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds income that has supported a foreign tax credit (FTC) or that is statutorily exempt from tax. The amount of income that has supported an FTC is determined by multiplying the corporation's FTCs for the year (subject to certain adjustments) by a factor that reflects an assumed rate of tax. For FTCs in respect of foreign non-business income, the factor is currently 10/3, which reflects an assumed tax rate of 30%. The assumed corporate tax rate is based on the fact that foreign non-business income of a corporate taxpayer resident in Canada is typically taxable by a province, in which case the taxpayer is entitled to a 10% abatement under subsection 124(1). Subparagraph 125(1)(b)(i) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign non-business income following the elimination of the surtax that was imposed on corporations before 2008.

This amendment applies to taxation years that end after October 31, 2011, subject to a transitional rule for taxation years that straddle October 31, 2011.

(ii) 10/4 of the total of the amounts that would be deductible under subsection 126(2) from the tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part by it if those amounts were determined without reference to section 123.4, and

Proposed Amendment — 125(1)(b)(ii)

(ii) the amount determined by multiplying the total of the amounts that would be deductible under subsection 126(2) from the tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part by it, if those amounts were determined without reference to section 123.4, by the relevant factor for the year, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 78(1), will amend subpara. 125(1)(b)(ii) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Under subsection 125(1), a Canadian-controlled private corporation's small business deduction for a taxation year is calculated as 17% of the least of three amounts. One of these, set out in paragraph 125(1)(b), is the amount by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds income that has supported a foreign tax credit (FTC) or that is statutorily exempt from tax. The amount of income that has supported an FTC is determined by multiplying the corporation's FTCs for the year (subject to certain adjustments) by a factor that reflects an assumed rate of tax. The limit for business income FTCs is based on the applicable federal corporate income tax rate without taking into account the provincial abatement, because foreign business income earned through a permanent establishment outside Canada is typically not taxable by a province. For business income FTCs, the factor is currently 10/4, which assumes a tax rate of 40%. Subparagraph 125(1)(b)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years. Under the definition of "relevant factor" that is added in subsection 248(1), the factor for taxation years that end after 2002 and before 2010 is 3, which assumes a tax rate of 33.3%. The factor for taxation years that end after 2009 will take into account the "general rate reduction percentage" that applies to a corporation's taxation year as provided in section 123.4. For example, if a corporation's taxation year corresponds to the 2010 calendar year, its relevant factor will be 1/(.38-.10), or 3.5714. For taxation years that end after 2009, this amendment takes into account the fact that a corporation's taxation year may straddle two calendar years with different tax rates. This amendment is made in the course of the review of provisions in the Income Tax Act that assume a specific underlying corporate income tax rate in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate, as was announced in the Economic Statement delivered on October 30, 2007. The review of other such provisions continues and any other amendments will be announced upon completion of that review.

(5.1) Business limit reduction — Notwithstanding subsections (2) to (5), a Canadian-controlled private corporation's business limit for a particular taxation year ending in a calendar year is the amount, if any, by which its business limit otherwise determined for the particular year exceeds the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{$11{,}250}$$

where

A is the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the corporation's business limit for the particular year; and

(a) where the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the particular year, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for its preceding taxation year, and

(b) where the corporation is associated with one or more other corporations in the particular year, the total of all amounts each of which would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the tax payable under Part I.3 by the corporation or any such other corporation for its last taxation year ending in the preceding calendar year.

Proposed Amendment — 125(5.1)B

B is the amount determined by the formula

$$0.225\% \times (D - $10 \text{ million})$$

D is

(a) if, in both the particular taxation year and the preceding taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation, the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation for the preceding taxation year,

(b) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation but was associated with one or more corporations in the preceding taxation year, the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation for the particular taxation year, or

(c) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is associated with one or more particular corporations, the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation or of any of the particular corporations for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 78(2), will amend the description of B in subsec. 125(5.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after December 20, 2002, except that, in its application to a corporation described in subsec. 181.1(3) for taxation years of the corporation that began before this draft legislation is assented to, the description of B is to be read as follows:

(a) if, in both the particular taxation year and the preceding taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for the preceding taxation year,

(b) if, in the particular taxation year, the corporation is not associated with any corporation but was associated with one or more corporations in the preceding taxation year, the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for the particular taxation year, and

where

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxable capital employed in Canada (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181.2(1) or 181.3(1) or section 181.4, as the case may be) of the corporation or of any of the particular corporations for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year, and

E is $10 million.

Technical Notes (July 2010): A corporation's entitlement to the small business deduction for a particular taxation year is determined by reference to, among other things, the "business limit" of the corporation for the particular year. In broad terms, subsection 125(5.1) reduces the business limit of a corporation if tax under Part I.3 of the Act was payable by the corporation for its preceding taxation year. If the corporation is associated with one or more other corporations in the particular year, the provision takes into account the Part I.3 tax payable by it and those other corporations, in each case for their last taxation years that ended in the preceding calendar year.

Subsection 125(5.1) is amended to respond better to cases in which a corporation is associated with more, fewer or different corporations in one taxation year than in the past. Specifically, the description of B in the formula in the subsection — a description that in effect refers to an amount of tax under Part I.3 — will take one of three forms, depending on the corporation's associations in the current and, in some cases, the preceding taxation year:

- if the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the current year, and was not associated with any other corporation in the preceding taxation year, the description of B is based on the corporation's Part I.3 tax for the preceding taxation year;
- if the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the current year, but was so associated in the preceding taxation year, the description of B is based on the corporation's Part I.3 tax for the current year; and
- if the corporation is associated with one or more corporations in the current year, the description of B is the product of a formula that looks to the total taxable capital employed in Canada of the corporation itself and all the corporations with which it is associated in the current year, in each case for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year.

For the purpose of applying subsection 125(5.1), the amount that would, but for subsecs. 181.1(2) and (4), be a corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for a taxation year that began before February 28, 1995 shall be determined without reference to the 1996, c. 21, s. 47 amendment to subsec. 181.1(1).

Subsec. 125(5.1) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 35(2), applicable to taxation years that end after June 1994 except that, in its application to taxation years that begin before July 1994, it shall be read as follows:

(5.1) Notwithstanding subsections (2) to (5), a Canadian-controlled private corporation's business limit for a particular taxation year ending in a calendar year is the amount, if any, by which its business limit otherwise determined for the particular year exceeds the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{$10{,}000} \times \frac{C}{D}$$

where

A is the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the corporation's business limit for the particular year;

B is

(a) where the corporation is not associated with any other corporation in the particular year, the lesser of $10,000 and the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for its preceding taxation year, and

(b) where the corporation is associated with one or more other corporations in the particular year, the lesser of $10,000 and the total of all amounts each of which would, but for subsections 181.1(2) and (4), be the tax payable under Part I.3 by the corporation or any such other corporation for its last taxation year ending in the preceding calendar year;

C is the number of days in the particular year that are after June 1994; and

D is the number of days in the particular year.

Subsec. 35(4) of 1995, c. 3 provides that, notwithstanding any other provision of the Act or of the amending legislation, nothing in this amendment shall affect the amount of interest payable under the Act in respect of a corporation for any period or part thereof that is before July 1994.

(ii) 10/4 of the total of the amounts that would be deductible under subsection 126(2) from the tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part by the corporation if those amounts were determined without reference to section 123.4, and

(ii) the amount determined by multiplying the total of the amounts that would be deductible under subsection 126(2) from the tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part by it, if those amounts were determined without reference to section 123.4, by the relevant factor for the year, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 79(1), will amend subpara. 125.1(1)(b)(ii) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 125.1(1) provides the basic rules for the calculation of a corporation's manufacturing and processing profits deduction. The deduction for a given taxation year is the lesser of two amounts, one of which is the corporation's taxable income less certain other amounts. One of those other amounts, described in subparagraph 125.1(1)(b)(ii), is the grossed-up amount of the corporation's foreign tax credits (FTCs) for the year in respect of foreign businesses. The limit for business income FTCs is based on the applicable federal corporate income tax rate without taking into account the provincial abatement, because foreign business income earned through a permanent establishment outside Canada is typically not taxable by a province. Currently, the corporation's FTCs are grossed-up by a factor of 10/4, which assumes this income was subject to tax at a rate of 40%. Subparagraph 125.1(1)(b)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income in the context of the reductions in the federal general corporate income tax rate for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years. Under the definition of "relevant factor" that is added in subsection 248(1), the factor for taxation years that end after 2002 and before 2010 is 3, which assumes a tax rate of 33.3%. The factor for taxation years that end after 2009 will take into account the "general rate reduction percentage" that applies to a corporation's taxation year as provided in section 123.4. For example, if a corporation's taxation year corresponds to the 2010 calendar year, its relevant factor will be 1/(.38-.10), or 3.5714. For taxation years that end after 2009, this amendment takes into account the fact that a corporation's taxation year may straddle two calendar years with different federal general corporate income tax rates. This amendment is made in the course of the review of provisions in the Income Tax Act that assume a specific underlying corporate income tax rate in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate, as was announced in the Economic Statement delivered on October 30, 2007. The review of other such provisions continues and any other amendments will be announced upon completion of that review.

125.11 [Repealed]

History: S. 125.11 repealed by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 13(2), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006. S. 125.11 formerly read:

125.11 (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in section 123.4 and this section.

Proposed Amendment — 125.11(1)"taxable resource income"

"taxable resource income", of a taxpayer for a taxation year, is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's taxable income for the taxation year exceeds 100/16 of the amount deducted under subsection 125(1) from the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year, and

(b) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is deducted by the taxpayer under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year,

B is the percentage that is the total of

(i) that proportion of 100% that the number of days in the taxation year that are before 2003 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

(ii) that proportion of 90% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2003 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

(iii) that proportion of 75% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2004 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

(iv) that proportion of 65% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2005 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and

(v) that proportion of 35% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2006 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

C is total of all amounts included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year under paragraph 59(3.2)(b) or (c),

D is the total of all amounts deducted by the taxpayer under any of sections 65 to 66.7, other than subsections 66(4), 66.21(4) and 66.7(2) and (2.3), of this Act, and subsections 17(2) and (6) and section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year, and

E is 100/16 of the amount deducted under subsection 125(1) from the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 80(1), will amend the definition "taxable resource income" in subsec. 125.11(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after February 27, 2004 and begin before 2007 (for taxation years that begin after 2006 the July 16, 2010 draft legislation, subsec. 80(2), repeals the definition).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 125.11 has the effect of reducing the federal corporate income tax rate for income earned from resource activities from 28% to 21% by 2007. This is accomplished for the years 2003–2006 by providing a deduction against the 28% rate for income that falls within the definition of "taxable resource income". After 2006 resource income will be included in full rate taxable income and be subject to the general rate reduction rules.

Currently, a taxpayer's "taxable resource income" is the lesser of the taxpayer's taxable income for the taxation year and the amount calculated by the following formula: 3(A/B) + C – D. A represents the deduction taken as a resource allowance under paragraph 20(1)(v.1). B is a reduction of the resource allowance, which is being phased out between 2003 and 2006, prorated for non-calendar year-ends. C represents additions to the taxpayer's income resulting from negative resource pools. Lastly, D is any amounts deducted from income on account of resource pools.

The definition "taxable resource income" is being amended to ensure that resource income that was earned by a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) and received a small business deduction under subsection 125(1) is not also eligible for this rate reduction. The result is that a taxpayer's "taxable resource income" will now be the lesser of two amounts. The first amount is the taxpayer's taxable income for the year less 100/16 of the amount the taxpayer deducted from tax payable pursuant to subsection 125(1). The second amount is calculated by the formula 3(A/B) + C – D – E. Elements A to D are unchanged from the previous formula contained in this definition, and remain as described above. New element E is 100/16 of the amount deducted from tax otherwise payable pursuant to subsection 125(1). This amendment ensures that resource income earned by a CCPC can only benefit from one rate reduction.

(2) Resource deduction — There may be deducted from a corporation's tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year [2003-06 only — ed.] the product obtained by multiplying the corporation's resource rate reduction percentage for the taxation year by the corporation's taxable resource income for the taxation year.

S. 125.11 added by 2003, c. 28, subsec. 13(1), applicable to 2003 et seq. except that, for those taxation years that begin before June 9, 2003, the value of C in the formula in the definition "taxable resource income" in subsec. 125.11(1) is deemed to be nil.

125.2 (1) Deduction of [pre-1992] Part VI tax — There may be deducted in computing the tax payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was throughout the year a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by section 190) an amount equal to such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part VI tax credits for any of its 7 immediately preceding taxation years ending before 1992, to the extent that that amount does not exceed the amount, if any, by which

(a) its tax payable under this Part (determined without reference to this section) for the year exceeds the total of

(b) the amount that would, but for subsection 190.1(3), be its tax payable under Part VI for the year, and

(c) the lesser of its Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.3(4)) for the year and the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year.

Related Provisions: 181.1(4)–(7) — Credit of surtax against Part VI tax after 1991. See also at end of 125.2.

History: Subsec. 125.2(1) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 65(1), applicable to 1992 et seq. and, where a corporation elected under subsection 111(2) (of the amending legislation — see under subsec. 190.1(2)) to have subsection 111(1) (of the amending legislation) apply to its taxation years ending in 1991, to all such years except that in its application to such years, subsec. 125.2(1) shall be read without reference to:

(a) the expression "the total of",

(b) the word "and" at the end of para. 125.2(1)(b), and

(c) para. 125.2(1)(c),

and the reference therein to "1992" shall be read as "1991". Subsec. 125.2(1) formerly read:

(1) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was throughout the year a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by section 190) an amount equal to the total of

(a) its tax payable under Part VI for the year, and

(b) such part of its unused Part VI tax credits for the seven taxation years immediately preceding and the three taxation years immediately following the year as the corporation may claim.

Special Application: 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 102 provides that in its application to corporations described in para. (d) or (e) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 190(1), for taxation years beginning before February 21, 1990, subsec. 125.2(1) shall be read as follows:

"125.2(1) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was throughout the year a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by section 190) an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of

(i) its tax payable under Part VI for the year, and

(ii) such part of its unused Part VI tax credits for the 3 taxation years immediately following the year as the corporation claims; and

(b) that proportion of its tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year that the number of days in the year that are after February 20, 1990 is of the number of days in the year."

Forms: T2 SCH 42: Calculation of unused unused Part I tax credit; T921: Calculation of unused Part VI tax credit and unused Part I tax credit.

(2) Idem — For the purposes of this section,

(a) an amount may not be claimed under subsection (1) in computing a corporation's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year in respect of its unused Part VI tax credit for another taxation year until its unused Part VI tax credits for taxation years preceding the other year that may be claimed for the particular year have been claimed; and

(b) an amount in respect of a corporation's unused Part VI tax credit for a taxation year may be claimed under subsection (1) in computing its tax payable under this Part for another taxation year only to the extent that it exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount claimed in respect of that unused Part VI tax credit in computing its tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding that other year.

(3) Definition of "unused Part VI tax credit" — For the purposes of this section, "unused Part VI tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year is the lesser of

(a) its tax payable under Part VI (determined without reference to subsections 190.1(1.1) and (3)) for the year, and

(b) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is its tax payable under Part VI for the year (determined without reference to subsection 190.1(3)), and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would, but for this section, be its tax payable under this Part for the year

exceeds

(ii) the lesser of its Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.3(4)) and the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year.

(a) its tax payable under Part VI (determined without reference to subsection 190.1(3)) for the year, and

Subsec. 125.2(3) formerly read:

(3) For the purposes of this section, "unused Part VI tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year ending after 1991 means the amount determined by the formula

(b) the lesser of its Canadian surtax payable (within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.3(4)) and the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year.

(b) where the corporation elected under subsection 111(2) (of the amending legislation — see under subsec. 190.1(2)) to have subsection 111(1) (of the amending legislation) apply to its taxation years ending in 1991, for its taxation years ending before 1991 in respect of unused Part VI tax credits for taxation years ending after 1990, except that, for the purpose of computing its unused Part VI tax credits under subsec. 125.2(3), as amended, for taxation years ending in 1991, the amount determined under paragraph (b) in the description of B in the said subsection 125.2(3) shall be deemed to be nil.

Subsec. 125.2(3) formerly read:

(3) In this section, "unused Part VI tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the corporation's tax payable under Part VI for the year exceeds the amount that would, but for this section, be its tax payable under this Part for the year.

Special Application: 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 102 provides that in its application to corporations described in para. (d) or (e) of the definition "financial institution" in subsec. 190(1), subsec. 125.2(3) shall be read as follows:

"(3) For the purposes of this section, "unused Part VI tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year commencing before February 21, 1990 means the amount, if any, by which the corporation's tax payable under Part VI for the year exceeds the amount deductible under subsection (1) in computing its tax payable under this Part for the year."

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 28, will repeal s. 125.2, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Part VI of the Act levies a tax on capital employed in Canada by large financial institutions. Amendments made in 1992 reversed the former process of crediting Part VI tax payable against Part I tax liability, providing instead that a financial institution's Part I tax payable may be applied to reduce its Part VI tax. As part of those 1992 amendments, transitional relief was provided under section 125.2. That relief allowed a financial institution that had not previously deducted its Part VI tax for a pre-1992 taxation year, to carry forward for up to seven years the undeducted balance and to deduct it from Part I tax. That carry-forward period has now expired. This section is therefore repealed.

125.3 (1) Deduction of [pre-1992] Part I.3 tax — There may be deducted in computing the tax payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation (other than a corporation that was throughout the year a financial institution, within the meaning assigned by section 190) an amount equal to such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part I.3 tax credits for any of its 7 immediately preceding taxation years ending before 1992, to the extent that that amount does not exceed the amount, if any, by which

(a) its Canadian surtax payable for the year

exceeds

(b) the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.9) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up.

History: Subsec. 125.3(1) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 66(1), applicable to 1992 et seq. Subsec. (1) formerly read:

(1) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of

(i) its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year, and

(ii) such part of its unused Part I.3 tax credits for the 7 taxation years immediately preceding and the 3 taxation years immediately following the year as the corporation may claim; and

(b) its Canadian surtax payable for the year.

Forms: T2 SCH 37: Calculation of unused surtax credit; T962: Calculation of unused Part I.3 tax credit and unused surtax credit.

(1.1) Idem — There may be deducted in computing the tax payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by section 190) throughout the year an amount equal to such part as the corporation claims of its unused Part I.3 tax credits for any of its 7 immediately preceding taxation years ending before 1992, to the extent that that amount does not exceed the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which its Canadian surtax payable for the year exceeds the amount that would, but for subsection 181.1(4), be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which its tax payable under this Part (determined without reference to this section and section 125.2) for the year exceeds the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(4) and 190.1(3), be the total of its taxes payable under Parts I.3 and VI for the year.

Proposed Amendment — 125.3(1.1)(b)

(b) the amount, if any, by which its tax payable under this Part (determined without reference to this section) for the year exceeds the amount that would, but for subsections 181.1(4) and 190.1(3), be the total of its taxes payable under Parts I.3 and VI for the year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 29, will amend para. 125.3(1.1)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Part I.3 of the Act levies a tax on taxable capital employed in Canada by large corporations. Section 125.3 provides a corporation with a deduction from Part I tax for the corporation's unused Part I.3 tax credits. Subsection 125.3(1.1) computes this deduction if the corporation is a financial institution (as defined in section 190). The deduction under subsection 125.3(1.1) may be taken in a taxation year of the financial institution to the extent that it does not exceed the lesser of two amounts. These two amounts are described in paragraphs 125.3(1.1)(a) and (b) and are, respectively, the amount by which the financial institution's "Canadian surtax payable" for the year exceeds the amount that would be its tax payable under Part I.3 for the year but for its unused Part I.3 tax credits, and the amount by which the financial institution's tax payable under Part I for the year (determined without reference to sections 125.2 and 125.3) exceeds the amount that would be its tax payable under Parts I.3 and VI for the year but for its unused Part I.3 and Part VI tax credits.

Paragraph 125.3(1.1)(b) is amended consequential to the repeal of section 125.2 to remove the reference to that section. For further information, see the commentary on section 125.2.

History: Subsec. 125.3(1.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 66(1), applicable to 1992 et seq.

(2) Special rules — For the purposes of this section,

(a) no amount may be claimed under subsection (1) in computing a corporation's tax payable under this Part for a particular taxation year in respect of its unused Part I.3 tax credit for another taxation year until its unused Part I.3 tax credits for taxation years preceding the other year that may be claimed for the particular year have been claimed; and

(b) an amount in respect of a corporation's unused Part I.3 tax credit for a taxation year may be claimed under subsection (1) in computing its tax payable under this Part for another taxation year only to the extent that it exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount claimed in respect of that unused Part I.3 tax credit in computing its tax payable under this Part for a taxation year preceding that other year.

(3) Acquisition of control — Where, at any time, control of a corporation has been acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of its unused Part I.3 tax credit for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year ending after that time and no amount in respect of its unused Part I.3 tax credit for a taxation year ending after that time is deductible by the corporation for a taxation year ending before that time, except that

(a) where a business was carried on by the corporation in a taxation year ending before that time, its unused Part I.3 tax credit for that year is deductible by the corporation for a particular taxation year ending after that time only if that business was carried on by the corporation for profit or with a reasonable expectation of profit throughout the particular year and only to the extent of that proportion of the corporation's Canadian surtax payable for the particular year that

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of its income for the particular year from that business and, where properties were sold, leased, rented or developed or services rendered in the course of carrying on that business before that time, its income for the particular year from any other business substantially all the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development, as the case may be, of similar properties or the rendering of similar services

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under paragraph 111(1)(a) or (d) for the particular year by the corporation in respect of a non-capital loss or a farm loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year in respect of that business or the other business,

is of the greater of

(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (i), and

(iii) the corporation's taxable income for the particular year; and

(b) where a business was carried on by the corporation throughout a taxation year ending after that time, its unused Part I.3 tax credit for that year is deductible by the corporation for a particular taxation year ending before that time only if that business was carried on by the corporation for profit or with a reasonable expectation of profit in the particular year and only to the extent of that proportion of the corporation's Canadian surtax payable for the particular year that

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of its income for the particular year from that business and, where properties were sold, leased, rented or developed or services rendered in the course of carrying on that business before that time, its income for the particular year from any other business substantially all the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development, as the case may be, of similar properties or the rendering of similar services

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted under paragraph 111(1)(a) or (d) for the particular year by the corporation in respect of a non-capital loss or a farm loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year in respect of that business or the other business,

is of the greater of

(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (i), and

(iii) the corporation's taxable income for the particular year.

(4) Definitions — For the purposes of this section,

"Canadian surtax payable" of a corporation for a taxation year means

(a) in the case of a corporation that is non-resident throughout the year, the lesser of

(i) the amount determined under section 123.2 in respect of the corporation for the year, and

(b) in any other case, the lesser of

(i) the prescribed proportion of the amount determined under section 123.2 in respect of the corporation for the year, and

History: The definition "Canadian surtax payable" in subsec. 125.3(4) substituted by 1994, c. 21, s. 59, applicable to 1994 et seq. That definition formerly read:

"Canadian surtax payable" of a corporation for a taxation year means

(a) in the case of a corporation that is throughout the year not resident in Canada, the amount determined under section 123.2 in respect of the corporation for the year, and

"unused Part I.3 tax credit" of a corporation for a taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the corporation's tax payable under Part I.3 for the year exceeds the amount deductible under subsection (1) in computing its tax payable under this Part for the year.

Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit

125.4 (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

"assistance" means an amount, other than a prescribed amount or an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing a taxpayer's income for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (v) to (vii).

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1)"assistance"

"assistance" means an amount, other than a prescribed amount or an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing a taxpayer's income for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to

(a) subparagraphs 12(1)(x)(v) to (viii), if the amount were received

(i) from a person or partnership described in subparagraph 12(1)(x)(ii), or

(ii) in circumstances where clause 12(1)(x)(i)(C) applies; and

(b) subparagraphs 12(1)(x)(v) to (vii), in any other case.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(2), proposed to amend the definition "assistance" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable

(a) to film or video productions for which the production commencement time of the corporation (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, of all such corporations) is after November 13, 2003, and

(b) to a corporation in respect of a film or video production for which the production commencement time of any corporation is before November 14, 2003

(i) if the earliest labour expenditure of the corporation (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, of all such corporations) in respect of the production is made after 2003, or

(ii) if the corporation elects (or, if there is more than one qualified corporation in respect of the production, all such corporations jointly elect), in writing, and the election is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the earliest filing-due date of any qualified corporation in respect of the production for that corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, and the earliest labour expenditure of all such qualified corporations in respect of the production is made

(A) after the last taxation year of any such corporation that ended before November 14, 2003, or

(B) if the first taxation year of all such corporations includes November 14, 2003, in that taxation year.

The earliest labour expenditure referred to above is to be determined under the provisions of subsec. 125.4(1) or (2) that would apply if the amendments to 125.4"assistance", "labour expenditure", "production commencement time", "qualified labour expenditure", "salary or wages" and "script material", and to subsec 125.4(2) were not enacted.

Technical Notes: Section 125.4 sets out the rules that apply for the purpose of computing the Canadian film or video production tax credit ("CFVPTC"). Generally, this tax credit is available at a rate of 25% of qualified labour expenditures incurred by a qualified corporation for a production certified by the Minister of Canadian Heritage to be a Canadian film or video production.

Except as noted below, the amendments to subsection 125.4 generally apply in respect of productions for which development commences on or after November 14, 2003 or the first labour expenditures (as determined under subsections 125.4(1) and (2) as they applied before that date — the "old rules") of the production corporation are incurred after 2003. As well, if development commenced before November 14, 2003 and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation in its taxation year that includes November 14, 2003, the corporation may elect to have the new rules apply. Subject to this election, corporations must continue to claim the CFVPTC under the old rules for productions that qualified under those rules. Where, in the case of a co-production, more than one qualified corporation is eligible to claim a CFVPTC in respect of the production, the election to have the new rules apply must be made jointly. A production cannot qualify under both schemes.

In computing the CFVPTC, qualified labour expenditures in respect of a film or video production are limited to 48% of the amount by which the cost of the production exceeds any "assistance" in respect of that cost that has not been repaid.

The definition "assistance" is amended to provide that the equity share of a production of a government or other public authority is treated in the same manner as government assistance. This could include, for example, a loan from a government agency where repayment of the loan is dependent on profit from the production.

History: The definition "assistance" in subsec. 125.4(1) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 46, applicable to amounts received after February 23, 1998. It formerly read:

"assistance" means an amount, other than an amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid, that would be included under paragraph 12(1)(x) in computing the income of a taxpayer for any taxation year if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (v) to (vii).

"Canadian film or video production certificate" means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage

(a) certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production, and

(b) estimating amounts relevant for the purpose of determining the amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid in respect of the production.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1)"Canadian film or video production certificate"

"Canadian film or video production certificate" means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production in respect of which that Minister is satisfied that

(a) except where the production is a treaty co-production (as defined by regulation), an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets is, under the terms of any agreement, retained by

(i) a qualified corporation that owns or owned an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production,

(ii) a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation related to the qualified corporation, or

(iii) any combination of corporations described in subparagraph (i) or (ii); and

(b) public financial support of the production would not be contrary to public policy.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(3), proposed to amend the definition "Canadian film or video production certificate" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage after December 20, 2002, except that in respect of those film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage before 2004, the definition "Canadian film or video production certificate" is to be read as follows (identical to the November 14, 2003 and December 20, 2002 draft legislation):

"Canadian film or video production certificate" means a certificate issued in respect of a production by the Minister of Canadian Heritage

(a) certifying that the production is a Canadian film or video production in respect of which that Minister is satisfied that

(i) except where the production is a treaty co-production (as defined by regulation), an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets is, under the terms of any agreement, retained by

(A) a qualified corporation that owns or owned an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production,

(B) a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation related to the qualified corporation, or

(C) any combination of corporations described in clause (A) or (B), and

(ii) public financial support of the production would not be contrary to public policy, and

(b) estimating amounts relevant for the purpose of determining the amount deemed under subsection (3) to have been paid in respect of the production.

Technical Notes: A qualified corporation must file a Canadian film or video production certificate with its tax return for a taxation year in which it claims a Canadian film or video production tax credit in respect of the production. A "Canadian film or video production certificate", as defined in subsection 125.4(1), is issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage. The definition is amended to provide that that Minister will also certify that the public funding of the production would not be contrary to public policy and that, generally, a qualified corporation or a related taxable Canadian corporation will retain an acceptable share of revenues from the exploitation of the production in non-Canadian markets. The Minister of Canadian Heritage will issue guidelines as to how these criteria can be met.

The definition is also amended to remove the requirement for the Minister of Canadian Heritage to provide estimates relevant to the calculation of the CFVPTC, in respect of certificates issued after 2003.

A re-elected Conservative Government will not reintroduce the Bill C-10 proposals to change film and video tax credit eligibility. "investor" means a person, other than a prescribed person, who is not actively engaged on a regular, continuous and substantial basis in a business carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada that is a Canadian film or video production business.

Proposed Repeal — 125.4(1)"investor"

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(1), proposed to repeal the definition "investor" in subsec. 125.4(1), applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003; and

(b) in respect of a film or video production in respect of which a corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsec. 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997.

Technical Notes: The definition "investor" describes a person who is not actively engaged on a regular, continuous, and substantial basis in a Canadian film or video production business carried on through a permanent establishment in Canada. A CFVPTC may not be claimed in respect of a Canadian film or video production where an investor, or a partnership in which an investor has an interest, may deduct an amount in respect of the production.

The definition of investor is repealed, applicable to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003, as well as to productions in respect of which a qualifying production corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsection 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997 in respect of the production.

Related Provisions: 125.4(4) — No credit where investor can deduct any amount.

Regulations: 1106(10) (prescribed person); 8201 (permanent establishment).

"labour expenditure" of a corporation for a taxation year in respect of a property of the corporation that is a Canadian film or video production means, in the case of a corporation that is not a qualified corporation for the year, nil, and in the case of a corporation that is a qualified corporation for the year, subject to subsection (2), the total of the following amounts to the extent that they are reasonable in the circumstances and included in the cost or, in the case of depreciable property, the capital cost to the corporation of the property:

(a) the salary or wages directly attributable to the production that are incurred after 1994 and in the year, or the preceding taxation year, by the corporation for the stages of production of the property, from the final script stage to the end of the post-production stage, and paid by it in the year or within 60 days after the end of the year (other than amounts incurred in that preceding year that were paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding year),

(b) that portion of the remuneration (other than salary or wages and other than remuneration that relates to services rendered in the preceding taxation year and that was paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding year) that is directly attributable to the production of property, that relates to services rendered after 1994 and in the year, or that preceding year, to the corporation for the stages of production, from the final script stage to the end of the post-production stage, and that is paid by it in the year or within 60 days after the end of the year to

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1)"labour expenditure" before (b)(i)

"labour expenditure", of a corporation for a taxation year in respect of a Canadian film or video production, means, in the case of a corporation that is not a qualified corporation for the taxation year, nil, and in the case of a corporation that is a qualified corporation for the taxation year, subject to subsection (2), the total of the following amounts to the extent that they are reasonable in the circumstances and included in the cost to, or in the case of depreciable property the capital cost to, the corporation, or any other person or partnership, of the production:

(a) the salary or wages directly attributable to the production that are incurred after 1994 and in the taxation year, or the preceding taxation year, by the corporation for the stages of production of the property, from the production commencement time to the end of the post-production stage, and paid by it in the taxation year or within 60 days after the end of the taxation year (other than amounts incurred in that preceding taxation year that were paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding taxation year),

(b) that portion of the remuneration (other than salary or wages and other than remuneration that relates to services rendered in the preceding taxation year and that was paid within 60 days after the end of that preceding taxation year) that is directly attributable to the production of property, that relates to services rendered after 1994 and in the taxation year, or that preceding taxation year, to the corporation for the stages of production, from the production commencement time to the end of the post-production stage, and paid by it in the taxation year or within 60 days after the end of the taxation year to

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(4), proposed to amend the portion of the definition "labour expenditure" in subsec. 125.4(1) before subpara. (b)(i) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: The definition "labour expenditure" describes the underlying expenditures of a qualified corporation in respect of a film or video production that will be eligible for the CFVPTC. The definition is amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition "investor" in subsection 125.4(1) and the amendment of subsections 125.4(2) and (4), to include those production expenditures incurred by the qualified corporation for or on behalf of another person. That is, labour expenditures are no longer limited to those included in the cost to the qualified corporation of the production. The definition is also amended concurrently with the introduction of the definition "production commencement time", which represents the time after which an eligible expenditure will qualify for the CFVPTC.

Where a particular corporation is a co-producer with another qualified corporation, and that other corporation has incurred expenditures for or on behalf of the taxpayer, new paragraph 125.4(2)(d) prevents the particular corporation from claiming a CFVPTC in respect of those expenditures.

For more information on subsections 125.4(2) and (4) and the definitions "investor" and "production commencement time", refer to the commentary for those provisions.

(i) an individual who is not an employee of the corporation, to the extent that the amount paid

(A) is attributable to services personally rendered by the individual for the production of the property, or

(B) is attributable to and does not exceed the salary or wages of the individual's employees for personally rendering services for the production of the property,

(ii) another taxable Canadian corporation, to the extent that the amount paid is attributable to and does not exceed the salary or wages of the other corporation's employees for personally rendering services for the production of the property,

(iii) another taxable Canadian corporation all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of which (except directors' qualifying shares) belong to an individual and the activities of which consist principally of the provision of the individual's services, to the extent that the amount paid is attributable to services rendered personally by the individual for the production of the property, or

(iv) a partnership that is carrying on business in Canada, to the extent that the amount paid

(A) is attributable to services personally rendered by an individual who is a member of the partnership for the production of the property, or

(B) is attributable to and does not exceed the salary or wages of the partnership's employees for personally rendering services for the production of the property, and

(c) where

(i) the corporation is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of another taxable Canadian corporation (in this section referred to as the "parent"), and

(ii) the corporation and the parent have agreed that this paragraph apply in respect of the production, the reimbursement made by the corporation in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, of an expenditure that was incurred by the parent in a particular taxation year of the parent in respect of that production and that would be included in the labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the property for the particular taxation year because of paragraph (a) or (b) if

(iii) the corporation had had such a particular taxation year, and

(iv) the expenditure were incurred by the corporation for the same purpose as it was by the parent and were paid at the same time and to the same person or partnership as it was by the parent.

Related Provisions: 13(7)–(7.4) — Capital cost of depreciable property; 125.4(1), 248(1) — Extended meaning of salary or wages; 125.4(2) — Rules governing labour expenditure.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(1)"production commencement time"

"production commencement time", in respect of a Canadian film or video production, means the earlier of

(a) the time at which principal photography of the production begins, and

(b) the latest of

(i) the time at which a qualified corporation that has an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production, or the parent of the corporation, first makes an expenditure for salary or wages or other remuneration for activities, of scriptwriters, that are directly attributable to the development by the corporation of script material of the production,

(ii) the time at which the corporation or the parent of the corporation acquires a property, on which the production is based, that is a published literary work, screenplay, play, personal history or all or part of the script material of the production, and

(iii) two years before the date on which principal photography of the production begins.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(7), proposed to add the definition "production commencement time" to subsec. 125.4(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: For the purpose of the definition "labour expenditure" in subsection 125.4(1), in order to be eligible for the CFVPTC, expenditures in respect of a film or video production must be incurred by a qualified corporation from the time that is the "final script stage" of the production. The definition "labour expenditure" is amended to instead refer to expenditures incurred after the production commencement time. The new definition "production commencement time" describes the time that is the latest of the following:

1. The time at which a qualified corporation or its parent company first incurs development labour costs for the development of property of the corporation that is script material on which a Canadian film or video production is based.

2. The first time at which the qualified corporation or its parent company acquires a right in respect of the story that is the basis of the final script. Such rights might include a published literary work, play or screenplay.

3. Two years before the date on which principal photography of the production begins.

It is intended that the in-house development labour costs of an initial draft of a script, as well as the cost of modifications, should fall within the period of production for which labour expenditures qualify for the CFVPTC. These in-house costs could include the cost to hire an independent writer to create a script on the basis of some other story or literary work for which the rights have been acquired by the corporation.

Existing conditions on eligible labour expenditures also apply to scriptwriting labour. (See, for example, amounts excluded from the definition "salary and wages" in subsection 125.4(1), such as amounts determined by reference to profits or revenues). As well, the cost to acquire an initial script or any other right referred to above will, like other rights, not qualify. Such an expenditure represents the cost of a property, not a labour expenditure.

The new definition "script material" in subsection 125.4(1) is defined for the purpose of the definition "production commencement time".

"qualified corporation" for a taxation year means a corporation that is throughout the year a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation the activities of which in the year are primarily the carrying on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada of a business that is a Canadian film or video production business.

Regulations: 1106(2) (prescribed taxable Canadian corporation); 8201 (permanent establishment).

A is 60% of the amount by which Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(6), proposed to amend the portion of the description of A before subpara. (ii) in para. (b) of the definition "qualified labour expenditure" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: The definition "qualified labour expenditure" describes the portion of a qualified corporation's labour expenditures upon which it can claim a 25% investment tax credit for a Canadian film or video production. Under a formula in the definition, qualified labour expenditures in respect of a production are limited to 48% of the amount by which the cost of the production to the qualified corporation exceeds any "assistance" in respect of that cost that has not been repaid.

Variable A in the formula is amended to increase the maximum amount of labour expenditure that qualify for the CFVPTC from 48% to 60% of the cost of the production. The definition is also amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition "investor" in subsection 125.4(1) and the amendment of subsections 125.4(2) and (4), to include in the production cost those production expenditures incurred by the qualified corporation for or on behalf of another person. That is, production expenditures are no longer limited to those included in the cost to the qualified corporation of the production.

Where the taxpayer corporation is a co-producer with another qualified corporation, and that other corporation has incurred expenditures for or on behalf of the taxpayer, those expenditures are excluded from the formula by new paragraph 125.4(2)(b).

For more information on subsections 125.4(2) and (4) and the definition "investor", refer to the commentary for those provisions.

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the qualified labour expenditure of the corporation in respect of the production for a preceding taxation year before the end of which the principal filming or taping of the production began.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

"salary or wages" does not include an amount described in section 7 or any amount determined by reference to profits or revenues.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(1)"salary or wages"

"salary or wages" does not include an amount

(a) described in section 7;

(b) determined by reference to profits or revenues; or

(c) paid to a person in respect of services rendered by the person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(2), proposed to amend the definition "salary or wages" in subsec. 125.4(1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: For the purposes of the Canadian film and video production tax credit, the definition "salary or wages", which is generally defined in subsection 248(1), does not include an amount described in section 7 (share option benefits) or any amount determined by reference to profits or revenues.

The definition "salary or wages" is amended to provide that it also does not include an amount paid to a person in respect of services rendered by the person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: See under 125.4(2).

Related Provisions: 125.4(2)(a) — Meaning of "remuneration"; 248(1)"salary or wages" — Definition extended to include all income from employment.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(1)"script material"

"script material", in respect of a production, means written material describing the story on which the production is based and, for greater certainty, includes a draft script, an original story, a screen story, a narration, a television production concept, an outline or a scene-by-scene schematic, synopsis or treatment.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(7), proposed to add the definition "script material" to subsec. 125.4(1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: The new definition "script material" applies for the purpose of determining the "production commencement time" of a production. Script material is written material describing the story on which the production is based and, for greater certainty, includes a draft script, original story, screen story, narration, television production concept, outline or scene-by-scene schematic, synopsis or treatment. These descriptions are terms commonly used in the film production industry.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(2) provides rules that apply for the purpose of the definition of "labour expenditure" in subsection 125.4(1). Paragraph 125.4(2)(a) provides that remuneration does not include remuneration determined by reference to profits or revenues.

Subsection 125.4(2) is amended to provide that it also applies to the definition "qualified labour expenditure" in subsection 125.4(1). In addition, paragraph 125.4(2)(a) is amended to provide that remuneration also does not included remuneration in respect of services rendered by a person at a time when the person was non-resident, unless the person was at that time a Canadian citizen.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: Government Announces Changes to the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit

John Manley, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, and Sheila Copps, Minister of Canadian Heritage, today released draft amendments to the Income Tax Act concerning the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit (CFVPTC).

The CFVPTC supports film and video production in Canada by providing a tax credit equal to 25% of qualifying labour expenditures. The intent of these modifications is to simplify the credit and ensure that tax assistance is appropriately targeted. The proposed amendments include the following:

- The limit on the base of qualifying labour expenditures will be raised to 60% of the total cost of a production from the existing 48% limit. [See 125.4(1)"qualified labour expenditure"(b)A — ed.]
- Labour expenditures in respect of non-residents of Canada (other than Canadian citizens) will no longer be eligible for the credit. [See 125.4(1)"salary or wages" and 125.4(2)(a)(ii) — ed.]
- The holding of an interest in a film or video production by a person other than the production corporation will no longer disqualify the production from eligibility for a tax credit, unless the production or one of the investors is associated with a tax shelter. [See 125.4(4) — ed.] However, the credit will continue to be available only with respect to production expenditures made by the production corporation.
- If a government entity is an investor, that investment will be treated in the same manner as other forms of government assistance. [See 125.4(1)"assistance" — ed.]

Today's proposal results from ongoing consultations with all sectors of the film industry, which were undertaken by the Departments of Finance and Canadian Heritage following Budget 2000. The changes are in keeping with the Government's goal of simplifying the rules and administration of the CFVPTC, and basing the credit more closely on Canadian labour content.

The new rules will generally apply to productions for which development commences on or after today. As well, a production corporation may elect that the proposed rules apply to productions for which labour expenditures were first incurred in the taxation year of the corporation that includes today.

Backgrounder

The Government introduced the Canadian Film or Video Production Tax Credit ("CFVPTC") in the 1995 budget. The credit is equal to 25% of the eligible labour costs of a Canadian-controlled production corporation for films that have high Canadian content.

In the February 2000 budget, the Government indicated that the rules and administration of the CFVPTC would be simplified and would reflect more closely the original objectives of the eligibility requirements. The 2003 budget promised the continuation of industry consultations on the CFVPTC, with a view to ensuring that intended support levels are maintained.

As a result of the proposals announced today, the maximum amount of Canadian labour cost that qualifies for a tax credit will be increased from 48% to 60% of the total cost of a film or video production. The effect of this change to the "production cost cap" is to increase benefits to productions that have relatively high Canadian labour costs. However, the qualifying labour pool will now exclude amounts paid for the services of non-residents (other than Canadian citizens).

Other details of the proposal include the following:

- It will not be required that only the production corporation hold an interest in the production. It is proposed that the so-called "investor rule" in subsection 125.4(4) disqualify a production for the CFVPTC only where the production or a person or partnership holding an interest in the production is a tax shelter. However, it remains a requirement under the Income Tax Regulations [Reg. 1106(1)"excluded production"(a)(ii)(A) — ed.] that the production corporation have ownership of copyright. This latter provision is currently under review by the Department of Canadian Heritage.
- The equity share of a production of a government agency (including loans that participate in profits) will be treated in the same manner as other forms of government assistance.
- Funding under the Licence Fee Program of the Canadian Television Fund will continue to be exempted from treatment as government assistance.
- Production costs recognized under the CFVPTC are those incurred after the "final script stage" of a production. To reduce uncertainties in interpretation, the commencement time for a production will be defined to allow the possibility for eligible costs to be incurred as early as two years before principal photography begins. Eligible labour expenditures will include those incurred after principal photography begins, plus those incurred after the latest of the following three times:
  1. The time at which the production corporation or its parent company first incurs development labour costs for the development of property of the corporation that is script material on which the production is based.
  2. The first time at which the production corporation or its parent company acquires a right in respect of the story that is the basis of the final script. Such rights might include a published literary work, play or screenplay.
  3. Two years prior to the date on which principal photography begins.

  It is intended that in-house development labour costs of an initial draft of a script, as well as the cost of modifications, should be eligible. These in-house costs could include the cost to hire an independent writer to create a script on the basis of some other story or literary work for which the rights have been acquired by the corporation.

  Existing conditions on eligible labour expenditures will also apply to scriptwriting labour (e.g. the exclusion of amounts determined by reference to profits or revenues). However, the cost to acquire an initial script or any other right referred to above will, like other rights, not qualify. Such an expenditure represents the cost of a property, not a labour expenditure.
- The definition of "Canadian film or video production certificate" in the Act [125.4(1) — ed.] will be amended to remove the requirement for the Minister of Canadian Heritage to provide estimates. Such estimates will still be provided, but only on request.
- It will be clarified that a Canadian film or video production certificate may be revoked in respect of one episode of a television series without affecting the eligibility of other episodes in the series and that, in such a case, the expenditures attributable to that episode do not qualify for the CFVPTC. [See 125.4(6) — ed.]

The new rules will generally apply to productions for which development commences on or after today. As well, the new rules will apply if development commenced before today and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation after 2003. Further, if development commenced before today and the first labour expenditures (as defined under the old rules) were incurred by the corporation in its taxation year that includes today, then the corporation may elect to have the new rules apply. Subject to this election, corporations must continue to claim the CFVPTC under the old rules for productions that qualified under those rules. A production cannot qualify under both schemes.

Further, the amended investor rule will apply to any production for which labour expenditures were incurred after 1997 (to coincide, generally, with the application of the matchable expenditure rules in section 18.1).

(b) services referred to in paragraph (b) of that definition that relate to the post-production stage of the production include only the services that are rendered at that stage by a person who performs the duties of animation cameraman, assistant colourist, assistant mixer, assistant sound-effects technician, boom operator, colourist, computer graphics designer, cutter, developing technician, director of post production, dubbing technician, encoding technician, inspection technician — clean up, mixer, optical effects technician, picture editor, printing technician, projectionist, recording technician, senior editor, sound editor, sound-effects technician, special effects editor, subtitle technician, timer, video-film recorder operator, videotape operator or by a person who performs a prescribed duty; and

(c) that definition does not apply to an amount to which section 37 applies.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(2)(d)

(d) an expenditure incurred in respect of a film or video production by a qualified corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "co-producer") in respect of goods supplied or services rendered by another qualified corporation to the co-producer in respect of the production is not a labour expenditure to the co-producer or, for the purpose of applying of [sic] this section to the co-producer, a cost or capital cost of the production.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(9), proposed to add para. 125.4(2)(d), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to 125.4(1)"assistance".

Technical Notes: A film or video production may be produced jointly by two or more qualified corporations. New paragraph 125.4(2)(d) is added to ensure that only one qualified corporation may claim a CFVPTC in respect of any particular expenditure. Where another qualified corporation supplies goods to or renders services for or on behalf of the taxpayer corporation, new paragraph 125.4(2)(d) provides that the related expenditure by the taxpayer is not a labour expenditure, a cost or capital cost of the production to the taxpayer. This provision does not affect the calculation of the cost of the production for other purposes of the Act.

History [subsec. 125.4(2)]: Para. 125.4(2)(c) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 115, applicable after November 1999.

(3) Tax credit — Where

(a) a qualified corporation for a taxation year files with its return of income for the year

(i) a Canadian film or video production certificate issued in respect of a Canadian film or video production of the corporation,

(ii) a prescribed form containing prescribed information, and

(iii) each other document prescribed in respect of the production, and

(b) the principal filming or taping of the production began before the end of the year, the corporation is deemed to have paid on its balance-due day for the year an amount on account of its tax payable under this Part for the year equal to 25% of its qualified labour expenditure for the year in respect of the production.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.94) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 125.4(4) — No credit where investor can claim deduction; 125.4(5) — Credit constitutes assistance for purposes of the Act generally; 125.4(6) — Credit lost retroactively if certificate revoked; 125.5(4) — No film/video production services credit if Canadian film/video credit is available under 125.4; 152(1)(b) — Assessment of credit; 157(3)(e) — Reduction in monthly instalment to reflect credit; 163(2)(f) — Penalty for false statement or omission; 164(1)(a)(ii) — Refund of credit before assessment; 220(6) — Assignment of refund permitted.

History: The closing words of subsec. 125.4(3) amended by 1997, c. 25, s. 34, applicable to 1996 et seq. The closing words formerly read:

> the corporation is deemed to have paid, on the day referred to in paragraph 157(1)(b) on or before which the corporation would be required to pay the remainder of its tax payable under this Part for the year if such a remainder were payable, an amount on account of its tax payable under this Part for the year equal to 25% of its qualified labour expenditure for the year in respect of the production.

(4) Exception — This section does not apply to a Canadian film or video production where an investor, or a partnership in which an investor has an interest, directly or indirectly, may deduct an amount in respect of the production in computing its income for any taxation year.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(4)

(4) Exception — This section does not apply to a Canadian film or video production if the production — or an interest in a person or partnership that has, directly or indirectly, an interest in, or for civil law a right in, the production — is a tax shelter investment for the purpose of section 143.2.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(10), proposed to amend subsec. 125.4(4) to read as above, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after November 14, 2003; and

(b) in respect of a film or video production in respect of which a corporation has, in a return of income filed before November 14, 2003, claimed an amount under subsec. 125.4(3) in respect of a labour expenditure incurred after 1997.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(4) provides that a Canadian film or video production tax credit is not available for a production if an investor may deduct an amount in respect of the production in computing its income for any taxation year. An investor is defined in subsection 125.4(1) to include, generally, any person, other than a prescribed person, that does not carry on a film or video production basis in Canada on a substantial basis.

Subsection 125.4(4) is amended concurrently with the repeal of the definition "investor", to deny the CFVPTC only in circumstances where the production or a person or partnership holding an interest in the production is a tax shelter investment for the purpose of section 143.2.

However, section 1106 of the Income Tax Regulations includes a requirement that, for a film or video production to qualify as a Canadian film or video production eligible for the CFVPTC, a prescribed taxable Canadian corporation must retain worldwide ownership of copyright.

Dept. of Finance news release 2003-058, Nov. 14, 2003: See under 125.4(2).

(5) When assistance received — For the purposes of this Act other than this section, and for greater certainty, the amount that a corporation is deemed under subsection (3) to have paid for a taxation year is assistance received by the corporation from a government immediately before the end of the year.

Related Provisions: 12(1)(x) — Inclusion of assistance in income; 13(7.4) — Reduction in capital cost of depreciable property to reflect assistance; 53(2)(k) — Reduction in ACB of capital property to reflect assistance.

(6) Revocation of a certificate — A Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production may be revoked by the Minister of Canadian Heritage where

(a) an omission or incorrect statement was made for the purpose of obtaining the certificate, or

(b) the production is not a Canadian film or video production, and, for the purpose of subparagraph (3)(a)(i), a certificate that has been revoked is deemed never to have been issued.

Proposed Amendment — 125.4(6)

(6) Revocation of a certificate — If an omission or incorrect statement was made for the purpose of obtaining a Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production, or if the production is not a Canadian film or video production,

(a) the Minister of Canadian Heritage may

(i) revoke the certificate, or

(ii) if the certificate was issued in respect of productions included in an episodic television series, revoke the certificate in respect of one or more episodes in the series;

(b) for greater certainty, for the purposes of this section, the expenditures and cost of production in respect of productions included in an episodic television series that relate to an episode in the series in respect of which a certificate has been revoked are not attributable to a Canadian film or video production; and

(c) for the purpose of subparagraph (3)(a)(i), a certificate that has been revoked is deemed never to have been issued.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(11), proposed to amend subsec. 125.4(6) to read as above, applicable after November 14, 2003.

Technical Notes: Subsection 125.4(6) provides that a Canadian film or video production certificate in respect of a production may be revoked by the Minister of Canadian Heritage. The revocation of a certificate may occur if an incorrect statement or an omission was made in order to obtain the certificate, or if the production is not a Canadian film or video production. A revoked certificate is considered never to have been issued, so a Canadian film or video production tax credit under new subsection 125.4(3) cannot be claimed in respect of the decertified production.

Subsection 125.4(6) is amended, applicable after November 14, 2003, to clarify that a Canadian film or video production certificate may be revoked in respect of one episode of a television series without affecting the eligibility of other episodes in the series and that, in such a case, the expenditures attributable to that episode do not qualify for the CFVPTC.

Related Provisions: 241(3.3) — Disclosure to public of information on revoked certificate.

Proposed Addition — 125.4(7)

(7) Guidelines — The Minister of Canadian Heritage shall issue guidelines respecting the circumstances under which the conditions in paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition of "Canadian film or video production certificate" in subsection (1) are satisfied. For greater certainty, these guidelines are not statutory instruments as defined in the Statutory Instruments Act.

Application: Former Bill C-10 (2007) (Part 2 — technical), subsec. 120(12), proposed to add subsec. 125.4(7), applicable in respect of film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage after December 20, 2002, except that in respect of those film or video productions in respect of which certificates are issued by the Minister of Canadian Heritage before 2004, the reference to "paragraphs (a) and (b)" in subsec. 125.4(7) is to be read as "subparagraphs (a)(i) and (ii)".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 21, 2003:

Dear Bill:

As you know, the CCRA has planned for some time to announce a significant change in its administrative practices relating to the foreign tax credits available to Canadian banks and other lending institutions. . . . We very much appreciate your co-operation in this regard, and I am writing now to update you on the progress of our work.

The transactions that give rise to this issue are loans by a resident of Canada to a non-resident, and the resulting receipt by the resident of interest income. If the non-resident borrower's country of residence imposes a withholding tax (as Canada itself often would in the reverse case), it is appropriate in policy terms that Canada provides some foreign tax credit for the tax. Indeed, if Canada has a tax treaty with the country in question, the tax treaty generally designates the interest income to be from a source in that other country, and Canada is required under the treaty to provide a credit.

The difficulty arises where there is no such treaty obligation. If the Canadian-resident lender earns the interest as income from carrying on a business in Canada, it is not clear that the interest has a foreign source. If it does not have a foreign source, it will not give rise to a foreign tax credit. This would be the result despite the fact that, as I have noted, we impose withholding taxes generally with the expectation that they will be creditable in the recipient's country of residence.

Again, thank you for the patience you have shown in this matter. With your continued co-operation, we hope to be able to clear it off both our agendas within a reasonable time.

Yours sincerely,

[Senior Assistant Deputy Minister] Stephen R. Richardson

(4.1) No economic profit — If a taxpayer acquires a property, other than a capital property, at any time after February 23, 1998 and it is reasonable to expect at that time that the taxpayer will not realize an economic profit in respect of the property for the period that begins at that time and ends when the taxpayer next disposes of the property, the total amount of all income or profits taxes (referred to as the "foreign tax" for the purpose of subsection 20(12.1)) in respect of the property for the period, and in respect of related transactions, paid by the taxpayer for any year to the government of any country other than Canada, is not included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for any taxation year.

Proposed Addition — 126(4.11)–(4.13)

(4.11) Denial of foreign tax credit [artificial foreign tax credit generators] — If a taxpayer is a member of a partnership, any income or profits tax paid to the government of a particular country other than Canada — in respect of the income of the partnership for a period during which the taxpayer's direct or indirect share of the income of the partnership under the income tax laws (referred to in subsection (4.12) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country other than Canada under the laws of which any income of the partnership is subject to income taxation, is less than the taxpayer's direct or indirect share of the income for the purposes of the Act — is not included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for any taxation year.

(4.12) Exceptions — For the purposes of subsection (4.11), a taxpayer is not to be considered to have a lesser direct or indirect share of the income of a partnership under the relevant foreign tax law than for the purposes of the Act solely because of one or more of the following:

(a) a difference between the relevant foreign tax law and the Act in the manner of

(i) computing the income of the partnership, or

(ii) allocating the income of the partnership because of the admission to, or withdrawal from, the partnership of any of its members;

(b) the treatment of the partnership as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law; or

(c) the fact that the taxpayer is not treated as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law.

(4.13) Tiered partnerships — For the purposes of subsections (4.11) and (4.12), if a taxpayer is (or is deemed by this subsection to be) a member of a particular partnership that is a member of another partnership, the taxpayer is deemed to be a member of the other partnership.

Related Provisions: 91(4.4) — Parallel rules.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 3 — other amendments), subsec. 80(1), will add subsecs. 126(4.11) to (4.13), applicable to income or profits tax paid for taxation years of a taxpayer that end after March 4, 2010, except that, for taxation years of the taxpayer that end on or before August 27, 2010,

(a) subsec. 126(4.11) is to be read as follows:

(4.11) If a taxpayer is a member of a partnership, any income or profits tax paid to the government of a particular country other than Canada — in respect of the income of the partnership for a period during which the taxpayer's share of the income of the partnership under the income tax laws (referred to in subsection (4.12) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country other than Canada under the laws of which the income of the partnership is subject to income taxation, is less than the taxpayer's share of the income for the purposes of the Act — is not included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business- income tax for any taxation year.

(b) the opening words of subsec. 126(4.12) are to be read as follows:

(4.12) For the purposes of subsection (4.11), a taxpayer is not to be considered to have a lesser share of the income of a partnership under the relevant foreign tax law than for the purposes of the Act solely because of one or more of the following:

(c) s. 126 is to be read without reference to its subsec. (4.13).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsections 126(4.11) to (4.13), together with new rules in subsections 91(4.1) to (4.5) and section 5907 of the Regulations, are intended to address tax schemes established by taxpayers with the intent of creating foreign tax credits and similar deductions for foreign tax the burden of which is not, in fact, borne by the taxpayer. For more details about these schemes, see the commentary on subsections 91(4.1) to (4.5).

New subsection 126(4.11) denies foreign tax credits ("FTCs") in respect of the income of a partnership in certain circumstances. These circumstances would generally arise where an investment in a partnership that is characterized as an equity investment for the purposes of the Act is characterized as a debt instrument issued by the partnership, or another entity, under the relevant foreign tax law.

More specifically, subsection 126(4.11) provides that this FTC denial rule will apply where the taxpayer is considered to have a lesser direct or indirect share of the partnership's income under the relevant foreign tax law than it is considered to have under the Act. Note that the reference to an "indirect" share is intended to address situations where the taxpayer may, under foreign and Canadian tax law, be considered to have the same level of partnership interest in an upper-tier partnership, but a different level of interest in a partnership of which the upper-tier partnership is a member.

New subsection 126(4.12) ensures that certain factors will not be taken into account in determining whether subsection 126(4.11) will apply to a particular situation. This exception will apply where one or more of the enumerated factors could otherwise be interpreted as invoking its application and there are no other factors that would trigger the application of the rule. The enumerated factors are, essentially,

- differences in the computation or, in certain circumstances, the allocation of partnership income as between the relevant foreign tax law and the Act,
- the treatment of the partnership as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law, and
- the treatment of the member as a fiscally transparent entity under the relevant foreign tax law.

New subsection 126(4.13) ensures that, for purposes of subsections 126(4.11) and (4.12), a taxpayer that is a member of an upper-tier partnership will also be considered to be a member of any partnership of which such upper-tier partnership is a direct or indirect member.

The definitions "business-income tax" and "non-business-income tax" in subsection 126(7) are amended to ensure they are also subject to new subsections 126(4.11) to (4.13).

New subsections 126(4.11) to (4.13) and the amendments to the definitions "business-income tax" and "non-business-income tax" in subsection 126(7) apply to income or profits tax paid for taxation years of a taxpayer that end after March 4, 2010. However, there are transitional rules for taxation years that end on or before August 27, 2010.

Example

Assumptions

1. USco, a U.S. resident corporation, incorporates and capitalizes two U.S. resident subsidiary corporations (Sub 1 and Sub 2).

2. Sub 1 and Sub 2 form and capitalize a partnership (the "Partnership") governed by the laws of Nevada. Sub 1 owns a 99% interest in the partnership, while Sub 2 owns a 1% interest.

3. The Partnership lends all of the funds it receives in 2. back to USco.

4. The Partnership elects to be treated as a U.S. corporation for U.S. tax purposes and is not part of the U.S. consolidated group that includes USco. Sub 1 and Sub 2.

5. Canco purchases, with cash, a 39% share of Sub 1's interest in the Partnership. The purchase is subject to an agreement that obligates Sub 1 to repurchase that 39% partnership interest at a fixed price and time in the future.

6. Sub 1 directly or indirectly loans the funds received in 5. back to Canco.

7. Under U.S. tax law, Canco's purchase of the partnership interest for cash is treated as a loan to Sub 1, which is considered to still own a 99% interest in the Partnership.

8. The Partnership pays 35% tax on the interest income it earns from USco.

Analysis

Canco is considered under U.S. tax law not to own any interest in the Partnership. As such, new subsection 126(4.11) would apply to deny any FTC claim in respect of the 35% U.S. tax paid in respect of the Partnership's income. Although the Partnership is treated as a corporation under U.S. tax law, even if it were treated as a partnership under U.S. tax law, subsection 126(4.11) would still apply. As such, new paragraph 126(4.12)(b) will not protect the partnership from the application of the FTC denial rule.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Foreign Tax Credit Generators

The Canadian income tax system generally taxes Canadian residents on their worldwide income. However, in recognition of the fact that foreign countries may also assert the right to tax income earned in their territory by a Canadian resident, Canada generally provides a credit for foreign income taxes paid in respect of such income. This foreign tax credit (FTC) is aimed at relieving Canadian residents from double taxation.

Similar relief is provided in the computation of the income of a foreign affiliate that is subject to tax in the hands of its Canadian shareholder. This relief is provided either through the foreign accrual tax (FAT) mechanism, in the case of the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of a controlled foreign affiliate, or through the underlying foreign tax (UFT) mechanism, in the case of dividend distributions out of taxable surplus.

Some Canadian corporations have recently been engaging in schemes, often referred to as "foreign tax credit generators", that are designed to shelter tax otherwise payable in respect of interest income on loans made, indirectly, to foreign corporations. These schemes artificially create foreign taxes that are claimed by the Canadian corporation as a FTC, or a FAT or UFT deduction, in order to offset Canadian tax otherwise payable.

There are two main categories of these schemes, and many variations within these categories. The first category involves the use of a foreign partnership, the second involves the use of a foreign corporation that is intended to qualify as a foreign affiliate. The main thrust of all of these schemes is to exploit asymmetry, as between the tax laws of Canada and those of a foreign country, in the characterization of the Canadian corporation's direct or indirect investment in a foreign entity earning the income that is subject to the foreign tax.

These foreign tax credit generator schemes generally involve a complex series of transactions which, in substance, amount to a Canadian corporation making a loan to a corporation resident in a foreign jurisdiction that taxes on the basis of the substantive effect of the transaction, while relying on Canadian tax law looking only to the form of the transaction. The form is that of an investment by the Canadian corporation in a foreign special purpose entity which pays full foreign tax on an amount of income that is, in part, the return derived on the Canadian taxpayer's investment. However, an offsetting tax reduction is generated in respect of that return within the foreign corporation's group. If the Canadian corporation had instead made a simple loan to the foreign corporation, the interest income on that loan would generally not be subject to any foreign tax. As such, no FTC, nor any UFT or FAT deduction, would be available in Canada and full Canadian tax would be levied on the interest income in respect of that loan. By using these foreign tax credit generator schemes, the foreign corporation receives the same substantive foreign tax treatment as it would for a simple borrowing but the Canadian corporation is able to claim an FTC, or a UFT or FAT deduction, in order to partly or fully offset its Canadian tax otherwise payable in respect of its interest income. The Canadian tax savings are generally shared between the Canadian lender and the foreign borrower in determining the terms of the loan and related matters.

Although the Government believes that these foreign tax credit schemes can be successfully challenged under existing rules in the Income Tax Act, the magnitude of this problem warrants greater assurance through specific and immediate legislative action. Consequently, Budget 2010 proposes measures that will deny claims for FTCs, and FAT and UFT deductions, in circumstances in which the income tax law of the jurisdiction levying the foreign income tax, or another relevant jurisdiction, considers the Canadian corporation to have a lesser direct or indirect interest in the foreign special purpose entity than the Canadian corporation is considered to have for the purposes of the Income Tax Act. This measure should generally put the Canadian corporation in the same tax position as if it had made a simple loan to the foreign corporation.

This measure is proposed to be effective for foreign taxes incurred in respect of taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. The Government will be accepting comments in the finalization of the legislation to implement this measure and encourages stakeholders to submit any such comments before May 4, 2010.

(4.2) Short-term securities acquisitions — If at any particular time a taxpayer disposes of a property that is a share or debt obligation and the period that began at the time the taxpayer last acquired the property and ended at the particular time is one year or less, the amount included in business-income tax or non-business-income tax paid by the taxpayer for a particular taxation year on account of all taxes (referred to in this subsection and subsections (4.3) and 161(6.1) as the "foreign tax") that are

(a) paid by the taxpayer in respect of dividends or interest in respect of the period that are included in computing the taxpayer's income from the property for any taxation year,

(b) otherwise included in business-income tax or non-business-income tax for any taxation year, and

(c) similar to the tax levied under Part XIII shall, subject to subsection (4.3), not exceed the amount determined by the formula

where

A is 40%, if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in business-income tax, and 30%, if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in non-business-income tax,

Proposed Amendment — 126(4.2)A

(a) if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in business-income tax, the total of

(i) that proportion of 26.5% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2011 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and

(ii) that proportion of 25% that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 2011 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and

(b) if the foreign tax would otherwise be included in non-business-income tax, the total of

(i) if the taxpayer is a corporation that is a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the taxation year, that proportion of 28% that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 2010 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and

(ii) if the taxpayer is not a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the taxation year, the total of

(A) that proportion of 16.5% that the number of days in the taxation year that are in 2011 is of the number of days in the taxation year, and

(B) that proportion of 15% that the number of days in the taxation year that are after 2011 is of the number of days in the taxation year,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 30(1), will amend the description of A in subsec. 126(4.2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 126 provides rules under which a taxpayer may deduct, from tax otherwise payable, amounts that have been paid in respect of foreign tax. Subsection 126(4.2) limits the foreign tax credit in respect of dividends or interest on a share or debt obligation held by the taxpayer for one year or less. The tax credit is limited to the amount of Canadian tax that would be payable at a notional rate on the gross income from a foreign country in which the tax was paid. The rule applies to foreign taxes on dividends or interest that are similar to the non-resident withholding tax levied on non-residents of Canada under Part XIII. The rule limits the amount of foreign tax included in the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax to 40% (in the former case) or 30% (in the latter case) of the taxpayer's gross profit from the share or debt. The difference in rates reflects the fact that non-business foreign income of a corporate taxpayer resident in Canada is typically taxable by a province, in which case the taxpayer is entitled to a 10% abatement under subsection 124(1). Foreign business income earned through a permanent establishment outside Canada is not typically taxable by a province. As part of a series of amendments reflecting reductions in corporate income tax rates, as well as the elimination as of January 1, 2008 of the surtax that was imposed on corporations, the description of A is amended to adjust the factors for foreign business income and non-business income taxes.

B is the total of the taxpayer's proceeds from the disposition of the property at the particular time and the amount of all dividends or interest from the property in respect of the period included in computing the taxpayer's income for any taxation year,

C is the total of the cost at which the taxpayer last acquired the property and any outlays or expenses made or incurred by the taxpayer for the purpose of disposing of the property at the particular time,

D is the amount of foreign tax that would otherwise be included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for the particular year, and

E is the total amount of foreign tax that would otherwise be included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax for all taxation years.

(4.3) Exceptions — Subsection (4.2) does not apply to a property of a taxpayer

(a) that is a capital property;

(b) that is a debt obligation issued to the taxpayer that has a term of one year or less and that is held by no one other than the taxpayer at any time;

(c) that was last acquired by the taxpayer before February 24, 1998; or

(d) in respect of which any foreign tax is, because of subsection (4.1), not included in computing the taxpayer's business-income tax or non-business-income tax.

(a) a disposition or acquisition of property deemed to be made by subsection 10(12) or (13), 14(14) or (15) or 45(1), section 70 or 128.1, paragraph 132.2(1)(f), subsection 138(11.3), 142.5(2) or 142.6(1.1) or (1.2), paragraph 142.6(1)(b) or subsection 149(10) is not a disposition or acquisition, as the case may be; and

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 126(4.4) directs that certain dispositions and acquisitions of property be ignored for the purposes of the foreign tax credit limitations in subsections 126(4.1) and (4.2) and the definition of "economic profit" in subsection 126(7). (iii) to which subsections 87(4) and (8) apply, of old shares in exchange for new shares,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 30(2), will amend subpara. 126(5)(a)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Ordinarily, the only foreign taxes that may be credited against tax under Part I of the Act are income or profits taxes. Subsection 126(5), together with several definitions in subsection 126(7), treat certain levies imposed by a foreign government in connection with oil and gas businesses as income or profits taxes paid to that government. The general effect of that subsection is to treat a taxpayer's "production tax amount" as a foreign income or profits tax, subject to a maximum of 40% of the taxpayer's income from the business in question. The 40% rate is an approximation of the Canadian corporate income tax rate, and is based on the fact that foreign business income earned through a permanent establishment outside Canada is typically not taxable by a province. As part of a series of amendments reflecting reductions in corporate income tax rates, as well as the elimination as of January 1, 2008 of the surtax that was imposed on corporations, subparagraph 126(5)(a)(i) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income.

(ii) the total of all amounts that would, but for this subsection, be income or profits taxes paid in the year in respect of the business to the government of the taxing country, and

History: Subsec. 126(5) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 117(12), applicable to taxation years of a taxpayer that begin after the earlier of

(a) December 31, 1999; and

(b) where, for the purposes of this subsec., a date is designated in writing by the taxpayer and the designation is filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, the later of

(i) the date so designated, and

(ii) December 31, 1994.

Subsec. 126(5) formerly read:

(5) Foreign tax — A tax paid to the government of a country other than Canada or to the government of a state, province or other political subdivision of such a country may, subject to prescribed conditions, be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to be an income or profits tax paid to the government of that country.

(5.1) Deductions for specified capital gains — Where in a taxation year an individual has claimed a deduction under section 110.6 in computing the individual's taxable income for the year, for the purposes of this section the individual shall be deemed to have claimed the deduction under section 110.6 in respect of such taxable capital gains or portion thereof as the individual may specify in the individual's return of income required to be filed pursuant to section 150 for the year or, where the individual has failed to so specify, in respect of such taxable capital gains as the Minister may specify in respect of the taxpayer for the year.

Related Provisions: See Related Provisions at end of s. 126.

(6) Rules of construction — For the purposes of this section,

(a) the government of a country other than Canada includes the government of a state, province or other political subdivision of that country;

(b) where a taxpayer's income for a taxation year is in whole or in part from sources in more than one country other than Canada, subsections (1) and (2) shall be read as providing for separate deductions in respect of each of the countries other than Canada; and

(c) if any income from a source in a particular country would be tax-exempt income but for the fact that a portion of the income is subject to an income or profits tax imposed by the government of a country other than Canada, the portion is deemed to be income from a separate source in the particular country.

Proposed Addition — 126(6)(d)

(d) if, in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year from a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada, an amount is included in respect of interest paid or payable to the taxpayer by a person resident in a country other than Canada, and the taxpayer has paid to the government of that other country a non-business income tax for the year with respect to the amount, the amount is, in applying the definition "qualifying incomes" in subsection (7) for the purpose of subsection (1), deemed to be income from a source in that other country.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 81(5), will add para. 126(6)(d), applicable to amounts received after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 126 permits a taxpayer to claim a foreign tax credit. Subsection 126(1) sets out the rules for claiming the credit in respect of foreign non-business-income tax — that is, the foreign taxes imposed on investment income and other categories of foreign source non-business income. A credit in respect of foreign taxes on business income is provided under subsection 126(2).

Subsection 126(1) has been interpreted [by the CRA in IT-270R2 para. 24 — ed.] to allow a non-business foreign tax credit for non-business foreign tax paid on interest income earned abroad by a Canadian business that does not carry on business in the foreign jurisdiction, and therefore is not eligible for a business foreign tax credit. In order to ensure that the credit continues to be available in these situations, subsection 126(6), which contains interpretation rules that apply to the section, is amended to add new paragraph 126(6)(d). New paragraph 126(6)(d) deems foreign interest income earned from a business carried on in Canada, and for which the business has paid a non-business foreign tax to a country other than Canada, to be from a source in that other country. Therefore, if a taxpayer includes in its Canadian business income for the year foreign interest income, and has paid foreign tax with respect to this amount, the taxpayer will be eligible to claim a non-business foreign tax credit subject to the limits set out in section 126.

(1) and (2) — For greater certainty, where a taxpayer's income for a taxation year is in whole or in part from sources in more than one country other than Canada, subsections (1) and (2) shall be read as providing for separate deductions in respect of each of the countries other than Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 127(3) opening words

(3) [Political] Contributions to registered parties and candidates — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is the eligible amount of a monetary contribution that is referred to in the Canada Elections Act and that is made by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party, a registered association or a candidate, as those terms are defined in that Act,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 83(5), will amend the opening words of subsec. 127(3) to read as above, applicable to monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that for monetary contributions made before 2004, the expression "to a registered party, a registered association or a candidate" is to be read as "to a registered party or a candidate".

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 127(3) provides a tax credit to a taxpayer in respect of amounts contributed to a registered party or to a candidate. (3) [Political] Contributions to registered parties, candidates and Senate nominees — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is a monetary contribution made under the Canada Elections Act or the Senate Appointment Consultations Act by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party, a provincial division of a registered party, a registered association or a candidate, as those terms are defined in the Canada Elections Act, or to a nominee as that term is defined in the Senate Appointment Consultations Act,

Application: Former Bill C-20 (2007; requires re-introduction), subsec. 125(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 127(3) to read as above, in force six months after Royal Assent. On the later of the coming into force of former Bill C-10 and this amendment, the opening words are amended to read as follows:

> (3) Contributions to registered parties, candidates and Senate nominees — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts, each of which is the eligible amount of a monetary contribution made under the Canada Elections Act or the Senate Appointment Consultations Act by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party, a provincial division of a registered party, a registered association or a candidate, as those terms are defined in the Canada Elections Act, or to a nominee as that term is defined in the Senate Appointment Consultations Act,

If subsec. 125(1) of former Bill C-20 comes into force before or on the same day as former Bill C-10, then on the date of Royal Assent for Bill C-10, the wording immediately above is applicable to monetary contributions made after December 20, 2002, except that, for monetary contributions made before 2004, the expression "to a registered party, a provincial division of a registered party, a registered association or a candidate" is to be read as "to a registered party or a candidate".

(b) when that total exceeds $400 and does not exceed $750, $300 plus 50% of the amount by which that total exceeds $400, and

(c) when that total exceeds $750, the lesser of

(i) $650, and

(ii) $475 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the total exceeds $750, if payment of each monetary contribution that is included in that total is evidenced by filing with the Minister a receipt, signed by the agent authorized under that Act to accept that monetary contribution, that contains prescribed information.

Proposed Amendment — 127(3) closing words

if payment of each monetary contribution that is included in that total is evidenced by filing with the Minister a receipt that contains prescribed information, signed by the agent authorized under one of those Acts to accept that monetary contribution.

Application: Former Bill C-20 (2007; requires re-introduction), subsec. 125(2), will amend the closing words of subsec. 127(3) to read as above, in force six months after Royal Assent.

Related Provisions: 18(1)(n) — No deduction from income for political contributions; 120(4) — "Tax otherwise payable under this Part"; 127(3.1) — Issue of receipts; 127(3.2) — Authorization required for receipts from registered associations; 127(3.3) — No receipts to be issued while judicial deregistration of party is pending; 127(4) — Interpretation; 127(4.2) — Allocation of amount contributed among partners; 230.1 — Books and records relating to political contributions; 248(30)–(33) — Eligible amount of monetary contribution; 248(41) — Donation value deemed nil if taxpayer does not inform donee of circumstances requiring reduction.

History: Subsec. 127(3) amended by 2003, c. 19, s. 73, applicable to monetary contributions made in taxation years ending after 2003, except that

(a) for monetary contributions made in 2004 taxation years but before the day on which the amendment to s. 230.1 comes into force [Jan. 1, 2004], the preamble to subsec. 127(3) is to be read by replacing "to a registered party, a registered association, or a candidate" with "to a registered party or a candidate";

(b) if the day on which the amendment to s. 230.1 comes into force [Jan. 1, 2004] occurs during an election period, within the meaning assigned by the Canada Elections Act, the preamble to subsec. 127(3) is to be read, in respect of that election, as described in (a) above.

This transitional rule in para. (a) above is technically meaningless because it does not refer to the words "a provincial division of a registered party", which were added at the Commons committee stage before the 2003 election financing bill received Third Reading in the House of Commons.

Subsec. 127(3) formerly read:

(3) Contributions to registered parties and candidates [political contribution credit] — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is a monetary contribution made by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party or to a candidate whose nomination has been confirmed in an election of a member or members to serve in the House of Commons of Canada (in this section referred to as "the total"),

(a) 75% of the total, if the total does not exceed $200,

(b) $150 plus 50% of the amount by which the total exceeds $200, if the total exceeds $200 and does not exceed $550, or

(c) the lesser of

(i) $325 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the total exceeds $550, and

(ii) $500,

if payment of each monetary contribution that is included in the total is proven by filing a receipt with the Minister, signed by a registered agent of the registered party or by the official agent of the candidate whose nomination has been confirmed, as the case may be, that contains prescribed information.

Subsec. 127(3) amended by 2000, c. 9, s. 560, applicable to 2000 et seq. except that, in its application to money contributions made after 1999 and before September 1, 2000 (the in-force date of 2000, c. 9), the references in 127(3) to "a monetary contribution made", "monetary contribution" and a "candidate whose nomination has been confirmed" shall be read as references to "an amount contributed", "amount contributed" and "an officially nominated candidate", respectively. Subsec. 127(3) formerly read:

(3) There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable by a taxpayer under this Part for a taxation year in respect of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount contributed by the taxpayer in the year to a registered party or to an officially nominated candidate at an election of a member or members to serve in the House of Commons of Canada (in this section referred to as "the total"),

(a) 75% of the total if the total does not exceed $100,

(b) $75 plus 50% of the amount by which the total exceeds $100 if the total exceeds $100 and does not exceed $550, or

(c) the lesser of

(i) $300 plus 33⅓% of the amount by which the total exceeds $550 if the total exceeds $550, and

(ii) $500,

if payment of each amount contributed that is included in the total is proven by filing a receipt with the Minister, signed by a registered agent of the registered party or by the official agent of the officially nominated candidate, as the case may be, that contains prescribed information.

History: Subsec. 127(3.2) amended by 2003, c. 19, s. 73, applicable to monetary contributions made in taxation years ending after 2003. The subsec. formerly read:

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Scientific Research and Experimental Development Program

In October 2010, the Government mandated the Expert Review Panel on Research and Development to review all federal support for business research and development with a view to maximizing the effect of federal programs that contribute to innovation and create economic opportunities for business. The expert panel submitted its report to the Government in October 2011 [see rd-review.ca — ed.]. It makes a series of recommendations that call for a simplified and more focused approach to the Government's support for business research and development, including the Scientific Research and Experimental Development (SR&ED) tax incentive program. To support the key objectives identified by the expert panel, Budget 2012 proposes several changes to the SR&ED tax incentive program to make it simpler, and more cost effective and predictable.

The SR&ED tax incentive program provides broad-based support for SR&ED performed in every industrial sector in Canada, and supports small businesses in the performance of SR&ED. Under the SR&ED program, allowable current and capital expenditures are fully deductible [37(1) — ed.]. In addition, qualified SR&ED expenditures incurred in Canada are included in computing a taxpayer's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of each taxation year [127(9)"SR&ED qualified expenditure pool" — ed.]. In general, the amount of this pool at the end of a taxation year is equal to all the qualified expenditures incurred by the taxpayer in the year, plus any amount transferred to the taxpayer in respect of certain non-arm's length SR&ED contracts less any amount transferred by the taxpayer in respect of such contracts to another person. The balance in the SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of a taxation year is generally eligible for an investment tax credit. There are two investment tax credit rates for SR&ED qualified expenditure pool balances. The general rate is 20% [127(9)"investment tax credit"(a.1) — ed.] and there is an enhanced rate of 35% for eligible Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs) [127(10.1) — ed.].

CCPCs are eligible to claim the enhanced investment tax credit at the rate of 35% on up to $3 million of qualified SR&ED expenditures annually [127(10.1)(c), 127(10.2) — ed.]. For these taxpayers, unused investment tax credits are refundable [127.1(1) — ed.] in respect of the first $3 million of expenditures each year; current expenditures are eligible for a 100% refund and capital expenditures are eligible for a 40% refund [127.1(2)"refundable investment tax credit" — ed.]. All expenditures above the $3 million limit are eligible for an investment tax credit at the rate of 20% [127(9)"investment tax credit"(a.1) — ed.] and qualify for a 40% refund [127.1(2.01) — ed.]. The $3 million expenditure limit is phased out for CCPCs whose taxable income for the previous taxation year is between $500,000 and $800,000 or whose taxable capital employed in Canada for the previous taxation year is between $10 million and $50 million [127(10.2) — ed.].

SR&ED Investment Tax Credit Rate

Budget 2012 proposes to reduce the general 20% SR&ED investment tax credit rate applicable to SR&ED qualified expenditure pool balances at the end of a taxation year [127(9)"investment tax credit"(a.1) — ed.] to 15%. The 15% investment tax credit rate will apply in respect of taxation years that end after 2013, except that, for a taxation year that includes January 1, 2014, the 5-percentage-point reduction in the investment tax credit rate will be pro-rated based on the number of days in the taxation year that are after 2013. The enhanced 35% SR&ED investment tax credit rate applicable in respect of eligible CCPCs will remain unchanged on up to $3 million of qualified SR&ED expenditures annually [by changing the 15% rate in 127(10.1) to 20% — ed.]

[Table A4.1 in the 2012 Budget projects that this measure will save the federal government $190 million in 2014-15, $285m in 2015-16 and $295m in 2016-17 — ed.]

SR&ED Capital Expenditures

As indicated above, allowable current and capital expenditures in respect of SR&ED are fully deductible [37(1)(a) for current, 37(1)(b) for capital — ed.], and qualifying SR&ED expenditures are eligible for an investment tax credit [127(9)"investment tax credit"(a.1), 127(10.1) — ed.]. Budget 2012 proposes to exclude expenditures of a capital nature (including payments in respect of the use or the right to use property that would, if it were acquired by the taxpayer, be capital property of the taxpayer) from eligibility for SR&ED deductions [Proposed Repeal of 37(1)(b) — ed.] and investment tax credits [Proposed Repeal of 127(9)"qualified expenditure"(a)(i) and (iii), and Proposed Amendment to 127(9)"SR&ED qualified expenditure pool" — ed.].

This measure will apply to property acquired on or after January 1, 2014, and to amounts paid or payable in respect of the use of, or the right to use, property during any period that is after 2013. This measure will also apply to exclude otherwise eligible contract payments made by a taxpayer from benefiting from SR&ED tax incentives to the extent that the payment is in respect of a capital expenditure made in fulfillment of the contract.

Expenditures that have been excluded because of this measure from the SR&ED tax incentives will be accorded the treatment otherwise applicable to such expenditures under the Income Tax Act.

[Table A4.1 in the 2012 Budget projects that this measure will save the federal government $15 million in 2014-15 and $40m in each of 2015-16 and 2016-17 — ed.]

SR&ED Overhead Expenditures

Itemized overhead expenditures directly attributable to the conduct of SR&ED are currently eligible for the SR&ED tax incentives. In lieu of itemizing such overhead expenditures, taxpayers can elect to use a simplified proxy method for the calculation of these expenditures [127(9)"qualified expenditure"(a)(ii), Reg. 2900(4) — ed.]. Under the proxy method, a taxpayer can generally include in the taxpayer's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool for a taxation year, which is eligible for SR&ED investment tax credits, an amount equal to 65% of the total of the eligible portion of salaries and wages of the taxpayer's employees directly engaged in the conduct of SR&ED in Canada in the taxation year.

Budget 2012 proposes to reduce the rate at which the prescribed proxy amount is calculated to 60% (from 65%) for 2013 and to 55% after 2013. The proxy rate that will apply for taxation years that include days in 2012, 2013 or 2014 will be pro-rated based on the number of days in the taxation year that are in each of those calendar years.

[Table A4.1 in the 2012 Budget projects that this measure will save the federal government $10 million in 2013-14, $55m in 2014-15, $95m in 2015-16 and $100m in 2016-17 — ed.]

SR&ED Contract Payments

Where a taxpayer (the payer) contracts to have SR&ED performed by a non-arm's length person (the performer), the total qualified expenditures on which either the performer or the payer can claim SR&ED investment tax credits are currently restricted to the amount of the qualified SR&ED expenditures incurred by the performer in fulfillment of the contract [127(9)"qualified expenditure"(c) — ed.]. These rules ensure that investment tax credits are not earned on the profit element of non-arm's length SR&ED contracts.

In the case of arm's length SR&ED contract payments, however, the payer is currently entitled to SR&ED investment tax credits in respect of the entire amount of the contract payment, while the amount of the contract payment is netted against the qualifying SR&ED expenditures of the performer [127(18) — ed.].

Budget 2012 proposes to disallow from the expenditure base for investment tax credits the profit element of arm's length SR&ED contracts. For simplicity, it is proposed that this be achieved by way of a proxy, under which only 80% of the cost to a payer of arm's length SR&ED contracts will be eligible for SR&ED investment tax credits [Proposed Amendment to 127(9)"qualified expenditure"(a)(ii) — ed.].

This measure will apply to expenditures incurred on or after January 1, 2013.

Consistent with the measures described above concerning SR&ED capital expenditures, the amount of an arm's length contract payment eligible for SR&ED tax incentives for the payer will also exclude any amount paid in respect of a capital expenditure incurred by the performer in fulfillment of the contract. SR&ED contract performers will be required to inform the contract payers of these amounts. Once that measure is in force (beginning in 2014), the exclusion with respect to capital expenditures will reduce the amount of the contract payment before the 80% eligibility ratio is applied.

In addition, the amount that the performer is required to net against its qualifying SR&ED expenditures because of the contract payment will be reduced by the amount received by the performer that is in respect of capital expenditures by the performer.

Expenditures that have been excluded because of this measure from the SR&ED tax incentives will be accorded the treatment otherwise applicable to such expenditures under the Income Tax Act.

[Table A4.1 in the 2012 Budget projects that this measure will save the federal government $25 million in 2013-14, $55m in 2014-15, $60m in 2015-16 and $65m in 2016-17 — ed.]

Contingency Fees [Budget Papers, Chapter 3.1]

The Government announces a study of contingency fees charged by tax preparers.

Small and medium-sized businesses sometimes rely on tax preparers charging on a contingency-fee basis to prepare their SR&ED claims. These fees may be as high as 30% of SR&ED benefits, or even more. The Government is concerned that high contingency fees charged by tax preparers are diminishing the benefits of the SR&ED tax incentive program to Canadian businesses and the economy. In the coming year, the Government will conduct a study, including consultations with taxpayers, to better understand why firms choose to hire consultants on a contingency-fee basis and determine whether action is required.

Administrative Improvements That Enhance the Predictability of the Scientific Research and Experimental Development (SR&ED) Tax Incentive Program [Budget Papers, Chapter 3.2]

Economic Action Plan 2012 announces administrative changes to the SR&ED tax incentive program that will improve its predictability and reduce the tax compliance burden. These initiatives will complement the SR&ED Policy Review Project currently underway, which will consolidate and clarify the administrative policies that are contained in about 70 documents pertaining to the SR&ED tax incentive program.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 22(2), will amend para. (b) of the definition "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsec. 127(9) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes: A "pre-production mining expenditure" qualifies for the 10% investment tax credit, available to a taxpayer that is a taxable Canadian corporation, as provided for in paragraph (a.3) of the definition "investment tax credit."

Generally, a pre-production mining expenditure is a grass roots exploration and pre-production development expenditure in Canada for qualifying minerals. These expenses are described in paragraphs (f) and (g) of the definition of "Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6). Those paragraphs require that the expenses be incurred before a new mine comes into production in reasonable commercial quantities. Qualifying minerals for the credit are diamonds, base or precious metals and industrial minerals that become base or precious metals through refining.

A taxable Canadian corporation which claims an investment tax credit in respect of a pre-production mining expenditure generally must actually incur the expense, in order for the expense to qualify as a pre-production mining expenditure. Specifically, an expense which has been renounced to the taxable Canadian corporation under subsection 66(12.6) does not qualify as a pre-production mining expenditure. The credit is also not allocable by a trust. As well, a member's share of expenses incurred by a partnership does not qualify as a pre-production mining expenditure.

Paragraph (b) of the definition "pre-production mining expenditure" (PPME) in subsection 127(9) is amended to allow for the flow-through of PPME in limited circumstances. In particular:

- new subparagraph (b)(i) allows for the renunciation of PPME by a wholly owned subsidiary to its parent, and
- new subparagraph (b)(ii) provides that a corporation's share of pre-production mining expenditures is deemed by subsection 66(18) to be made, or have been incurred, by the corporation at the end of the fiscal period of a partnership only if,
  - — the corporation is an actively engaged member of the partnership, and
  - — the corporation is a principal-business corporation engaged in mining activities.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 8, 2004:

[xxx], Rio Tinto Canada Inc., Montreal, QC

Dear [xxx]:

We are writing in response to your letter dated March 23, 2004 and further to our meeting on May 25, 2004.

In your letter and in our subsequent meeting you expressed concern regarding the restriction in paragraph (b) of the definition "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(5) [should be 127(9) — ed.] of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). That paragraph excludes an expenditure from qualifying as a pre-production mining expenditure if it is renounced under the terms of a flow-through share agreement.

You have asked us to recommend changes to the Act that would allow pre-production mining expenditures renounced under a flow-through share agreement to qualify for the pre-production tax credit if the flow-through shareholder is a taxable Canadian corporation that owns all the outstanding shares of the corporation that incurred the expenditures.

You advised us that, for commercial reasons, mineral exploration and development activities are frequently carried on through a wholly-owned subsidiary of a mining corporation. You also advised us that the preferred method of financing the subsidiary would generally be through the issuance of flow-through shares. In this case, the subsidiary would not normally have any income or would not be expected to have any income for a considerable period of time and, therefore, would not be in a position to use the pre-production tax credit.

As set out in the March 2003 technical paper titled, "Improving the Income Taxation of the Resource Sector in Canada", the credit was deliberately limited to the taxable Canadian corporation that incurred the expenditures and was not intended to be transferable to another corporation.

However, we agree that pre-production mining expenditures actually incurred by a wholly-owned subsidiary of a taxable Canadian corporation ("parent corporation") and renounced to that corporation should qualify for the pre-production tax credit if the parent corporation is a "principal-business corporation" as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, if the definition were read without reference to paragraphs (a), (a.1), (f), (h) and (i). Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the definition of pre-production mining expenditure be amended, for expenses renounced under a flow-through share agreement entered into after 2004, to provide for this result. While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2009:

Mr. Douglas J. Powrie, Borden Ladner Gervais LLP, Vancouver, BC

Dear Mr. Powrie:

I am writing in response to your letter of May 14, 2007 addressed to Davine Roach and subsequent discussions with officials, of the Tax Legislation Division, regarding the definition of "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I note that, on November 22, 2007, you wrote to the Minister of Finance, the Honourable James Flaherty, inquiring about the status of your letter of May 14, 2007. I apologize for the delay in providing you with a formal response to your submission.

In your correspondence, you express the concern that expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation through a general partnership for the purpose of developing a new mine may not be eligible for the pre-production mining expenditure investment tax credit.

Accordingly, you have asked us to recommend changes to the Act that would confirm that a mining corporation's share of the pre-production mining expenditures incurred by it through a general partnership will qualify for the pre-production mining credit. You submit that these changes would be consistent with the recommended amendment referred to in the letter issued by the Department of Finance in December 2004 that would allow expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation through a flow-through share financing arrangement with its subsidiary to qualify for the credit.

From a tax policy perspective, we agree that a taxable Canadian corporation's share of the pre-production mining expenditures (the "eligible expenditures") incurred through a general partnership should qualify for the credit if,

(a) each member of the partnership would (otherwise because of being a member of the partnership) be a "principal-business corporation" as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, if that definition were read without reference to paragraphs (a), (a.1), (f), (h) and (i) thereof; and

(b) the corporation is a member of the partnership at the time the eligible expenditures are incurred and would not be a specified member of the partnership if the definition "specified member" in subsection 248(1) of the Act were read without reference to subparagraph (b)(ii) thereof.

Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister that the Act be amended, effective for expenditures incurred in fiscal periods of a partnership that end after 2006, to provide for this result.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2009:

Mr. John Gravelle, PriceWaterHouseCoopers LLP, Toronto ON

Dear Mr. Gravelle:

I am writing in response to your letters of April 8, 2009, July 4, 2008 and February 20, 2008 and discussions with officials, of the Tax Legislation Division, regarding the definition of "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I apologize for the delay in providing you with a formal response to your submission. Specifically, you are concerned that pre-production mining expenditures incurred by a principal-business corporation, as defined in subsection 66(15) of the Act, through a general partnership may not be eligible for the pre-production mining expenditure investment tax credits.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Atlantic Investment Tax Credit

The Atlantic Investment Tax Credit (AITC) is a 10% credit available for qualifying acquisitions of new buildings, machinery and equipment, used primarily in farming, fishing, logging, mining, oil and gas, and manufacturing and processing in the Atlantic provinces, the Gaspé Peninsula and their associated offshore regions.

[For "Oil and Gas and Mining Activities", see under 127(9)"specified percentage"(a.1) — ed.]

Electricity Generation Equipment

Equipment is generally eligible for the AITC if the equipment is a qualified property. Electricity generation equipment described in Class 1, 8, 29 or 41, paragraph (c) of Class 43.1 or paragraph (a) of Class 43.2, of Schedule II to the Income Tax Regulations used in the Atlantic region primarily in an eligible activity is a qualified property.

Budget 2012 proposes to improve the neutrality of the AITC by amending the Income Tax Act and section 4600 of the Income Tax Regulations so that qualified property will include certain electricity generation equipment and clean energy generation equipment used primarily in an eligible activity (i.e., farming, fishing, logging, and manufacturing and processing). In particular, "qualified property" will include the following equipment, if it is used in the Atlantic region primarily in an eligible activity set out in paragraph (c) of the definition of "qualified property" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act:

- electricity generation equipment described in Class 17 or 48; and
- clean energy generation and conservation equipment described in Class 43.1 or 43.2.

This measure will apply to assets acquired on or after March 29, 2012 that have not been used or acquired for use before that date, except that the measure will not apply to acquisitions of assets that are used primarily in oil and gas or mining activities.

This measure is not expected to have a significant impact on either the environment or achieving the targets of the Federal Sustainable Development Strategy.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (18)(d), will add para. (a.1) to the definition "specified percentage" in subsec. 127(9), applicable to property acquired after March 28, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Atlantic Investment Tax Credit

The Atlantic Investment Tax Credit (AITC) is a 10% credit available for qualifying acquisitions of new buildings, machinery and equipment, used primarily in farming, fishing, logging, mining, oil and gas, and manufacturing and processing in the Atlantic provinces, the Gaspé Peninsula and their associated offshore regions.

Oil and Gas and Mining Activities Budget

2012 proposes to phase out the AITC for oil and gas and mining activities over a four-year period. In particular, this proposal will apply to assets acquired on or after March 29, 2012 for use in any of the following activities [127(9)"qualified property"(c)(iv)-(xi) — ed.]

- operating an oil or gas well;
- extracting petroleum or natural gas from a natural accumulation of petroleum or natural gas;
- extracting minerals from a mineral resource;
- processing ore from a mineral resource to any stage that is not beyond the prime metal stage or its equivalent;
- processing iron ore from a mineral resource to any stage that is not beyond the pellet stage or its equivalent;
- processing tar sands ore from a mineral resource to any stage that is not beyond the crude oil stage or its equivalent;
- producing industrial minerals;
- processing heavy crude oil recovered from a natural reservoir to a stage that is not beyond the crude oil stage or its equivalent;
- Canadian field processing;
- exploring or drilling for petroleum or natural gas; and
- prospecting or exploring for or developing a mineral resource.

The availability of the AITC for assets acquired for use in other activities will not be affected.

The AITC will apply at a rate of 10% for assets acquired before 2014 for use in any of the activities listed above and at a rate of 5% for such assets acquired in 2014 and 2015 [127(9)"specified percentage"(a.1)(iii) — ed.]. The AITC will not be available for such assets acquired after 2015.

Transitional relief will be provided in recognition of the long timelines involved in some oil and gas and mining projects. The AITC will apply at a rate of 10% for assets acquired by a taxpayer before 2017 [127(9)"specified percentage"(a.1)(ii) — ed.] either:

- under a written agreement entered into by the taxpayer before March 29, 2012; or
- as part of a project phase where
  - — the construction of the project phase was started by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer before March 29, 2012, or
  - — the engineering and design work for the construction of the project phase, as evidenced in writing, was started by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer before March 29, 2012.

For this purpose, a phase of a project [127(9)"project phase" — ed.] is a discrete expansion in the extraction, processing or production capacity of the project to attain the planned capacity level that was the demonstrated intention of the taxpayer immediately before March 29, 2012. Construction undertaken to maintain or restore a capacity level that had been reached before March 29, 2012 is not considered a discrete expansion. Activities such as obtaining permits or regulatory approvals, conducting environmental assessments, community consultations, impact benefit studies and similar activities will not be considered construction or engineering and design work.

Along with other members of the G-20, Canada has committed to rationalize and phase out over the medium-term inefficient fossil fuel subsidies. The Government announced in Budget 2007 and in Budget 2011 the phase-out of tax preferences for oil sands producers, which supports the G-20 commitment and align the tax treatment of oil sands with the conventional oil and gas sector (moreover, the Income Tax Act does not include any tax preferences specific to oil sands producers). The phase out of the AITC for oil and gas and mining sectors builds on these measures and is a further action that the Government is taking in support of the G-20 commitment. The change will also improve the neutrality of the tax system for Canada's resource sector.

Resource development can be associated with a variety of environmental impacts to soil, water and air and, as a result, could have an impact on the goals of the Federal Sustainable Development Strategy. All such activity, however, is subject to applicable federal and provincial environmental regulations, including project-specific environmental assessments where required.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (17)(c), will amend para. (j) of the definition "specified percentage" in subsec. 127(9) to read as above and add para. (k), applicable to expenditures incurred after March 28, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Corporate Mineral Exploration and Development Tax Credit

A corporate tax credit is available at the rate of 10% for pre-production mining expenditures incurred in respect of certain mineral resources in Canada. The term "pre-production mining expenditure" in subsection 127(9) of the Income Tax Act sets out the expenses that are eligible for the credit:

- exploration expenses described in paragraph (f) of the definition of "Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6) of the Income Tax Act; and
- pre-production development expenses described in paragraph (g) of the definition of "Canadian exploration expense".

Qualifying minerals for purposes of the credit are diamonds, base or precious metals and industrial minerals that become base or precious metals through refining.

Budget 2012 proposes to phase out the corporate tax credit for pre-production mining expenditures. The credit will apply at a rate of 10% for exploration expenses incurred in 2012, and at a rate of 5% for such expenses incurred in 2013 [127(9)"specified percentage"(j) — ed.]. The credit will not be available for exploration expenses incurred after 2013.

The corporate tax credit will apply at a rate of 10% for pre-production development expenses incurred before 2014, at a rate of 7% for such expenses incurred in 2014, and at a rate of 4% for such expenses incurred in 2015 [127(9)"specified percentage"(k)(iii) — ed.]. The credit will not be available for pre-production development expenses incurred after 2015.

Additional transitional relief will be provided in recognition of the long timelines involved in developing mines. The corporate tax credit will apply at a rate of 10% for pre-production development expenses incurred by a taxpayer before 2016 either [127(9)"specified percentage"(k)(iii) — ed.]:

- under a written agreement entered into by the taxpayer before March 29, 2012; or
- as part of the development of a new mine where
  - — the construction of the new mine was started by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer before March 29, 2012, or
  - — the engineering and design work for the construction of the new mine, as evidenced in writing, was started by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer before March 29, 2012.

Activities such as obtaining permits or regulatory approvals, conducting environmental assessments, community consultations, impact benefit studies and similar activities will not be considered construction or engineering and design work.

Exploration and pre-production development expenses will continue to qualify as Canadian exploration expenses, and as such will continue to be fully deductible in the year incurred.

Mineral exploration as well as new mining and related processing activity that could follow from successful exploration efforts, can be associated with a variety of environmental impacts to soil, water and air and, as a result, could have an impact on the goals of the Federal Sustainable Development Strategy. All such activity, however, is subject to applicable federal and provincial environmental regulations, including project-specific environmental assessments where required.

(11.7) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this subsection and subsection (11.6).

"adjusted selling cost" to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "supplier") of a property is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is

(a) where the property is purchased from another person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, the lesser of

(i) the cost to the supplier of the property, and

(ii) the adjusted selling cost to the other person or partnership of the property, and

(b) in any other case, the cost to the supplier of the property, and for the purpose of paragraph (b),

(c) where part of the cost to a supplier of a particular property is attributable to another property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

(ii) the adjusted selling cost to the person or the partnership of the other property,

(d) where part of the cost to a supplier of a property is attributable to a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered to the supplier by a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

(ii) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership of rendering the service, and

(e) no part of the cost to a supplier of a property that is attributable to remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier shall be included, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive.

Related Provisions: 127(11.8) — Interpretation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

"adjusted service cost" to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "supplier") of rendering a particular service is the amount determined by the formula:

where

A is the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier for a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered by a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier to the extent that the cost is incurred for the purpose of rendering the particular service

(b) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of rendering the service referred to in that paragraph to the supplier,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier of a property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier

exceeds

(b) the adjusted selling cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of the property, to the extent that the excess relates to the cost of rendering the particular service,

D is the total of all amounts each of which is remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier to the extent that it is included in the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of rendering the particular service and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive;

(a) the cost to a person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "supplier") of rendering a service or providing a property to another person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "recipient") with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length does not include,

(i) where the cost to the recipient of the service rendered or property provided by the supplier would, but for this paragraph, be a cost to the recipient incurred in rendering a particular service or providing a particular property to a person or partnership with which the recipient does not deal at arm's length, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient in rendering the particular service or providing the particular property, be excluded from a cost to the recipient because of this paragraph, and

(ii) in any other case, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient, not be a qualified expenditure of the recipient;

(b) paragraph 69(1)(c) does not apply in determining the cost of a property; and

(c) the leasing of a property is deemed to be the rendering of a service.

History: Subsec. 127(11.8) added by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 30(24), applicable to expenditures incurred in taxation years that begin after 1995.

(12.1) Idem — For the purposes of section 37, where, pursuant to a designation or an allocation from a trust or partnership, an amount is required by subsection (7) or (8) to be added in computing the investment tax credit of a taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's taxation year, the portion thereof that may reasonably be regarded as relating to expenditures of a current nature in respect of scientific research and experimental development that are qualified expenditures shall, at the end of the fiscal period of the trust or partnership, as the case may be, in respect of which the designation or allocation was made, reduce the total of such expenditures of a current nature as may be claimed by the trust or partnership in respect of scientific research and experimental development.

(12.2) Idem — For the purposes of paragraphs 53(2)(c), (h) and (k), where in a taxation year a taxpayer has deducted under subsection (5) an amount that may reasonably be regarded as attributable to amounts included in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer at the end of the year in respect of property acquired, or an expenditure made, in a subsequent taxation year, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have made the deduction under that subsection in that subsequent taxation year.

(12.3) Idem — For the purposes of the determination of J in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6), where, pursuant to a designation by a trust, an amount is required by subsection (7) to be added in computing the investment tax credit of a taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's taxation year, the portion thereof that can reasonably be considered to relate to a qualified Canadian exploration expenditure of the trust for a taxation year shall be deemed to have been received by the trust at the end of its taxation year in respect of which the designation was made as assistance from a government in respect of that expenditure.

(a) the amount specified in the agreement for the purpose of this subsection,

(b) the amount that but for the agreement would be the transferor's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of the particular year, and

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that, if the transferor were dealing at arm's length with the transferee, would be a contract payment

(i) for the performance of scientific research and experimental development for, or on behalf of, the transferee,

(ii) that is paid by the transferee to the transferor on or before the day that is 180 days after the end of the particular year, and

(e) an amount determined in respect of the transferee for the transferee's first taxation year that ends at or after the end of the particular year for the purpose of determining the value of B in the definition "SR&ED qualified expenditure pool" in subsection (9), and where the total of all amounts each of which is an amount specified in an agreement filed with the Minister under this subsection in respect of a particular taxation year of a transferor exceeds the amount that would be the transferor's SR&ED qualified expenditure pool at the end of the particular year if no agreement were filed with the Minister in respect of the particular year, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a) to (c) in respect of each such agreement is deemed to be nil.

(c) the cost, or the portion of the cost, of the particular property is included, or would if this Act were read without reference to subsection (26) be included, in an amount, a percentage of which can reasonably be considered to be included in computing the taxpayer's investment tax credit at the end of the taxation year, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 83(8), will amend paras. 127(27)(b) and (c) to read as above, applicable to dispositions and conversions that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 127(27) provides for the recapture of investment tax credits in respect of property used for scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) where the property is sold or converted to commercial use. This recapture is effected by way of an addition to tax payable of an amount equal to the lesser of

- the amount that can reasonably be considered to have been included in the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property (i.e., the amount that is obtained by multiplying the amount of the qualified expenditure by the ITC rate that applied to that expenditure), and
- the amount that is obtained by multiplying the ITC rate (that applied to the qualified expenditure) by
  - the proceeds of disposition of the particular property (or of property that incorporates the particular property) if the property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer. (See paragraph 127(27)(e) of the Act.)
  - in any other case, the fair market value of the particular property (or the other property) at the time of its conversion or disposition. (See paragraph 127(27)(f).)

Concern has been expressed about the application of subsection 127(27) of the Act in the context of shared-use equipment, only 25% or 50% of the cost of which is a "qualified expenditure" under subsection 127(9) because of subsection 127(11.5). This concern is illustrated by the following example.

Example:

- Year 1: Taxpayer acquires shared-use equipment for $100. The ITC rate is 20% and the taxpayer claims an ITC for first term shared-use-equipment of $5 (20% × $25 [1/4 of its $100 cost under paragraph 127(11.5)(c)]).
- Year 2: Taxpayer claims an ITC for second term shared-use-equipment of $5 (20% × $25 [1/4 of its $100 cost under paragraph 127(11.5)(c)]).
- Year 4: Taxpayer sells the property for $80.
- Recapture under subsection 127(27):

  $10 being the lesser of:

  - $10 (20% × $100 × 50% because the property is second term shared-use-equipment), and
  - $16 (20% × $80 proceeds of disposition).

However, in this example the $16 amount should be $8 given that only a portion (50%) of the cost of the second term shared-use-equipment is a qualified expenditure.

As well, the government is concerned that subsection 127(27) should apply where the disposition or conversion relates to property acquired pursuant to an expenditure that would have been a qualified expenditure incurred in a taxation year but for the application of the 180-day-unpaid-amount rule in subsection 127(26).

To address these concerns, subsection 127(27) is amended in four respects.

First, paragraphs 127(27)(b) and (c) are amended to refer to the "cost, or a portion of the cost, of the particular property" instead of to the "cost of the particular property".

Second, paragraphs 127(27)(b) and (c) are amended to provide that the reference therein to a qualified expenditure included in a taxpayer's investment tax credit be read without reference to subsection 127(26) relating to unpaid amounts.

Application Policies: SR&ED 2005-01: Shared-use equipment.

(d) in the year and after February 23, 1998, the taxpayer converts to commercial use, or disposes of without having previously converted to commercial use, the particular property or another property that incorporates the particular property,

there shall be added to the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year the lesser of the amount that can reasonably be considered to be included in computing the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property and the amount that is the percentage (described in paragraph (c)) of

(e) if the particular property or the other property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer, the proceeds of disposition of that property, and

(f) in any other case, the fair market value of the particular property or the other property at the time of the conversion or disposition.

Proposed Amendment — 127(27) after (d)

there shall be added to the taxpayer's tax otherwise payable under this Part for the year the lesser of

(e) the amount that can reasonably be considered to be included in the taxpayer's investment tax credit at the end of any taxation year, or that would be so included if this Act were read without reference to subsection (26), in respect of the particular property, and

(f) the amount that is the percentage — that is the sum of each percentage described in paragraph (c) that has been applied to compute the taxpayer's investment tax credit in respect of the particular property — of

(i) in the case where the particular property or the other property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(A) the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property

(I) is the particular property and is neither first term shared-use equipment nor second term shared-use equipment, or

(II) is the other property,

(B) 25% of the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property is the particular property, is first term shared-use equipment and is not second term shared-use equipment, and

(C) 50% of the proceeds of disposition of the property, if the property is the particular property and is second term shared-use equipment, and

(ii) in the case where the particular property or the other property is converted to commercial use or is disposed of to a person who does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(A) the fair market value of the property, if the property

(I) is the particular property and is neither first term shared-use equipment nor second term shared-use equipment, or

(II) is the other property,

(B) 25% of the fair market value of the property at the time of its conversion or disposition, if the particular property is first term shared-use equipment and is not second term shared-use equipment, and

(C) 50% of the fair market [value] of the property at the time of its conversion or disposition, if the particular property is second term shared-use equipment.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 83(9), will amend the portion of subsec. 127(27) after para. (d) to read as above, applicable to dispositions and conversions that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Third, consequential changes are made to the wording between paragraphs 127(27)(d) and (e). In particular, the first of the two amounts in the "lesser of" formula is moved to new paragraph 127(27)(e). The second of these two amounts is described in amended paragraph 127(27)(f), which combines former paragraphs 127(27)(e) and (f).

Fourth, paragraph 127(27)(f), which combines former paragraphs 127(27)(e) and (f), is changed to account for circumstances where the property that is disposed of or converted is first term shared-use-equipment or second term shared-use-equipment.

(ii) where the original user is a partnership, that can reasonably be considered to have been included in respect of the property in computing the amount determined under subsection (8) in respect of the original user, and

(d) the amount determined by applying the percentage that was applied by the original user in determining the amount referred to in paragraph (c) to

(i) if the property or the other property is disposed of to a person who deals at arm's length with the purchaser, the proceeds of disposition of that property, and

(b) a share issued by a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation (other than a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation) if, at the time of the issue, every province under the laws of which the corporation is a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation has suspended or terminated its assistance in respect of the acquisition of shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 127.4(1)"approved share"(b)

(b) a share issued by a prescribed labour-sponsored venture capital corporation that is not a registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporation if, at the time of the issue, no province under the laws (described in section 6701 of the Income Tax Regulations) of which the corporation is registered or established provides assistance in respect of the acquisition of the share;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 84, will amend para. (b) of the definition "approved share" in subsec. 127.4(1) to read as above, applicable to acquisitions of shares that occur after 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 127.4(2) allows an individual (other than a trust) a tax credit for the acquisition of an "approved share", which is defined in subsection 127.4(1) as, generally, a share issued by a prescribed LSVCC. LSVCCs prescribed for this purpose under section 6701 of the Regulations include LSVCCs registered under Part X.3 of the Act, as well as specified provincially registered LSVCCs. Paragraph (b) of the definition "approved share" excludes from the definition certain shares issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC that is not a federally-registered LSVCC. This exclusion applies only in the event that, at the time of the issue of the shares, no assistance is available in respect of the acquisition of such shares because of a suspension or termination of assistance to the LSVCC under the laws of every province in which the LSVCC is registered.

Paragraph (b) of the definition "approved share" is amended to provide that an approved share does not include a share issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC (that is not a federally-registered LSVCC) if, at the time of the issue, no province under the laws of which the corporation is an LSVCC that is a prescribed LSVCC provides assistance in respect of the acquisition of the share. This amendment is provided to have the definition "approved share" better reflect the policy that a federal income tax credit be available in respect of a share issued by a provincially-registered LSVCC (that is not a federally-registered LSVCC) only if a provincial income tax credit is also available in respect of the share.

Paragraph (b) of the definition will continue to apply if, at the time of the issue by such an LSVCC of a share, no assistance is available in respect of the acquisition of shares of the LSVCC because of a suspension or termination of assistance to the LSVCC under the laws of every province in which the LSVCC is registered.

Amended paragraph (b) of the definition will also apply where there has not been a suspension or termination of assistance with respect to the issuance of the LSVCC's shares generally, but assistance is not available with respect to the acquisition of a particular share. For example, if under the laws of a province under which an LSVCC is a prescribed LSVCC, a taxpayer who acquires a share is not entitled to any assistance in respect of the acquisition either because of having reached the age of 65 years or because of the province of residence of the taxpayer, the share will not be treated as an approved share.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 29, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of April 28, 2004, requesting that the Government of Canada delay the effective date of the amendment to the definition of "approved share" in subsection 127.4(1) of the Income Tax Act. The amendment and the effective date were originally announced in a package of income tax technical amendments released in draft form by the Department of Finance in December of 2002. You have asked that the original effective date of the amendment be delayed until the 2004 and subsequent taxation years.

As you point out in your letter, the Canada Revenue Agency issued a Technical Interpretation on April 15, 2003 that indicated that the federal tax credit given for purchasing a share of a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation registered in Québec would be available to an investor notwithstanding that the investor was not eligible for a provincial credit, without any mention of the December 2002 proposed change. Technical interpretations are not legally binding on the Canada Revenue Agency and, indeed, contain wording that explains this fact. However, as it was recognized that some confusion could have been created by the issuance of this document after the release of the December 2002 technical amendment package, our Minister is prepared to recommend to Parliament a coming into force provision that would provide that the proposed amendment would apply to acquisitions of shares after 2003.

Thank you for writing on this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Proposed Amendment — Convertible LSVCC shares

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 13, 2004:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your letter of September 24, 2003, concerning the application of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to investors owning shares in a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation ("LSVCC") that are convertible into another series of class A share. Specifically, you are concerned that the labour-sponsored fund tax credit recovery mechanism contained in Part XII.5 will apply to an investor in such an LSVCC upon the conversion of their shares, and submit that this result is inconsistent with the policy of the LSVCC program.

You have informed us that [xxx] is now the manager of [xxx], a federally registered LSVCC. It is your wish to have [xxx] issue its class A shares in series, with shareholders having the ability to convert from one series to another at their request. The only difference between the series will be the investments selected for the non-eligible investment portion, or reserve, of [xxx] portfolio. The venture capital portion of the shareholder's equity will be the same for all series. On that basis, we understand that under your proposed structure no eligible investment will be at risk of divestment as the result of a conversion from one series of class A share to another.

Based on our understanding that the issue of convertible shares by [xxx] would not put at risk the capital placed in eligible investments, restrict the LSVCC from investing more than the minimal requirement in eligible investments nor allow an investor to withdraw their investment from the LSVCC before the eight-year holding period expires without a recovery of the tax credit given in respect of those shares, your proposal does not appear to contravene the policy underlying the LSVCC program. Accordingly, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that changes to the Act be implemented to allow for such conversions without creating a recapture of the labour-sponsored tax credit. It is contemplated that accommodation would be made only for exchanges subject to section 51 of the Act, where the conversion is made from one series of class A share to another series of class A share, and where the series differ only in respect of the reserve portion of the shareholder's equity, as described above. In conjunction with this accommodation, it is also envisioned that changes to section 127.4 of the Act will be made to ensure that a new labour-sponsored tax credit is not available upon the issuance of new class A shares by a LSVCC pursuant to a share conversion. We will be recommending that these changes be effective for conversions that take place after 2003. If our recommendations are acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in an upcoming technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Technical Notes: Subsection 127.4(6) sets out the calculation of an individual's "labour-sponsored funds tax credit" for a taxation year in respect of an "original acquisition" of an approved share of a labour-sponsored venture capital corporation (LSVCC). Except as provided by paragraphs 127.4(6)(b), (c) and (d), this tax credit is generally equal to 15% of the net cost to the individual (or to an RRSP trust funded by the individual) in respect of the original acquisition of the share by the individual or trust.

New paragraph 127.4(6)(e) is added concurrently with the amendment of sections 211.7 and 211.8 that allow for the issuance of exchangeable shares by LSVCCs. New paragraph 127.4(6)(e) is added to ensure that a tax credit is not provided if a new share of the LSVCC is acquired in exchange for another share of the LSVCC.

A is the tax payable under Part XII.4 by a qualifying environmental trust for a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "trust's year") that ends in the particular year,

B is the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts in respect of the trust that were included (otherwise than because of being a member of a partnership) because of the application of subsection 107.3(1) in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year exceeds the total of all amounts in respect of the trust that were deducted (otherwise than because of being a member of a partnership) because of the application of subsection 107.3(1) in computing that income, and

C is the trust's income for the trust's year, computed without reference to subsections 104(4) to (31) and sections 105 to 107, and

(b) in respect of each partnership of which the taxpayer was a member, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount that can reasonably be considered to be the taxpayer's share of the relevant credit in respect of the partnership and, for this purpose, the relevant credit in respect of a partnership is the amount that would, if a partnership were a person and its fiscal period were its taxation year, be the Part XII.4 tax credit of the partnership for its taxation year that ends in the particular year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 32(1), will amend the opening words of subpara. 127.52(1)(d)(ii) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 127.52 defines the "adjusted taxable income" of an individual for a taxation year for the purpose of determining the individual's alternative minimum tax liability. Adjusted taxable income is calculated on the basis of the various assumptions set out in paragraphs 127.52(1)(b) to (j).

Paragraph 127.52(1)(d) provides that in computing an individual's adjusted taxable income for alternative minimum tax purposes, the total amount of capital gains and losses is to be taken into account.

Subparagraph 127.52(1)(d)(ii) is amended to remove the reference to subsection 104(21.4), which is repealed. Since subsection 104(21.4) has no further application to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011, this amendment has no effect on the computation of alternative minimum tax. For further information, see the commentary on subsection 104(21.4).

$$4/5\ (A \times 1/B)$$

where

A is the amount so deemed to be a taxable capital gain for the year of the individual, and

B is the fraction in paragraph 38(a) applicable to the trust for the particular year of the trust for which the designation is made;

Proposed Addition — 127.52(1)(d)(iii) [temporary]

(iii) this Act were read without reference to subsection 104(21.6);

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 85, will add subpara. 127.52(1)(d)(iii), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 127.52(1)(d) provides that in computing an individual's adjusted taxable income for minimum tax purposes, the total amount of capital gains and losses is to be taken into account. In some cases, because of subsection 104(21.6) (which in some cases deems a taxpayer to have realised a larger capital gain than was actually realised) more than the total amount of capital gains and losses would be taken into account. Excess capital gains are deemed by subsection 104(21.6) to have been realized in order that the inclusion rate for capital gains realized on property disposed of by a trust prior to February 28, 2000 is ¾ and property disposed of by a trust after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000 is ⅔. Paragraph 127.52(1)(d) is therefore amended to ensure that only the actual amount of the gain is included in computing the alternative minimum tax.

Proposed Repeal — 127.52(1)(d)(iii)

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 32(2), will repeal subpara. 127.52(1)(d)(iii), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 127.52(1)(d), as it would be amended by the draft legislative proposals released July 16, 2010, provides that in computing an individual's adjusted taxable income for alternative minimum tax purposes, the total amount of capital gains and losses is to be taken into account. In some cases, because of subsection 104(21.6) more than the total amount of capital gains and losses would be taken into account. Excess capital gains are deemed by subsection 104(21.6) to have been realized in order to ensure that the inclusion rate for capital gains realized on property disposed of by a trust prior to February 28, 2000 is 3/4 and property disposed of by a trust after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000 is 2/3. Proposed subparagraph 127.52(1)(d)(iii) ensures that only the actual amount of the gain is included in computing the alternative minimum tax for the 2000 taxation year. As subpar[a]graph 127.52(1)(d)(iii) has no application to any future taxation year, it is repealed for taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

(e) the total of all amounts deductible under section 65, 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.21 or 66.4 or under subsection 29(10) or (12) of the Income Tax Application Rules in computing the individual's income for the year were the lesser of the amounts otherwise so deductible by the individual for the year and the total of

(i) the individual's income for the year from royalties in respect of, and such part of the individual's income, other than royalties, for the year as may reasonably be considered as attributable to, the production of petroleum, natural gas and minerals, determined before deducting those amounts, and

Proposed Addition — 127.52(1)(e)(i.1)

(i.1) the individual's income for the year from property, or from the business of selling the product of property, described in Class 43.1 or 43.2 in Schedule II to the Income Tax Regulations, determined before deducting those amounts, and Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 32(3), will add subpara. 127.52(1)(e)(i.1), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after 2008.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 127.52(1)(e) provides that "adjusted taxable income" is computed on the assumption that the total of specified resource-related deductions does not exceed specified resource income.

In particular, deductions for Canadian exploration expenses (CEE) in a taxation year are limited to the individual's income from the production of petroleum, natural gas and minerals. CEE includes Canadian renewable and conservation expense (CRCE) under section 66.1. If the majority of tangible property in a project is eligible for inclusion in either capital cost allowance (CCA) Class 43.1 or Class 43.2 of Schedule II to the Income Tax Regulations, certain project start-up expenses (for example, engineering and design work and feasibility studies) qualify as CRCE, which can be fully deducted in the year incurred in calculating taxable income of a taxpayer.

New subparagraph (e)(i.1) is introduced to ensure that in applying the limitation in respect of the deduction of resource related expenses under this paragraph, the sources of income against which an individual may deduct CRCE amounts include income from property or from the business of selling the product of property, described in CCA Class 43.1 and Class 43.2.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 28, 2010:

Mr. Fréderic Harvey, McCarthy Tétrault, Montréal, QC

Dear Mr. Harvey:

I am writing with respect to your letter of February 24, 2010 addressed to Ms. Davine Roach and further to your discussions in the fall of 2009 with officials of the Tax Legislation Division regarding the determination of adjusted taxable income for the purpose of the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) in Division E.1 of the Income Tax Act (Act).

Paragraph 127.52(1)(e) of the Act generally provides that an individual's adjusted taxable income is to be computed on the assumption that the total of resource related deductions do not exceed the total of resource related income. In particular, in computing adjusted taxable income for AMT purposes, deductions for Canadian Exploration Expenses (CEE) in a taxation year are limited to the individual's income from the production of petroleum, natural gas and minerals. CEE includes Canadian Renewable and Conservation Expense (CRCE) under section 66.1 of the Act. If the majority of tangible property in a project is eligible for inclusion in either Class 43.1 or Class 43.2 of Schedule II to the Income Tax Regulations (the "Regulations"), certain project start-up expenses (for example, engineering and design work and feasibility studies) qualify as CRCE which can be fully deducted in the year incurred in calculating taxable income of a taxpayer.

You are concerned that, in determining AMT for a taxation year, a taxpayer is not entitled to claim a deduction for CRCE in the year even if the taxpayer earns income in the year attributable to the production and sale of electricity from the use of property described in CCA Class 43.1 and 43.2. This is because such deductions for AMT purposes are limited to income from the production of petroleum, natural gas and minerals. Accordingly, you request that the income tax provisions be amended to allow an individual to deduct CRCE to the extent of the taxpayer's income from property described in Class 43.1 and 43.2.

We agree that, for the purpose of applying the limitation in respect of the deduction of resource related expenses under paragraph 127.52(1)(e) of the Act, the sources of income against which an individual may deduct CRCE amounts should include income from property described in CCA Class 43.1 and Class 43.2. This result would be consistent with the existing rules applicable to specified energy property which, in certain circumstances, constrain the amount of capital cost allowance claimable in respect of, inter alia, property described in classes 43.1 and 43.2 to the amount of income derived from like properties. Therefore, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that, effective for the 2009 and subsequent taxation years, the Act be amended to provide for this result.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Changes in Residence

128.1 (1) Immigration — For the purposes of this Act, where at a particular time a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada,

(a) year-end, fiscal period — where the taxpayer is a corporation or a trust,

(i) the taxpayer's taxation year that would otherwise include the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time and a new taxation year of the taxpayer shall be deemed to have begun at the particular time, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining the taxpayer's fiscal period after the particular time, the taxpayer shall be deemed not to have established a fiscal period before the particular time;

(b) deemed disposition — the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed, at the time (in this subsection referred to as the "time of disposition") that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the particular time, of each property owned by the taxpayer, other than, if the taxpayer is an individual,

(i) property that is a taxable Canadian property,

(ii) property that is described in the inventory of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada at the time of disposition,

(iii) eligible capital property in respect of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada at the time of disposition, and for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition;

(v) [Repealed]

(c) deemed acquisition — the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired at the particular time each property deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property;

(c.1) deemed dividend to immigrating corporation — if the taxpayer is a particular corporation that immediately before the time of disposition owned a share of the capital stock of another corporation resident in Canada, a dividend is deemed to have been paid by the other corporation, and received by the particular corporation, immediately before the time of disposition, equal to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share immediately before the time of disposition exceeds the total of

(i) the paid-up capital in respect of the share immediately before the time of disposition, and

(ii) if the share immediately before the time of disposition was taxable Canadian property that is not treaty-protected property, the amount by which, at the time of disposition, the fair market value of the share exceeds its cost amount;

(c.2) deemed dividend to shareholder of immigrating corporation — if the taxpayer is a corporation and an amount has been added to the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the corporation's capital stock because of paragraph (2)(b),

(i) the corporation is deemed to have paid, immediately before the time of disposition, a dividend on the issued shares of the class equal to the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the class, and

(ii) a dividend is deemed to have been received, immediately before the time of disposition, by each person (other than a person in respect of whom the corporation is a foreign affiliate) who held any of the issued shares of the class equal to that proportion of the dividend so deemed to have been paid that the number of shares of the class held by the person immediately before the time of disposition is of the number of issued shares of the class outstanding immediately before the time of disposition; and

(c.3) [chain of non-residents — foreign affiliate dumping rule] — if the taxpayer is a corporation that was, at the time (referred to in this paragraph as the "prior time") that is immediately before the particular time, controlled by a particular non-resident corporation and the taxpayer owned at the prior time one or more shares of another non-resident corporation that, immediately after the particular time, was — or that became, as part of a transaction or event or series of transactions or events that includes the taxpayer having become resident in Canada — a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, then

(i) in computing the paid-up capital at or after the particular time of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the taxpayer, there is to be deducted that proportion of the amount that is the lesser of the paid-up capital in respect of all of the shares of the capital stock of the taxpayer at the particular time, computed without reference to this paragraph, and the fair market value, at the particular time, of the shares owned by the taxpayer of the foreign affiliate that the paid-up capital, as so computed, in respect of the shares of the particular class is of the paid-up capital, as so computed, in respect of all of the issued shares of the capital stock of the taxpayer, and

(ii) for the purposes of Part XIII, the taxpayer is deemed, immediately after the particular time, to have paid to the particular non-resident, and the particular non-resident is deemed, immediately after the particular time, to have received from the taxpayer, a dividend equal to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value, at the particular time, of the shares owned by the taxpayer of the foreign affiliate exceeds the paid-up capital in respect of all of the shares of the capital stock of the taxpayer, computed without reference to this paragraph.

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (37), will add para. 128.1(1)(c.3), applicable to taxpayers that become resident in Canada after March 28, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: See under 212.3.

(d) foreign affiliate — where the taxpayer was, immediately before the particular time, a foreign affiliate of another taxpayer that is resident in Canada,

(i) the affiliate shall be deemed to have been a controlled foreign affiliate (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the other taxpayer immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) such amount as is prescribed shall be included in the foreign accrual property income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the affiliate for its taxation year ending immediately before the particular time.

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(1)(d)(i), (ii)

(i) the affiliate is deemed to have been a controlled foreign affiliate of the other taxpayer immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) the prescribed amount is to be included in the foreign accrual property income of the affiliate for its taxation year that ends immediately before the particular time.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 18, will amend subparas. 128.1(1)(d)(i) and (ii) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 128.1(1) provides rules that apply when a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada. Paragraph 128.1(1)(d) sets out rules that apply where the immigrating taxpayer was, immediately before its immigration into Canada, a foreign affiliate of another taxpayer resident in Canada.

Paragraph 128.1(1)(d) is amended to update the manner in which it refers to "controlled foreign affiliate" and "foreign accrual property income", consequential to the addition of those definitions to subsection 248(1).

Proposed Addition — 128.1(1.1)

(1.1) Trusts subject to subsec. 94(3) — Paragraph (1)(b) does not apply, at a time in a particular taxation year of a trust, to the trust if the trust is resident in Canada for the particular taxation year for the purpose of computing its income.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 13, will add subsec. 128.1(1.1), applicable to trust taxation years that end after 2006, and to each earlier taxation year of a trust to which subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 128.1(1) sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada. Paragraph 128.1(1)(b) treats a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, with certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value.

New subsection 128.1(1.1) identifies a set of circumstances in which paragraph 128.1(1)(b) does not apply to a taxpayer that is a trust.

Under subsection 128.1(1.1), paragraph 128.1(1)(b) will not apply, at a time in a particular taxation year of a trust, to the trust if the trust is resident in Canada because of new paragraph 94(3)(a) for the particular taxation year for the purpose of computing its income.

This rule applies to ensure that a deemed disposition does not occur solely because the basis for a trust's residency in Canada changes from paragraph 94(3)(a) to some other basis (e.g., because the non-resident trustee of a trust is replaced with a Canadian-resident trustee).

For more detail on subsections 94(3) and (4), see the commentary on those provisions.

This amendment applies to trust taxation years that end after 2006. It also applies to each earlier taxation year of a trust to which subsection 94(3) applies (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94).

The following chart summarizes the applicable provisions and their effects that apply to a change in the status of a trust that has a resident contributor or a resident beneficiary.

Change in status	Applicable Provisions	Tax consequences
A trust that is deemed resident under current paragraph 94(1)(c) for 2006 is deemed resident under new subsection 94(3) for 2007.	Paragraph 94(4)(d) and transitional paragraph 6(2)(k) of the legislative proposals released on August 27, 2010.	Although paragraph 94(4)(d) provides that a trust that is otherwise deemed resident under subsection 94(3) is not considered resident in Canada for the purpose of applying subsection 128.1(1), the coming-into-force rules in paragraph 6(2)(k) of these proposals suspend the application of paragraph 94(4)(d). As a result, a trust, which is deemed resident for 2006 under paragraph 94(1)(c), and deemed resident for 2007 under new subsection 94(3), will not be subject to the application of either subsections 128.1(1) or (4) as a result of the introduction of these rules. As a result, the trust is not deemed to dispose of any of its property at the end of 2006.
A trust that is non-resident for 2011 is deemed resident by reason of subsection new 94(3) for 2012.	Paragraphs 94(3)(c) and 94(4)(d).	Paragraph 128.1(1) does not apply at the end of 2011 because of the application of new paragraph 94(4)(d). However, the trust is deemed to have disposed of each of its properties (other than the properties described in subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) by reason of new paragraph 94(3)(c).
A trust is deemed resident by reason of new subsection 94(3) for 2011. The trustees are replaced with trustees resident in Canada on August 21, 2011.	Paragraphs 94(4)(d) and 128.1(1)(a), and subsection 128.1(1.1).	As a result of the application of new paragraph 94(4)(d), the conditions in subsection 128.1(1) are met and the trust is deemed to have a taxation year-end immediately before the change in residency. However, new subsection 128.1(1.1) suspends the deemed disposition that would otherwise occur by operation of paragraph 128.1(1)(b).
A trust is resident in Canada for 2011 without regard to new subsection 94(3), but has a resident contributor. The trustees are replaced with non-resident trustees on August 21, 2011.	Paragraphs 94(4)(e) and 128.1(4).	As a result of the application of new paragraph 94(4)(e), the conditions in subsection 128.1(4) are met. The trust is deemed to have a taxation year-end immediately before the change in residency, and is deemed to have disposed of the properties described in subsection 128.1(4) immediately before the change in residency.

A trust is deemed resident by reason of new subsection 94(3) for 2011. On August 21, 2012, the trust ceases to have any resident contributors or resident beneficiaries.	Subsections 94(5) and 128.1(4).	Because of the application of new paragraph 94(5), the trust is deemed to have a taxation year-end immediately before it ceases to have any resident contributors or resident beneficiaries. The determination of whether the trust ceases to be resident under subsection 128.1(4) is made without reference to new subsection 94(3) because of the application of paragraph 94(4)(e). However, new subsection 94(5) deems the trust to have ceased to be resident at the earliest time at which there is no resident contributor or resident beneficiary. As a result, paragraph 128.1(4)(b) applies to deem the trust to have disposed of the properties described in subsection 128.1(4) immediately before the change in residency.
An exempt foreign trust that has a resident contributor ceases to be an exempt foreign trust on August 21, 2011.	Subsection 94(6), and paragraphs 94(3)(c) and 94(4)(d).	As a result of ceasing to be an exempt foreign trust, new subsection 94(6) applies to deem the trust to have a taxation year-end immediately before its change in status. In addition, new paragraph 94(3)(c) applies to deem the trust to have disposed of each of its properties (other than the properties described in subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) immediately before it ceases to be an exempt foreign trust. Subsection 128.1(1) does not apply because of the application of new paragraph 94(4)(d).
A non-resident trust that is deemed resident under new subsection 94(3) becomes an exempt foreign trust on August 21, 2011.	Subsection 94(6).	As a result of becoming an exempt foreign trust, new subsection 94(6) applies to deem the trust to have a taxation year-end immediately before its change in status.

For additional detail on paragraphs 94(3)(c), 94(4)(d) and (e), and subsections 94(5) and (6), see the commentary on those provisions.

A is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by paragraph (1)(c) to be the cost to the corporation of property deemed under that paragraph to have been acquired by the corporation at the particular time

(b) for the purposes of this Act, in computing the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the corporation's capital stock at any time after the particular time and before the time, if any, at which the corporation next becomes resident in Canada, there shall be

(i) added the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class, if that amount is positive and the corporation so elects for all such classes in respect of that acquisition of residence by notifying the Minister in writing within 90 days after the particular time, and

(ii) deducted, if the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class is negative, the absolute value of that amount.

(b) all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the corporation, immediately after the particular time, of property (other than a Canadian resource property or property described in paragraph (a) or (d)),

(c) the total of

(i) all Canadian exploration and development expenses incurred by the corporation before the particular time, except to the extent that those expenses were deducted in computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ended before the particular time, to the other corporation and the corporation, respectively) immediately after the particular time, owned by the corporation at the particular time.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 33, will amend the portion of subsec. 128.1(5) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subsection 128.1(5) is a rule that applies for the purposes of computing instalment interest. This subsection is amended to remove cross-references to Part I.1 of the Act, which was repealed by S.C. 2001, c. 17.

History: Subsec. 128.1(5) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 123(5), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

(6) Returning former resident — If an individual (other than a trust) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year and the last time (in this subsection referred to as the "emigration time"), before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada was after October 1, 1996,

(a) subject to paragraph (b), if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) do not apply to the individual's cessation of residence at the emigration time in respect of all properties that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time;

(b) where, if a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (a) is made had been acquired by the individual at the emigration time at a cost equal to its fair market value at the emigration time and had been disposed of by the individual immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for that subsection and this subsection, be the individual's loss from the disposition,

(i) the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)) in respect of the emigration time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

(A) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which that reduction exceeds the lesser of

(I) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(II) the amount, if any, that the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (a) in respect of the property,

(ii) the individual is deemed to have reacquired the property at the emigration time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under clause (i)(A) exceeds the lesser of that reduction and the amount specified by the individual under subclause (i)(B)(II), and

(c) if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs (1)(c) and (4)(b) the individual's proceeds of disposition at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)), and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost, determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the individual's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph (4)(b) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election; and

(d) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of tax that is payable under this Act by the individual for any taxation year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not before the year that includes the emigration time shall be made that is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of

(i) interest payable under this Act to or by a taxpayer in respect of any period that is before the day on which the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year that includes the particular time is filed, or

(ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

History: Subsec. 128.1(6) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 123(5), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996, and an election made under paras. 128.1(6)(a) and (c) by an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada before June 14, 2001 is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001.

Regulations: 600(c) (late filing of elections under (6)(a) and (c)).

(6.1) Deemed taxable Canadian property — For the purposes of paragraph (6)(a), a property is deemed to be taxable Canadian property of the individual throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time if

(a) the emigration time is before March 5, 2010; and

(b) the property was taxable Canadian property of the individual on March 4, 2010.

History: Subsec. 128.1(6.1) added by 2010, c. 12, s. 15, applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

(7) Returning trust beneficiary — If an individual (other than a trust)

(a) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year,

(b) owns at the particular time a property that the individual last acquired on a trust distribution to which subsection 107(2) would, but for subsection 107(5), have applied and at a time (in this subsection referred to as the "distribution time") that was after October 1, 1996 and before the particular time, and

(c) was a beneficiary of the trust at the last time, before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada, the following rules apply:

(d) subject to paragraphs (e) and (f), if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the earlier of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, subsection 107(2.1) does not apply to the distribution in respect of all properties acquired by the individual on the distribution that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time,

(e) paragraph (f) applies in respect of the individual, the trust and a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (d) is made where, if the individual

(i) had been resident in Canada at the distribution time,

(ii) had acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to its fair market value at that time,

(iii) had ceased to be resident in Canada immediately after the distribution time, and

(iv) had, immediately before the particular time, disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for that subsection and this subsection, have been the individual's loss from the disposition,

(f) where this paragraph applies in respect of an individual, a trust and a property,

(i) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(a), the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property at the distribution time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

(A) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) exceeds the lesser of

(I) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and

(II) the amount, if any, which the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (d) in respect of the property, and

(ii) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(b), the individual is deemed to have acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount otherwise determined under paragraph 107(2)(b) exceeds the lesser of the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) and the amount specified under subclause (i)(B)(II),

(g) if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the later of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs 107(2.1)(a) and (b), the trust's proceeds of disposition under paragraph 107(2.1)(a) at the distribution time, and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the trust's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph 107(2.1)(a) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election,

(h) if the trust ceases to exist before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's taxation year that includes the particular time,

(i) an election or specification described in this subsection may be made by the individual alone in writing if the election is filed with the Minister on or before that filing-due date, and

(ii) if the individual alone makes such an election or specification, the individual and the trust are jointly and severally liable for any amount payable under this Act by the trust as a result of the election or specification, and

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(7)(h)(ii)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 217(2), will amend subpara. 128.1(7)(h)(ii) by substituting "jointly and severally, or solidarily," for "jointly and severally", to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(i) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessment of tax payable under the Act by the trust or the individual for any year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not before the year that includes the distribution time shall be made as is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of

(i) interest payable under this Act to or by the trust or the individual in respect of any period that is before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular time, or

(ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

Proposed Amendment — 128.3

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 2, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter dated April 25, 2003 to Mr. Lawrence Purdy of this Division asking that we consider recommending an amendment to section 128.3 of the Income Tax Act ("Act") so that this section applies for the purposes of subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv).

Under the taxpayer migration rules in section 128.1 of the Act, the post-departure disposition of a property can have important tax consequences for an emigrant individual. Section 128.3 of the Act allows for a deferral of these consequences in certain circumstances, by deeming the individual not to have disposed of shares that were converted to new shares under section 51 of the Act, or subject to a share for share exchange, reorganization or amalgamation under any of sections 85.1, 86 or 87 of the Act. Section 128.3 also deems the share received by an individual to be the same as the old share for the purposes of section 119, and subsections 126(2.21) to (2.23). These provisions provide tax credits for individuals who were subject to the departure rules. As well, the new share is deemed to be the same share for the purposes of subsections 128.1(6) to (8), which allow returning former residents to "unwind" transactions subject to the departure tax rules, or in certain cases carry back future losses to the year of departure. By deeming the new share to be the same as the old share, the rule ensures that the individual does not lose access to these relieving provisions.

However, you have pointed out that section 128.3 does not apply for the purposes of subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv). Under subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv) property owned by an individual is not subject to the deemed disposition rules on emigration from Canada if the individual, during the last 10 years, was not resident in Canada for more than 60 months and owned the property when the individual first took up residence in Canada or inherited the property after that time. Since section 128.3 does not apply, an individual who immigrated to Canada owning shares, and received new shares after this time because of a share for share exchange, reorganization or merger, or because the shares were converted into new shares, would be deemed to dispose of these new shares upon emigration from Canada, even if the individual had resided here less than 60 months in the past 10 years. In your view this is an unfair result, and you request that we consider extending the policy of section 128.3 to include individuals who find themselves in this situation.

The policy intent of section 128.3 is to allow continuity in the migration rules' treatment of an individual where the individual's property has been replaced because of a situation that is typically beyond the individual's control, such as a corporate merger or reorganization. It is important to note that although this section is relatively new, and the previous rules, contained in section 48 of the Act, did not provide such relief, there was in the past less need for it. This was because the previous rules allowed individuals to defer departure tax on most property owned by them, by electing to treat the property as taxable Canadian property (TCP). That election meant that the property was not deemed disposed of upon emigration. Therefore, an individual who received new shares because of a reorganization or merger could elect on emigration to treat these as TCP and avoid the deemed disposition of this property on emigration. The election effectively removed the need to have something similar to section 128.3.

In my view, there is no reason in policy terms not to extend the relief provided in section 128.3 to subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv), which as I have described provides an exception to the deemed disposition rules for short-term residents. The effect of the change would be that short-term residents who own shares on immigration and receive new shares on a tax deferred basis under any of sections 51, 85.1, 86 or 87 of the Act, would be deemed not to have disposed of the share and the new share would be the same as the old share, thereby allowing the share to continue to qualify for the exemption from the deemed disposition rules provided in subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv).

You further request that we recommend this change be applicable for individuals who have emigrated from Canada after October 1, 1996 to ensure consistency. We do not normally recommend that changes such as this be made on such a markedly retroactive basis, since both taxpayers and the Government need to be able to rely at any particular time on the law as it exists at that time. Exceptionally, however, we do recommend linking a relieving change to the transaction or circumstance that makes the Government aware of the need for the change. In this case, we understand that this fact situation applies to your client's 2002 taxation year and therefore we are willing to recommend that this change apply to an individual's 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful. Thank you for bringing this issue to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

$$A - B$$

where

A is 26⅔% of the corporation's aggregate investment income for the year, and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(I) the amount deducted under subsection 126(1) from the tax for the year otherwise payable by it under this Part

exceeds

(II) 9⅓% of its foreign investment income for the year,

(ii) 26⅔% of the amount, if any, by which the corporation's taxable income for the year exceeds the total of

(A) the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs 125(1)(a) to (c) in respect of the corporation for the year,

(B) 25/9 of the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(1) from its tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part, and

Proposed Amendment — 129(3)(a)(ii)(B)

(B) the sum of 100/35 of the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(1) from its tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part, and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 34(1), will amend cl. 129(3)(a)(ii)(B) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 129 allows a private corporation that pays a taxable dividend to obtain a partial refund of the income taxes it has paid on its investment income. For this purpose, paragraph 129(3)(a) adds to the "refundable dividend tax on hand" of a Canadian-controlled private corporation at the end of a taxation year the least of three amounts. One of these amounts, which is described in subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii), is 26 2/3% of the corporation's taxable income, less income that either benefited from the section 125 small business deduction or supported a foreign tax credit (FTC). Income that supported an FTC is measured by multiplying both the corporation's non-business income and business-income FTCs by factors that reflect assumed Canadian corporate income tax rates. Subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign non-business income to reflect the elimination of the surtax that was imposed on corporations before 2008.

(C) 10/4 of the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(2) from its tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part, and

Proposed Amendment — 129(3)(a)(ii)(C)

(C) the amount determined by multiplying the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(2) from its tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part, by the relevant factor for the year, and Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 87, will amend cl. 129(3)(a)(ii)(C) to read as above, applicable to 2003 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 129 allows a private corporation that pays a taxable dividend to obtain a partial refund of the income taxes it has paid on its investment income. For this purpose, paragraph 129(3)(a) adds to the refundable dividend tax on hand of a Canadian-controlled private corporation at the end of a taxation year the least of three amounts. One of these amounts, which is described in subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii), is 26 ⅔% of the corporation's taxable income, less income that either benefited from the section 125 small business deduction or supported a foreign tax credit (FTC). Income that supported an FTC is measured by multiplying both the corporation's non-business and business income FTCs by factors that reflect assumed Canadian tax rates. The limit for business income FTCs is based on the applicable federal corporate income tax rate without taking into account the provincial abatement, because foreign business income earned through a permanent establishment outside Canada is typically not taxable by a province. Subparagraph 129(3)(a)(ii) is amended to adjust the factor for foreign business income in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate for the 2003 and subsequent taxation years. Under the definition of "relevant factor" that is added in subsection 248(1), the factor for taxation years that end after 2002 and before 2010 is 3, which assumes a tax rate of 33.3%. The factor for taxation years that end after 2009 will take into account the "general rate reduction percentage" that applies to a corporation's taxation year as provided in section 123.4. For example, if a corporation's taxation year corresponds to the 2010 calendar year, its relevant factor will be 1/(.38-.10). or 3.5714. For taxation years that end after 2009, this amendment takes into account the fact that a corporation's taxation year may straddle two calendar years with different federal general corporate income tax rates. This amendment is made in the course of the review of provisions in the Income Tax Act that assume a specific underlying corporate income tax rate in the context of the reductions in the general federal corporate income tax rate, as was announced in the Economic Statement delivered on October 30, 2007. The review of other such provisions continues and any other amendments will be announced upon completion of that review.

(iii) the corporation's tax for the year payable under this Part determined without reference to section 123.2,

Proposed Amendment — 129(3)(a)(iii)

(iii) the corporation's tax for the year payable under this Part,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 34(2), will amend subpara. 129(3)(a)(iii) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2007.

Technical Notes: Section 129 allows a private corporation that pays a taxable dividend to obtain a partial refund of the income taxes it has paid on its investment income. For this purpose, paragraph 129(3)(a) adds to the "refundable dividend tax on hand" of a Canadian-controlled private corporation at the end of a taxation year the least of three amounts. One of these amounts, which is described in subparagraph 129(3)(a)(iii), is the corporation's tax payable for the year under Part I determined without reference to section 123.2. That section, which imposed a corporate surtax, has been repealed for taxation years that begin after 2007. This amendment deletes the reference to "without reference to section 123.2" in subparagraph 129(3)(a)(iii) to reflect the repeal of that section.

(b) the total of the taxes under Part IV payable by the corporation for the year, and

(c) where the corporation was a private corporation at the end of its preceding taxation year, the corporation's refundable dividend tax on hand at the end of that preceding year

exceeds

(d) the corporation's dividend refund for its preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 129(3.1) — Grandfathering for property disposed of before November 13, 1981; 141.1 — Insurance corporation deemed not to be private corporation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero; 260(11)(c) — Amounts deemed paid where partnership of corporations enters into securities lending arrangement.

History: Subsec. 129(3) substituted by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 32(2), applicable to taxation years that end after June 1995 except that, in their application to such taxation years that began before July 1995, in computing the amount determined under each of subparas. 129(3)(a)(i) and (ii) there shall be deducted an amount equal to that proportion of ¼ of the amount otherwise determined under the subpara. that the number of days in the year that are before July 1995 is of the number of days in the year. Subsec. 129(3) formerly read:

(3) In this section, "refundable dividend tax on hand" of a corporation at the end of any particular taxation year means the amount, if any, by which the total of

(II) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of the corporation's loss for the year from a source that is property,

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(B) the amount, if any, by which 30% of the corporation's foreign investment income for the year exceeds the total of amounts deducted under subsection 126(1) from the tax for the year otherwise payable by it under this Part,

(3) Meaning of expressions "investment corporation" and "taxed capital gains" — For the purposes of this section,

(a) a corporation is an "investment corporation" throughout any taxation year in respect of which the expression is being applied if it complied with the following conditions:

(i) it was throughout the year a Canadian corporation that was a public corporation,

(ii) at least 80% of its property throughout the year consisted of shares, bonds, marketable securities or cash,

(iii) not less than 95% of its income (determined without reference to subsection 49(2)) for the year was derived from, or from dispositions of, investments described in subparagraph (ii),

(iv) not less than 85% of its gross revenue for the year was from sources in Canada,

(v) not more than 25% of its gross revenue for the year was from interest,

(vi) at no time in the year did more than 10% of its property consist of shares, bonds or securities of any one corporation or debtor other than Her Majesty in right of Canada or of a province or a Canadian municipality,

(vii) no person would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation in the year if

(A) the portion of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) before paragraph (a) were read as follows:

""specified shareholder" of a corporation in a taxation year means a taxpayer who owns, directly or indirectly, at any time in the year, more than 25% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation and, for the purposes of this definition,"

(B) paragraph (a) of that definition were read as follows:

"(a) a taxpayer is deemed to own each share of the capital stock of a corporation owned at that time by a person related to the taxpayer,"

Proposed Addition — 130(3)(a)(vii)(B.1) [temporary]

(B.1) paragraph (b) of that definition were read as follows:

(b) each beneficiary of a trust (except a beneficiary of a trust governed by a registered education savings plan who has not attained 19 years of age) is deemed to own that proportion of all such shares owned by the trust at that time that the fair market value at that time of the beneficial interest of the beneficiary in the trust is of the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust,

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 35(1), will add cl. (B.1) to the version of subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) in S.C. 1998, c. 19, subsec. 155(2), deemed to have come into force on June 18, 1998; subsec. 35(3) of the draft legislation will repeal cl. 130(3)(a)(vii)(B.1), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 130 sets out special rules relating to the taxation of investment corporations. Paragraph 130(3)(a) specifies conditions that must be satisfied throughout a taxation year in order for a corporation to qualify as an investment corporation. One such condition is set out in subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii), which requires that no person have been a "specified shareholder" of the corporation in the year if the percentage described in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) were read as "more than 25%" rather than "not less than 10%". This would prevent a corporation more than 25% of any class of the capital stock of which is owned by a shareholder, either alone or in combination with shares owned by persons with whom that shareholder was not dealing at arm's length, from qualifying as an investment corporation. The condition in subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) is generally applicable to corporations for taxation years that begin after June 20, 1996.

For corporations that had a specified shareholder on June 20, 1996, transitional relief is provided under the Income Tax Amendments Act, 1998, S.C. 1999, c. 22, such that subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) will apply only in limited circumstances. Unless a specified shareholder of a corporation acquires additional shares of the corporation after June 20, 1996 otherwise than by means of a "permitted acquisition" (as defined under the transitional rules), subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) will not apply to the corporation. In general terms, a "permitted acquisition" is one where a particular person acquires a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was held, at each particular time after June 20, 1996 and before its acquisition, by the particular person or a person who was related to the particular person.

For the purposes of this transitional rule, a definition "related persons" is provided that expands upon the definition "related persons" in subsection 251(2). However, due to the particular interaction of the definitions in the transitional rules, those rules may have applied to a broader set of circumstances than was originally intended, thereby giving rise to potential uncertainty regarding their application. Specifically, the acquisition of shares of a corporation by a beneficiary under a trust governed by a registered education savings plan who had not attained 19 years of age may have resulted in an acquisition by a specified shareholder that was not a "permitted acquisition" under the transitional rules.

Accordingly, the version of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) found in subsection 92(1) of the Income Tax Amendments Act, 1998, is amended such that the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) will, when modified for the purposes of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii), exclude from deemed ownership of shares held in a trust by a beneficiary those beneficiaries under the trust governed by a registered education savings plan that have not attained 19 years of age.

This amendment is deemed to have come into force on June 18, 1998. However, the provisions added to subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) by the amendment are repealed for taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011. Therefore, this amendment will have effect only for taxation years that begin on or before October 31, 2011.

Letter from Department of Finance, March 12, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter to me of January 8, 2003, your letter of February 3, 2003 to Stephanie Smith and subsequent discussions with Ms. Smith concerning the special transitional rules that apply to exempt from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) an investment corporation that had at least one "existing specified shareholder" on June 20, 1996. In general, the exemption is lost where the existing specified shareholder and certain "newly related persons" acquire more shares of the corporation after June 20, 1996, other than by certain permitted acquisitions. For this purpose, if any such person has an interest in a partnership or trust, the exemption is lost if the partnership or trust acquires a share of the investment corporation after that date.

Your letter describes an investment corporation that had an individual who was an existing specified shareholder (the "Specified Shareholder") on June 20, 1996. The transitional rules provide that in determining who is a specified shareholder of an investment corporation, a person is deemed to own the shares of any corporation that are owned by a related person. Related persons are specifically defined for the purpose of these rules. As a result of the rules, if any of the Specified Shareholder's spouse's grandchildren under 19 years of age (the "Grandchildren") acquire or are deemed to acquire a share of the investment corporation after June 20, 1996, other than in a permitted acquisition, the transitional relief afforded in the transitional rules from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) would be lost.

In the situation you have described, the Specified Shareholder's daughter, who is over 19 years of age, (the "Daughter") established a registered education savings plan ("RESP") in the late 1980s for a number of persons including certain of the Grandchildren. In 1997, 1998 and 1999, the Daughter transferred shares of the investment corporation to the RESP and the dividend income received on the shares held in the RESP was, in part, paid by the RESP to the Grandchildren. In 2000, the shares of the investment corporation were reacquired by the Daughter from the RESP. The deemed acquisition of shares of the investment corporation by the Grandchildren would result in the investment corporation losing its exemption from the application of subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) provided for in the transitional rules and, therefore, losing its status as an investment corporation in 1997. You have asked us to expand the scope of the transitional rules to accommodate your client's situation.

We are sympathetic to this request and intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act and the transitional rules that apply to investment corporations be amended to exclude from the definition of "specified shareholder", as it applies for the purpose of investment corporations, a beneficiary's interest in a trust governed by a RESP where the beneficiary of the trust is less than 19 years of age. Furthermore, we intend to recommend that the amendment be effective only for taxation years that begin before the date detailed legislative proposals are made public.

While we cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, we hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(i) a share of the capital stock of the corporation, or

(ii) a share of the capital stock of a corporation, or an interest in a partnership or trust, that held an ineligible investment at the particular time.

(7) For the purpose of subsection (6), a newly related person in respect of a corporation at any time means a person who, at any other time that is before that time and after June 20, 1996, became related to a particular person described in paragraph [155(4)(b) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of the corporation, but does not include a person who would, if the taxation year of the corporation that includes that other time had ended immediately before that other time, have been a particular person described in paragraph [155(4)(b) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of the corporation for the year.

(8) [Repealed by 1999, c. 22, s. 92]

(9) For the purposes of subsections (5) to (8),

(a) where at a particular time

(i) a trust that existed on June 20, 1996 distributes a share of the capital stock of a corporation to a person who was a beneficiary under the trust throughout the period from June 20, 1996 to the particular time in satisfaction of all or any part of the beneficiary's capital interest in the trust, or

(ii) a partnership that existed on June 20, 1996 distributes, on ceasing to exist, a share of the capital stock of a corporation or an interest in a share to a person who was a member of the partnership throughout the period from June 20, 1996 to the particular time, the share is deemed to have been owned by the beneficiary or member from the later of June 20, 1996 and the time the share was last acquired by the trust or partnership until the particular time; and

(b) where a person who is a beneficiary of a trust or a member of a partnership is deemed by paragraph (b), (c) or (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Act to own a share owned by the partnership or trust, the person is deemed to have acquired the share at the later of the time the share was acquired by the trust or partnership and the time the person last became a beneficiary of the trust or a member of the partnership.

(10) At any time on or after the day of the death of a person described in paragraph [155(4)(c) of the said c. 19 (above)] in respect of a corporation and before the third anniversary of that day,

(a) the estate of the deceased person is deemed to be a person described in paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) [of the said c. 19 (above)] who is related to each person who, throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the time of death, was related to the deceased person;

(b) notwithstanding subsection (7), the estate is deemed not to be a newly related person in respect of the corporation;

(c) notwithstanding subsection (11), the acquisition of shares of the corporation's capital stock by the estate from the deceased person is deemed to be a permitted acquisition; and

(d) the estate is deemed not to be a trust for the purposes of subparagraph (9)(a)(i) of this Act and paragraphs (b) and (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act.

(11) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (4) to (10) [of the said c. 19 (above)] and this subsection.

"permitted acquisition" means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

(a) held, at each particular time after June 20, 1996 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or

(b) issued after June 20, 1996 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the total percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm's length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

"permitted percentage" for a particular person in respect of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

(a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm's length; and

(b) in any other case, the greater of

(i) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person, and

(ii) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

(a) an individual and

(i) the individual's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)) who is under 19 years of age, or

(ii) the individual's spouse;

"specified shareholder" has the meaning assigned by subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (2).

Subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 155(2) (but subsequently replaced by an amendment by 1999, c. 22 (see above)), applicable to corporations for taxation years that begin after June 20, 1996 except that, by subsec. 155(4) of the said c. 19, where

(a) a corporation was an investment corporation on June 20, 1996,

(b) a particular person would be a specified shareholder of the corporation in the year, within the meaning assigned by subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) if this amendment applied to the corporation for the year, and,

(c) the particular person would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation on June 20, 1996, within the meaning assigned by subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) if this amendment applied to the corporation for the year that includes that day, subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) does not apply to the corporation, with respect to the particular person and persons related to the particular person, except as provided in subsections 155(5) to (8) of the said c. 19. Subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) formerly read:

(vii) none of its shareholders at any time in the year held more than 25% of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation, and

Subpara. 130(3)(a)(iii) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 109(1), to add "(determined without reference to subsection 49(2))", applicable to 1990 et seq.

(4) Wholly owned subsidiaries — Where a corporation so elects in its return of income under this Part for a taxation year, each of the corporation's properties that is a share or indebtedness of another Canadian corporation that is at any time in the year a subsidiary wholly owned corporation of the corporation shall, for the purposes of subparagraphs (3)(a)(ii) and (vi), be deemed not to be owned by the corporation at any such time in the year, and each property owned by the other corporation at that time shall, for the purposes of those subparagraphs, be deemed to be owned by the corporation at that time.

Proposed Amendment — 130.1(4)(b)

(b) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, if an amount is received by a taxpayer in a taxation year as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, the dividend, the amount

(i) shall not be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year as income from a share of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(ii) is deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition of capital property in the year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 36(1), will amend para. 130.1(4)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011, except that if any part of a dividend declared by a corporation is in respect of capital gains of the corporation from dispositions of property that occurred before October 18, 2000, then para. 130.1(4)(b) is to be read, in its application to that part of the dividend, as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 130.1 sets out rules that apply to mortgage investment corporations and their shareholders. A mortgage investment corporation is essentially treated as a conduit in that its income may be flowed through to its shareholders and taxed in their hands rather than as income of the corporation.

Section 130.1 provides for an election by a mortgage investment corporation that allows certain dividends payable by the mortgage investment corporation to the shareholders of any class of its capital stock to be treated as capital gains in the hands of the shareholders who receive the dividends. When a mortgage investment corporation elects in respect of the full amount of a dividend, subsection 130.1(4) deems the dividend to be a capital gains dividend to the extent that it does not exceed the appropriate fraction of the undistributed taxed capital gains of the corporation for the year, and the dividend is deemed to be a capital gain of the recipient of the dividend from the disposition of property in the year in which the dividend was received.

Among other things, paragraph 130.1(4)(b) limits the amount of the dividend that can be included in the shareholder's income as a capital gain. Subsections 130.1(4.2) to (4.5) provides rules to ensure that this flow-through mechanism works appropriately for taxation years of the corporation that include either February 27, 2000 or October 17, 2000. When subsection 130.1(4) applies in respect of a dividend paid in the period that begins 91 days after the beginning of the corporation's taxation year that includes either February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 and ends 90 days after the end of that year by a mortgage investment corporation to a shareholder of any class of shares of its capital stock, subsections 130.1(4.2) to (4.4) provide rules for determining when the underlying capital gain was realized by the corporation, and thus, the appropriate portion of the dividend that can be treated as a capital gain. When no dividend was paid by the corporation during the above-mentioned periods but the corporation had net capital gains or net capital losses from the disposition of property during those periods, subsection 130.1(4.5) sets out an optional method for determining when the corporation is deemed to have realized the capital gains or capital losses, and thus, the appropriate amount of the corporation's net capital gains or net capital losses that will be included in its undistributed taxed capital gains at that time.

Recognizing that these provisions have limited application to future taxation years, they are repealed subject to the coming-into-force provision described below. Since these provisions relate solely to capital gains realized by the corporation in one of the above-mentioned periods, the repeal of these provisions has no practical effect on the designation of dividends as capital gains dividends for future taxation years.

In addition, paragraph 130.1(4)(b) is amended to conform to modern drafting standards by inserting existing language into subparagraph (i), and to renumber existing subparagraph (vii) as subparagraph (ii).

These amendments apply to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011, except that if any part of a dividend declared by a corporation is in respect of capital gains of the corporation from dispositions of property before October 18, 2000, then paragraph 130.1(4)(b) is to be read in its application to that part of the dividend as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011.

Related Provisions: 39.1(1)"exempt capital gains balance"C(c), 39.1(6) — Reduction in gain to reflect capital gains exemption election; 111(1.1)(c) — Net capital loss carryover — transition for 2000; 130.1(4.2) — Reporting to shareholder of capital gains tax rate; 130.1(4.3) — Allocation of capital gains tax rate for 2000; 184(2) — Tax on excessive elections; 184(3) — Election to treat excess as separate dividend; 185(4) — Joint and several liability from excessive elections.

History: Subpara. 130.1(4)(a)(i) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 127(2), to replace the reference to "3/4" with "1/2", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a corporation's taxation year that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the word "twice" shall be read as "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the corporation for the year, multiplied by".

Para. 130.1(4)(b) amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 127(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. The para. formerly read:

> (b) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, any amount received by a taxpayer in a taxation year as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, the dividend shall not be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year as income from a share of the capital stock of the corporation, but shall be deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer for the year from a disposition, in the year and after February 22, 1994, by the taxpayer of capital property.

Subsec. 130.1(4) amended by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 40(1), applicable to dividends paid after February 22, 1994. Subsec. (4) formerly read:

> (4) Electing capital gains dividend — Where at any particular time during the period beginning 91 days after the beginning of a taxation year of a corporation that was, throughout the year, a mortgage investment corporation and ending 90 days after the end of the year, a dividend is paid by the corporation to shareholders of the corporation,

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(d) there were 20 or more shareholders of the corporation and no person would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation at any time in the year if

""specified shareholder" of a corporation at any time means a taxpayer who owns, directly or indirectly, at that time, more than 25% of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation and, for the purposes of this definition,"

(ii) paragraph (a) of that definition were read as follows:

(i) debts owing to the corporation that were secured, whether by mortgages, hypothecs or in any other manner, on houses (as defined in section 2 of the National Housing Act) or on property included within a housing project (as defined in that section), and

Proposed Amendment — 130.1(6)(f)(i)

(i) debts owing to the corporation that were secured, whether by mortgages, hypothecs or in any other manner, on houses (as defined in section 2 of the National Housing Act) or on property included within a housing project (as defined in that section as it read on June 16, 1999), and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 36(3), will amend subpara. 130.1(6)(f)(i) to read as above, applicable to property acquired by a corporation after October 31, 2011, unless

(a) the property is a particular debt

(i) that is owing to the corporation and secured on property (referred to in this paragraph as the "subject property"),

(ii) that replaces a debt (referred to in this paragraph as the "old debt") that was on October 31, 2011 owing to the corporation and secured on the subject property, and

(iii) that has a maximum term for repayment that does not exceed the maximum term for repayment, in effect on October 31, 2011, of the old debt; and

(b) the corporation would be a mortgage investment corporation for its taxation year that includes October 31, 2011 if that taxation year were determined as though it ended on October 31, 2011.

If property that is held by a corporation on October 31, 2011 consists of debt, the term for repayment of the debt is extended by agreement entered into on a particular date that is after October 31, 2011, and the extended term exceeds the maximum term for repayment of the debt in effect on October 31, 2011, then the property is deemed, for the purposes of applying this amendment, to have been acquired by the corporation on the particular date.

Technical Notes: Section 130.1 sets out rules that apply to mortgage investment corporations and their shareholders. Subsection 130.1(6) defines "mortgage investment corporation" for the purposes of section 130.1. Subsection 130.1(6) lists certain criteria that a mortgage investment corporation must satisfy throughout a taxation year.

Paragraph 130.1(6)(f) provides that, in order to qualify as a mortgage investment corporation, the cost amount to the corporation of certain specified assets plus the amount of any money of the corporation must be at least 50% of the cost amount to the corporation of all of its property. For the purposes of this asset test, subparagraph 130.1(6)(f)(i) refers to debts owing to the corporation that were secured by mortgages, hypothecs or in any other manner, on houses or on property included within a housing project.

The terms "house" and "housing project" referenced in subparagraph 130.1(6)(f)(i) take their meaning from section 2 of the National Housing Act. A former enactment of the definition "housing project" in that Act specifically excluded hotels, which is consistent with the tax policy underlying subsection 130.1(6). However, that definition was replaced with the current enactment of the definition by S.C. 1999, c. 27, effective June 17, 1999.

In order to avoid any ambiguity in the meaning of the term "housing project" as it applies for the purposes of subsection 130.1(6), subparagraph 130.1(6)(f)(i) is amended to provide that the term "housing project" is to be read as it was defined in the National Housing Act as that definition read on June 16, 1999 (i.e., as it read under its former enactment).

This amendment applies to property acquired after October 31, 2011, subject to two exemptions. Firstly, as an extended transitional rule, the amendment will not apply to property acquired by a corporation after October 31, 2011 if that acquisition results from the renewal of mortgage debt held by the corporation, as a mortgage investment corporation, on October 31, 2011 and the term on that new debt does not exceed the term in effect on October 31, 2011 for the debt it is replacing. Secondly, as a suspension of this grandfathering rule, even if property was held by a corporation on October 31, 2011 (i.e., would otherwise not be affected by this amendment), the property will be deemed to have been acquired by the corporation on a particular day that is after October 31, 2011 (i.e., and therefore become subject to the amendment), if the property consists of debt the term for repayment of which is extended pursuant to an agreement entered into on the particular day, and the extended term exceeds the maximum term for repayment of the debt in effect on October 31, 2011.

(ii) amounts of any deposits standing to the corporation's credit in the records of

(A) a bank or other corporation any of whose deposits are insured by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Régie de l'assurance-dépôts du Québec, or

(B) a credit union,

plus the amount of any money of the corporation was at least 50% of the cost amount to it of all of its property;

(g) the cost amount to the corporation of all real property of the corporation, including leasehold interests in such property (except real property acquired by the corporation by foreclosure or otherwise after default made on a mortgage, hypothec or agreement of sale of real property) did not exceed 25% of the cost amount to it of all of its property;

Proposed Amendment — 130.1(6)(g)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 218(2), will amend para. 130.1(6)(g) by substituting "real or immovable property" for "real property" in three places, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(h) its liabilities did not exceed 3 times the amount by which the cost amount to it of all of its property exceeded its liabilities, where at any time in the year the cost amount to it of such of its property as consisted of property described in subparagraphs (f)(i) and (ii) plus the amount of any money of the corporation was less than $^2/_3$ of the cost amount to it of all of its property; and

(i) its liabilities did not exceed 5 times the amount by which the cost amount to it of all its property exceeded its liabilities, where paragraph (h) is not applicable.

(b) at any time that is in the taxation year that includes the particular time and that is after January 14, 1998, any person contributes capital to the corporation or acquires from the corporation a share of the corporation's capital stock, other than a share that was issued to the person as a stock dividend.

(8) For the purposes of subsections (4) to (7),

(a) if at a particular time

the share is deemed to have been owned by the beneficiary or member throughout the period that begins at the later of the end of January 14, 1998 and the time the share was last acquired by the trust or partnership and that ends at the particular time; and

(b) if a person who is a beneficiary under a trust or who is a member of a partnership is deemed by paragraph (b), (c) or (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Act to own a share owned by the trust or partnership, the person is deemed to own the share and to have acquired the share at the later of the time the share was acquired by the trust or partnership and the time the person last became a beneficiary under the trust or a member of the partnership.

(9) At any time on or after the day of the death of a person described in paragraph (3)(c) [see application above] in respect of a corporation and before the third anniversary of that day,

(b) notwithstanding subsection (10),

(i) the estate is deemed not to be a newly related person in respect of the corporation, and

(ii) the acquisition of shares of the corporation's capital stock by the estate from the deceased person is deemed to be a permitted acquisition; and

(c) the estate is deemed not to be a trust for the purposes of subparagraph (8)(a)(i) and paragraphs (b) and (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Act.

(10) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (3) [i.e., the application above] to (9) and this subsection.

"mortgage lender" means a particular corporation where the ordinary business of

(a) the particular corporation, or

(b) a corporation (other than a mortgage investment corporation) or partnership affiliated with the particular corporation includes the holding of debts that are secured, whether by mortgage or in any other manner, on houses (as defined in section 2 of the National Housing Act) or on property included within a housing project (as defined in that section).

"newly related persons" means persons who are related to each other and who became so related after January 14, 1998.

"permitted acquisition" means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

(a) held, at each particular time after January 14, 1998 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or

(b) issued after January 14, 1998 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that began at the beginning of January 15, 1998 and that ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm's length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

"permitted percentage" for a particular person in respect of a class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

(a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm's length; and

(b) in any other case, the greater of

(i) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person, and

(ii) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

(a) an individual and

(i) the individual's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)) who is under 19 years of age, or

(ii) the individual's spouse;

"specified shareholder" has the meaning assigned by paragraph 130.1(6)(d) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (1).

Para. 130.1(6)(d) formerly read:

Subpara. 130.1(6)(f)(i) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 156, deemed to have come into force on June 23, 1993. It formerly read:

"residential property" means a house or the property included within a housing project.

Subsec. 2(2) defined "house" and "housing project" by reference to the National Housing Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. N-11, s.2 (as amended by c. 25 (4th Supp.), s. 1(2)), which in turn provides:

"house" means a building or movable structure intended for human habitation containing not more than two family housing units, together with the land, if any, on which the building or movable structure is situated;

"housing project" means a project consisting of one or more houses, one or more multiple-family dwellings, housing accommodation of the hostel or dormitory type, one or more condominium units or any combination thereof, together with any public space, recreational facilities, commercial space and other buildings appropriate to the project, but does not include a hotel;

(7) How shareholders counted — In paragraph (6)(d), a trust governed by a registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan by which shares of the capital stock of a corporation are held shall be counted as four shareholders of the corporation for the purpose of determining the number of shareholders of the corporation, but as one shareholder for the purpose of determining whether any person is a specified shareholder (as defined for the purpose of that paragraph).

History: Subsec. 130.1(7) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 53(2), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to para. 130.1(6)(d). It formerly read:

(8) First taxation year — For the purposes of subsection (6), a corporation that was incorporated after 1971 shall be deemed to have complied with paragraph (6)(d) throughout the first taxation year of the corporation in which it carried on business if it complied with that paragraph on the last day of that taxation year.

Proposed Amendment — 131(1)(b)

(b) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act (other than paragraph (5.1)(b)), if an amount is received by a taxpayer in a taxation year as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, the dividend, the amount

(i) shall not be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year as income from a share of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(ii) is deemed to be a capital gain of the taxpayer from the disposition of capital property in the year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 37(1), will amend para. 131(1)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011, except that if any part of a dividend declared by a corporation is in respect of capital gains of the corporation from dispositions of property that occurred before October 18, 2000, then para. 131(1)(b) is to be read, in its application to that part of the dividend, as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Section 131 provides for an election by a mutual fund corporation that allows certain dividends payable by the corporation to the shareholders of any class of its capital stock to be treated as capital gains in the hands of the shareholders who receive the dividends. The percentage of the capital gain that is included in the shareholder's income as a taxable capital gain depends on when the mutual fund corporation realized the capital gain that forms part of its capital gains dividend account.

Subsection 131(1.5) provides that the income inclusion rate will be 75% unless the mutual fund corporation discloses the period in which the capital gain was realized in prescribed form. In addition, subparagraphs 131(1)(b)(i) to (vi) and (viii) to (ix) and subsections 131(1.6) to (1.9) determine the appropriate capital gains inclusion rate for capital gains realized by a mutual fund corporation in a taxation year that includes February 28, 2000 or October 13, 2000.

As each of the above-mentioned provisions has no further application to any future taxation year, they are repealed. However, paragraph 131(1)(b) is amended to conform to modern drafting standards by inserting existing language into subparagraph (i), and to renumber existing subparagraph (vii) as subparagraph (ii). Consequential on these amendments, subparagraph 131(5.1)(b)(i) is updated to refer to subparagraph 131(1)(b)(ii).

These amendments apply to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011, except that if any part of a dividend declared by a corporation is in respect of capital gains of the corporation from dispositions of property before October 18, 2000, then paragraph 131(1)(b) is to be read in its application to that part of the dividend as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011.

(6) Definitions — In this section,

"capital gains dividend account" of a mutual fund corporation at any time means the amount, if any, by which

(a) its capital gains, for all taxation years that began more than 60 days before that time, from dispositions of property after 1971 and before that time while it was a mutual fund corporation

Proposed Amendment — 131(6)"capital gains dividend account"(a)

(a) the total of

(i) its capital gains, for all taxation years that began more than 60 days before that time, from dispositions of property after 1971 and before that time while it was a mutual fund corporation, and

(ii) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a distribution made by a trust to the corporation, at a time that is after its 2004 taxation year and at which it is a mutual fund corporation, in respect of capital gains of the trust equal to twice the amount determined by the following formula:

where

A is the amount of the distribution, and

B is the amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust in respect of the net taxable capital gains of the trust attributable to those capital gains

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 37(4), will amend para. (a) of the definition "capital gains dividend account" in subsec. 131(6) to read as above, applicable to 2005 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 131(6) defines a number of terms used in section 131. Among these, the "capital gains dividend account" of a mutual fund corporation represents the cumulative net undistributed capital gains of the corporation on which it paid refundable capital gains tax.

Paragraph (a) of the definition is amended in order to allow for the inclusion in a mutual fund corporation's capital gains dividend account of an amount in respect of a capital gains distribution made by a trust to the corporation. Under the existing paragraph (a) of the definition, when a mutual fund corporation holds units of a trust that distributed funds out of its realized capital gains, and the trust makes an election under subsection 104(21) with respect to the corporation, the corporation is deemed to realize a taxable capital gain as opposed to a capital gain. No amount of the distribution is included in the capital gains dividend account of the corporation.

New subparagraph (a)(ii) of the definition will include in the capital gains dividend account of a mutual fund corporation amounts in respect of a capital gains distribution made by a trust to the corporation (at a time that is after its 2004 taxation year and at which it is a mutual fund corporation) equal to twice the amount determined by the formula A – B. Element A of the formula is the amount of the distribution. Element B of the formula is the amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust in respect of the net taxable capital gains of the trust attributable to those capital gains. The result is that the corporation may, under that subparagraph, add to its capital gains dividend account an amount only to the extent of twice the portion of a trust distribution representing the capital gain associated with a taxable capital gain designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust in the corporation's favour.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 9, 2005:

Mr. Hugh Chasmar, Deloitte & Touche LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Chasmar:

I am responding to your facsimile to Grant Nash of June 18, 2004 and the attached letter dated November 15, 2001 concerning the definition of "capital gains dividend account" for mutual fund corporations (MFCs).

In general, the definition of "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 131(6) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") includes all capital gains and all capital losses realized by a MFC from the disposition of capital property. Where a MFC holds units of a trust that makes a distribution out of its realized capital gains, and the trust makes an election under 104(21) of the Act in favour of the MFC, the MFC will be deemed to have realized a taxable capital gain, not a capital gain. As a result, it appears that no amount of this distribution will be included in the capital gains dividend account of the mutual fund corporation.

From a tax policy perspective it is intended that a mutual fund corporation will be a "flow-through entity" with respect to realized capital gains. This is generally achieved by refunding to the MFC its tax paid on taxable capital gains, to the extent that it distributes its capital gains to shareholders by way of a capital gains dividend, or through the redemption of shares. As such, there does not appear to be any policy reason why a MFC should not be entitled to flow through capital gains received from a trust that has made an election under 104(21) in favour of the MFC. We note that a similar amendment was previously made to the definition of "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1) of the Act to provide for the inclusion in a corporation's capital dividend account of an amount in respect of the non-taxable portion of capital gains distributed by a trust to the corporation.

We are therefore prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act to allow a MFC to flow through capital gains received from a trust that has made an election under 104(21) in favour of the MFC. We will also recommend that this amendment be made effective for 2005 and subsequent taxation years.

We cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

end of the last taxation year that ended more than 60 days before that time, and

Possible Future Amendment — 131(8.1)

(8.1) If, at any particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of an issued and outstanding share of the capital stock of a corporation held by a non-resident person or a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership is more than 50% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of an issued and outstanding share of the corporation, the corporation is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a mutual fund corporation unless

(a) both

(i) throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a specified property (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the corporation, and

(ii) where the corporation was incorporated before 2005, throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the corporation; or

(b) it has

(i) not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock after February 20, 1990 and before the particular time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the share was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990, and

(ii) not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock after [the day before September 16, 2004] and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the share was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the corporation and the partnership, made before September 16, 2004.

Application: The September 16, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 17(4), would have amended subsec. 131(8.1) to read as above, applicable after March 22, 2004, except that the opening words, in their application before 2005 to a corporation, are to, unless the corporation elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to, be read as follows:

(8.1) If at any particular time it can reasonably be considered that a corporation (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the shares of its capital stock) was incorporated, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the corporation is deemed not to be a mutual fund corporation after the particular time, unless

In addition, the reference in para. 131(8.1)(a), as amended, to "January 1, 2005" is to be read as "January 1, 2007" and the reference to "2004" is to be read as "2006" in the application of that paragraph to a corporation that

(i) on March 23, 2004 would have ceased to be a mutual fund corporation if

(A) the reference to the expression "throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time" in that paragraph were read as "on March 23, 2004", and

(B) the reference to the expression "December 31, 2004" in that paragraph were read as "March 22, 2004", and

(ii) on March 24, 2004 was a mutual fund corporation.

This proposal is unlikely to be enacted in its current form: see news release in Possible Future Amendment to 132(7).

Technical Notes: Subsection 131(8.1) provides that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at the particular time, it is reasonable to conclude that the corporation was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. There are two exceptions to this rule. The first, which is set out in paragraph 131(8.1)(a), applies if, throughout the period that started on February 21, 1990 (or if later, the date of incorporation) and that ends at the particular time, all or substantially all of the corporation's property consisted of property other than taxable Canadian property. The second, which is set out in paragraph 131(8.1)(b), applies if the corporation did not issue a share of its capital stock, other than a stock dividend, after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not resident in Canada, except where the share was issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

The preamble to subsection 131(8.1) is amended to provide that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation is attributable to the fair market value of shares that are held by one or any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships that are not "Canadian partnerships" (as defined in section 102).

This amendment applies

- after March 22, 2004 to a corporation that so elects in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amendment receives Royal Assent; and
- after 2004 to a corporation that does not so elect. Where a corporation does not so elect, subsection 131(8.1) will continue to provide, until December 31, 2004, that the corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, it can reasonably be considered that the corporation (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the shares of its capital stock) was incorporated, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons.

The loss, under the general rule in subsection 131(8.1), after the particular time of a corporation's status as a mutual fund corporation will continue to be subject to the exceptions found in paragraphs 131(8.1)(a) and (b).

Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to clarify that, in addition to other forms of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property and timber resource property are included in determining the availability of relief under that paragraph. Except as otherwise provided in the transitional rules for the amendments, the amendments to paragraph 131(8.1)(a) apply after March 22, 2004.

Corporations incorporated after 2004

Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception applies to a corporation incorporated after 2004 only if, throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its incorporation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as newly defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Corporations incorporated before 2005

For a corporation incorporated before 2005, paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception applies to the corporation only if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2005 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and
- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Transitional relief: corporations otherwise offside on March 23, 2004

Some corporations that were otherwise mutual fund corporations at the end of March 23, 2004, might have lost their mutual fund status on March 23, 2004 if the addition of Canadian resource property and timber resource property to the properties considered in determining the application of paragraph 131(8.1)(a) applied on March 23, 2004. For such a corporation, paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is amended to provide that the exception in that paragraph applies to the corporation if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2007 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and
- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2006, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the corporation was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

For more detail on the new definition "specified property" in subsection 132(4), see the commentary on that subsection.

Paragraph 131(8.1)(b) is amended to provide that the exception applies to a corporation only if the corporation satisfies the existing condition in that paragraph (i.e., the condition found, under these amendments, in subparagraph 131(8.1)(b)(i)) and it has not issued a share (other than a share issued as a stock dividend) of its capital stock on or after September 16, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not a "Canadian partnership" (as defined in section 102), except where the share was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the corporation and the partnership, made before September 16, 2004.

(iii) any combination of the activities described in subparagraphs (i) and (ii), and

(c) it complied with prescribed conditions relating to the number of its unit holders, dispersal of ownership of its units and public trading of its units.

Proposed Amendment — 132(6)(c)

(c) it complied with prescribed conditions.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 88, will amend para. 132(6)(c) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 132(6) sets out the definition "mutual fund trust". Under paragraph 132(6)(c), a trust will qualify at any time as a mutual fund trust only if at that time it meets prescribed conditions relating to the number of its unit holders, dispersal of ownership of trust units issued by it and public trading of trust units issued by it.

Paragraph 132(6)(c) is amended so that the prescribed conditions that a trust may be required to satisfy in order to qualify as a mutual fund trust are not limited to those relating to ownership and trading of its units.

The regulations setting out these prescribed conditions for a mutual fund trust are found in Part XLVIII of the Regulations. In particular, Regulation 4801 sets out conditions that apply to a class of units issued by a trust in order for the trust to be considered a mutual fund trust. It is intended that proposed amendments to Part XLVIII of the Regulations would include the following:

- Paragraph 4801(a) of the Regulations would be amended so that subparagraph 4801(a)(ii) applies to a trust created before 2000, for its 2004 and subsequent taxation years, if the trust elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing in its return of income for the taxation year of the trust that ends in the calendar year in which the amending regulations are published in Part II of the Canada Gazette. As a result of the proposed change, if there has been a lawful distribution in a province to the public of units of a class of units of a trust created before 2000 and a prospectus, registration statement or similar document was not required under the laws of the province to be filed in respect of the distribution, the trust could rely upon subparagraph 4801(a)(ii) to meet, in its 2004 and later taxation years, the condition prescribed under paragraph 4801(a).

These amendments to the Regulations would, except as described above, be proposed to apply to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years of trusts.

(7) Idem [trust primarily for non-residents] — Where, at any time, it can reasonably be considered that a trust, having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust, was established or is maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the trust shall be deemed not to be a mutual fund trust after that time unless

(a) at that time, all or substantially all of its property consisted of property other than property that would be taxable Canadian property if the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (b) of that definition; or

(b) it has not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

Possible Future Amendment — 132(7)

(7) Loss of mutual fund trust status — If, at any particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of a unit issued by a trust and held by a non-resident person or a partnership that is not a Canadian partnership is more than 50% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the particular time, of a unit issued by the trust, the trust is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a mutual fund trust unless

(a) both

(i) throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day on which the trust was created and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a specified property of the trust was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the trust, and

(ii) where the trust was created before 2005, throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property of the trust; or

(b) it has

(i) not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before the particular time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990, and

(ii) not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a partnership as a payment, or in satisfaction of the partnership's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after September 15, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable enquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the unit was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the trust and the partnership, entered into before September 16, 2004.

Application: The September 16, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 18(3), would have amended subsec. 132(7) to read as above, applicable after March 22, 2004, except that the opening words, in their application before 2005 to a trust, are to, unless the trust elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to, be read as follows:

(7) If at any particular time it can reasonably be considered that a trust (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust) was created, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the trust is deemed not to be a mutual fund trust after the particular time, unless

In addition, the reference in para. 132(7)(a), as amended, to "January 1, 2005" is to be read as "January 1, 2007" and the reference to "2004" is to be read as "2006" in the application of that paragraph to a corporation that

(i) on March 23, 2004 would have ceased to be a mutual fund trust if

(A) the reference to the expression "throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day on which the trust was created and ends at the particular time" in that paragraph were read as "on March 23, 2004", and

(B) the reference to "December 31, 2004" in that paragraph were read as "March 22, 2004", and

(ii) on March 24, 2004 was a mutual fund trust.

This proposal is unlikely to be enacted in its current form: see news release below.

Dept. of Finance news release 2004-075, Dec. 6, 2004: Today's Notice [of Ways and Means Motion, later Bill C-33 replacing the Sept. 16/04 draft legislation, now enacted as S.C. 2005, c. 19 — ed.] does not include the proposal concerning mutual funds maintained primarily for the benefit of non-residents. Further discussions will be pursued with the private sector concerning the appropriate Canadian tax treatment of non-residents investing in resource property through mutual funds.

Technical Notes: Subsection 132(7) provides that a trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at the particular time, it is reasonable to conclude that the trust was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. There are two exceptions to this rule. The first, which is set out in paragraph 132(7)(a), applies if, throughout the period that started on February 21, 1990 (or if later, the date of the trust's creation) and that ends at the particular time, all or substantially all of the trust's property consisted of property other than taxable Canadian property. The second, which is set out in paragraph 132(7)(b), applies if the trust did not issue any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was not resident in Canada, except where the unit was issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

The preamble to subsection 132(7) is amended to provide that a trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at that time, more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued units of the trust is attributable to the fair market value of those issued units that are held by one or any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships other than Canadian partnerships (as defined in section 102).

This amendment applies

- after March 22, 2004 to a trust that elects otherwise in writing by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year in which the amendment receives Royal Assent; and
- after 2004 to trusts that do not so elect. Where a trust does not so elect, subsection 132(7) will continue to provide, until December 31, 2004, that the trust is not a mutual fund trust after a particular time if, at that time, it can reasonably be considered that the trust (having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust) was created, or is maintained, primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons.

The loss, under the general rule in subsection 132(7), after the particular time of a trust's status as a mutual fund trust will continue to be subject to the exceptions found in paragraphs 132(7)(a) and (b).

Paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to clarify that, together with other forms of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property and timber resource property are included in determining the availability of relief under that paragraph. Except as otherwise provided in the transitional rules for the amendments, the amendments to paragraph 132(7)(a) apply after March 22, 2004.

Trusts created after 2004

In particular, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that it applies to a trust created after 2004 if, throughout the period that begins on the later of January 1, 2005 and the day of its creation and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as newly defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Trusts created before 2005

For a trust created before 2005, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that it applies to the trust if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2005 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and

- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2004, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

For more detail on the new definition "specified property" in subsection 132(4), please see the commentary on that subsection.

Transitional relief: trusts otherwise offside on March 23, 2004

Some trusts that were otherwise mutual fund trusts at the end of March 23, 2004, might have lost their mutual fund status on March 23, 2004 if the addition of Canadian resource property and timber resource property to the properties considered in determining the application of paragraph 132(7)(a) applied on March 23, 2004. For such a trust, paragraph 132(7)(a) is amended to provide that the exception in that paragraph applies to the trust if both

- throughout the period that begins on January 1, 2007 and ends at the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a "specified property" (as defined in subsection 132(4)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and

- throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its incorporation and ends on the earlier of the particular time and December 31, 2006, the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a taxable Canadian property (determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1)) of the trust was not more than 10% of the fair market value of all of its properties.

Paragraph 132(7)(b) is amended to provide that it applies to a trust only if the trust satisfies the existing condition in that paragraph (i.e., the condition found, under these amendments, in subparagraph 132(7)(b)(i)) and it has not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a partnership as a payment, or in satisfaction of the partnership's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income determined before the application of subsection 104(6), or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust on or after September 16, 2004 and before the particular time to a partnership that, after reasonable enquiry, it had reason to believe was not a Canadian partnership, except where the unit was issued to that partnership under an agreement in writing, between the trust and the partnership, entered into before September 16, 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 5, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of September 23, 2004 concerning the legislative proposals relating to subsection 132(7) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") that were announced by the Department of Finance on September 16, 2004.

To briefly highlight the legislative proposals, it is proposed, effective after December 31, 2004, that the preamble to subsection 132(7) be amended to provide that a commercial trust ceases under certain circumstances to be a mutual fund trust if more than 50% of the fair market value of the issued trust units are held by any combination of non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership).

Under those legislative proposals, if the ownership of the commercial trust's units by non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership) exceeds the 50% limit described above, the commercial trust could still maintain its status as a mutual fund trust provided:

1) At all times after February 21, 1990, not more than 10% of the fair market value of all the trust's property can be attributed to taxable Canadian property; and

2) At all times after December 31, 2004, not more than 10% of the fair market value of all the trust's property can be attributed to property that is any of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource property or timber resource property.

In your letter, you had recommended that under the proposed new fair market value test, units of a different class of trust, which have substantially the same rights to the income, and capital of the trust should be deemed to have the same fair market value. You have stated that the fair market value of a publicly listed security is generally considered to be equal to its trading price and, as a consequence, it could be difficult for a mutual fund trust with units trading on a foreign exchange and a Canadian exchange to manage the relative fair market values of issued trust units held by residents and non-resident persons or partnerships (other than a Canadian partnership). This difficulty arises because trust units held by non-residents may trade at a premium because of market forces, even though the rights of the units are substantially the same except for ownership restrictions based on country of residence. With regard to this recommendation, we are willing to conduct further study and consultation with the view to addressing this potential difficulty while preserving the integrity of the 50% non-resident ownership test.

You have also requested that the new taxable Canadian property exceptions mentioned above be applied prospectively after March 22, 2004. The proposed rules provide a 10% taxable Canadian property ownership limitation that would have to be measured at all times subsequent to February 21, 1990. You argue that the application of this new 10% brightline test to past periods would be inappropriate, given that the new test explicitly requires the trust to respect a 10% threshold based on the fair market value of the trust's assets whereas the "all or substantially all" test gave rise to some uncertainty as to whether cost or market value would be the appropriate measurement base.

Given the possible differing interpretations of the "all or substantially all" test in paragraph 132(7)(a), it would seem appropriate to maintain the existing "all or substantially all" test for periods prior to 2005. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the proposed legislation be modified to provide this result. While we cannot offer any assurances that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Enewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 89(1), will amend para. 132.11(1)(b) to read as above, applicable after 1998, except that in applying the para. to taxation years that end before 2000, it is to be read without reference to "subject to subsection (1.1)".

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 132.11 generally allows a mutual fund trust to elect to have taxation years that end on December 15, rather than on December 31.

Where a trust makes this election, each subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to start on December 16 of a calendar year and to end on December 15 of the following calendar year, unless any of certain events intervenes. One of the events that can intervene, and that results in an earlier year-end, is a qualifying exchange under section 132.2.

As a consequence of the restructuring of section 132.2, the reference in paragraph 132.11(1)(b) to paragraph 132.2(1)(b) is replaced by a reference to paragraph 132.2(3)(b).

Paragraph 132.11(1)(c) generally provides that each fiscal period of a mutual fund trust that has made an election under subsection 132.11(1) shall end no later than the end of the trust's taxation year that ends on December 15th.

(c) each fiscal period of the trust that begins in a taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 because of paragraph (a) or that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall end no later than the end of the year or the subsequent year, as the case may be.

Regulations: 4801.01 (prescribed trust).

(1.1) Revocation of election — Where a particular taxation year of a trust ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of an election made under paragraph (1)(a), the trust applies to the Minister in writing before December 15 of that calendar year (or before a later time that is acceptable to the Minister) to have this subsection apply to the trust, with the concurrence of the Minister

(a) the trust's taxation year following the particular taxation year is deemed to begin immediately after the end of the particular taxation year and end at the end of that calendar year; and

(b) each subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be determined as if that election had not been made.

History: Subsec. 132.11(1.1) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 130(2), applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

(2) Electing trust's share of partnership income and losses — Where a trust is a member of a partnership a fiscal period of which ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount otherwise determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) to be the trust's income or loss for a subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be the trust's income or loss determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) for the particular year and not for the subsequent year.

(3) Electing trust's income from other trusts — Where a particular trust is a beneficiary under another trust a taxation year of which (in this subsection referred to as the "other year") ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount determined or designated under subsection 104(13), (19), (21), (22) or (29) for the other year that would otherwise be included, or taken into account, in computing the income of the particular trust for a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall

(a) be included, or taken into account, in computing the particular trust's income for the particular year; and

(b) not be included, or taken into account, in computing the particular trust's income for the subsequent year.

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — For the purposes of subsections (5) and (6) and 104(6) and (13) and notwithstanding subsection 104(24), each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year, is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year and not at any other time.

Proposed Amendment — 132.11(4)

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — Notwithstanding subsection 104(24), for the purposes of subsections (5) and (6) and 104(6) and (13) and paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year, is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year and not at any other time.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 89(3), will amend subsec. 132.11(4) to read as above, applicable to amounts that, after 1999, are paid or have become payable by a trust.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 132.11(4) is designed to permit distributions made in the last 16 days of a calendar year in respect of a trust's taxation year ending on December 15 of the calendar year to be treated as if they were made at the end of that taxation year.

Subsection 132.11(4) is amended so that it applies for the purpose of paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1). As a result, in the case of a mutual fund trust that has elected under section 132.11 to have a December 15th taxation year-end, distributions from the trust in respect of a taxpayer's capital interest made in the last 16 days of a calendar year will not result in a disposition of the interest.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 7, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of January 8, 2003, concerning the application of subsection 132.11(4) of the Income Tax Act in the context of distributions by a mutual fund trust.

Section 132.11 of the Act generally allows a mutual fund trust to elect to have a taxation year that ends on December 15. The objective of section 132.11 of the Act is to provide mutual fund trusts with an administratively workable basis for calculating income and distributions for a taxation year and for reporting on a timely basis. Subsection 132.11(4) permits, for a number of purposes including subsections 104(6) and (13) of the Act, distributions made in the last 16 days of a calendar year in respect of a trust's taxation year that ends on December 15 of the calendar year to be treated as if they were made at the end of that taxation year.

Paragraph (d) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act provides that a taxpayer disposes of the taxpayer's capital interest in a trust upon payment of an amount, from the trust, that is in respect of the capital interest. An exception to this general rule is found in paragraph (i) of the definition, which provides that there is no such disposition if the payment is made out of the trust's income (determined without reference to subsection 104(6)) or capital gains for a taxation year and the payment was made in that taxation year or the right to the payment was acquired in that taxation year.

As subsection 132.11(4) does not apply for the purpose of paragraph (1) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act, you are concerned that, in the case of a mutual fund trust that has elected under section 132.11 to have a December 15th taxation year-end, distributions from the trust in respect of a taxpayer's capital interest made in the last 16 days of a calendar year will result in a disposition of the interest.

From a policy perspective, a disposition of the taxpayer's capital interest would be unintended in these circumstances. This is because the relevant distribution would generally be recognized in computing the taxpayer's income, such that a disposition of the taxpayer's interest upon the distribution might give rise to double taxation of the amount distributed. Therefore, we are prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act so that subsection 132.11(4) does, for payments made by a mutual fund trust after 1999, apply for the purpose of paragraph (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Administrative Policy — Extension of filing deadlines after merger

Letter from CRA, May 5, 2004:

Mr. John Mountain, Vice President, Regulation, The Investment Funds Institute of Canada, Toronto, Ontario

Dear Mr. Mountain:

Re: Blanket Extension of Time to Make Tax Filings After Mutual Funds Mergers.

This is in response to your letter dated June 25, 2003, addressed to Mr. David Miller, Assistant Commissioner, Assessment and Collections Branch, and the subsequent meeting between you and Thomas C. Lee representing IFIC, and Doug Watson and André Gauthier representing the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA). Your letter was forwarded to us for reply.

In your letter, you requested that CRA grant a blanket extension of time for all tax filings that must be prepared by unit trusts and mutual fund trusts that are a party to a merger, whether or not the merger was a "qualifying exchange" as defined in subsection 132.2(2) of the Income Tax Act (ITA). The types of tax filings to be covered by your request would include:

- T3 Trust Income Tax Return
- T3 Summary and Supplementary
- NR4 Summary and Supplementary
- T5008 Summary and Supplementary

As well, you requested that the filing due date be extended to the next normal filing date that would have occurred in the absence of the merger (i.e. 90 days after December 15 or December 31). Finally, with respect to the continuing fund, you asked to combine the information for the taxation years immediately before and after the merger date into one T3 slip for each unit-holder (to avoid having to issue multiple slips to the investors for the same calendar year).

Blanket extension of time for return filing

As previously discussed, CRA is unable to agree to a blanket extension of the time for filing the required returns and summaries. However, we are prepared to review all requests for an extension of time for tax filings on a merging of mutual funds on a case-by-case basis. This will ensure that CRA has all requisite information on hand to make an informed decision. In order to consider granting an extension, the Mutual Fund Manager or Trustee should provide CRA with the following information:

- Reasons for requesting an extension of time.
- Names of the units trusts, mutual funds trust or mutual funds corporation involved with their identification numbers, the date of the merger and when CRA may expect to receive the related returns.
- Is the exchange a "qualifying exchange" and is an election made under paragraph 132.2(2)(c) of the definition of "qualifying exchange"?

At the APFF 2002 round table, the Department of Finance indicated that they would not commit to extending the use of section 132.2, by administrative policy, to any entity other than the ones described in the section. Consequently, extensions of time will be granted only to mutual funds or unit trusts that are deemed mutual fund trusts for the purposes of the ITA. An extension of time request will be considered provided the appropriate information outlined above is provided to CRA and the requester agrees to:

- File the T3 returns, T3 summaries, NR4 summaries for each mutual fund that is part of the merger, no later than the date indicated in the letter granting the extension, which cannot exceed the next normal filing date that would have occurred in the absence of the merger.
- Identify each of the relevant T3 returns, when they are filed as either the transferee trust or transferor trust.
- Indicate whether the reorganization has created a new transferee trust instead of a continuation of the existing trust. It should be noted that a Trust account number would be issued to any newly created transferee trust when it is filed.
- Identify any amount of refundable capital gains on hand available to be transferred.
- Attach a copy of the letter approving the request to each of the relevant returns.
- Provide CRA with a breakdown of the types of income and capital gains of the various underlying funds.
- The granting of an extension of time should not, in any circumstances, trigger any year-ends of any mutual funds as defined in the ITA.

Combining of reporting information into one T3 slip for each unit-holder

The T3 Guide currently authorizes mutual funds that file magnetic media to combine information on the T3 slip from several funds onto one T3 slip for each unit-holder. However, when reporting slips are combined, it is necessary to:

- Prepare the tape, cartridge, CD-ROM, or diskette of summaries and slips, which will be submitted to CRA for each individual fund;
- Provide unit-holders with statements that allow them to reconcile the amounts reported on the combined information slips;
- Maintain an audit trail so the combined information slips can be verified, if CRA audits these funds later.

The CRA is prepared to allow the continuing fund to combine the information for the taxation years immediately before and after the merger date into one T3 slip for each unit-holder provided, of course, that the 3 requirements above are also followed. This policy would also apply to any NR4 Summary and slips or T5008 Summary or slips to be issued following a merger of mutual funds.

T4013 — T3 Trust Guide

In order to ensure that the above information is widely disseminated, we will request that the T3 Guide be amended to include that information.

Conclusion

As indicated at our meeting, while the CRA cannot grant a blanket extension of time for tax filings, we are prepared to facilitate a request that helps to improve compliance. CRA will consider a request for an extension of time for tax filings on a merging of mutual funds for the units trusts and mutual funds trusts that are part of the merger. CRA also confirms that the continuing fund may combine information on specific slips for each unit-holder, provided the requester complies with the requirements pointed out in this letter.

To minimize any delay in responding to an extension request, the request should be forwarded to the Assistant Director, Verification and Enforcement Division (ADVE), located in the Taxation Services Office (TSO) where the Funds Manager has its own file. This TSO will review the request and provide its answer to the Funds Manager.

With respect to the issue regarding the combined reporting of information on information slips such as the T-3, we will be forwarding a copy of this letter to the Department of Finance for consideration of a legislative change.

Proposed Amendment — 132.2

132.2 (1) Definitions re qualifying exchange [rollover] of mutual funds — The following definitions apply in this section.

"first post-exchange year", of a fund in respect of a qualifying exchange, means the taxation year of the fund that begins immediately after the acquisition time.

"qualifying exchange" means a transfer at any time (in this section referred to as the "transfer time") of all or substantially all of the property of a mutual fund corporation (other than a SIFT wind-up corporation) or a mutual fund trust to a mutual fund trust (in this section referred to as the "transferor" and "transferee", respectively, and as the "funds") if

(a) all or substantially all of the shares issued by the transferor and outstanding immediately before the transfer time are within 60 days after the transfer time disposed of to the transferor;

(b) no person disposing of shares of the transferor to the transferor within that 60-day period (otherwise than pursuant to the exercise of a statutory right of dissent) receives any consideration for the shares other than units of the transferee; and

(c) the funds jointly so elect, by filing a prescribed form with the Minister on or before the election's due date.

Related Provisions: 7(1.4) — Exchange of options giving mutual fund trust employee right to acquire units; 54"superficial loss"(c) — No superficial loss on deemed disposition and reacquisition; 132.2(6) — Due date for election in para. (c); 132.2(7) — Amendment or revocation of election.

Forms: T1169: Election on disposition of property by a mutual fund corporation (or a mutual fund trust) to a mutual fund trust.

"share" means a share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation and a unit of a mutual fund trust.

(2) Timing — In respect of a qualifying exchange, a time referred to in the following list immediately follows the time that precedes it in the list

(a) the transfer time;

(b) the first intervening time;

(c) the acquisition time;

(d) the beginning of the funds' first post-exchange years;

(e) the depreciables disposition time;

(f) the second intervening time; and

(g) the depreciables acquisition time.

(3) General — In respect of a qualifying exchange,

(a) each property of a fund, other than property disposed of by the transferor to the transferee at the transfer time and depreciable property, is deemed to have been disposed of, and to have been reacquired by the fund, at the first intervening time, for an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property at the transfer time, and

(ii) the greater of

(A) its cost amount, and

(B) the amount that the fund designates in respect of the property in a notification to the Minister accompanying the election in respect of the qualifying exchange;

(b) subject to paragraph (l), the last taxation years of the funds that began before the transfer time are deemed to have ended at the acquisition time, and their first post-exchange years are deemed to have begun immediately after those last taxation years ended;

(c) each depreciable property of a fund (other than property to which subsection (5) applies and property to which paragraph (d) would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, apply) is deemed to have been disposed of, and to have been reacquired, by the fund at the second intervening time for an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property at the depreciables disposition time, and

(ii) the greater of

(A) the lesser of its capital cost and its cost amount to the disposing fund at the depreciables disposition time, and

(B) the amount that the fund designates in respect of the property in a notification to the Minister accompanying the election in respect of the qualifying exchange;

(d) if at the second intervening time the undepreciated capital cost to a fund of depreciable property of a prescribed class exceeds the fair market value of all the property of that class, the excess is to be deducted in computing the fund's income for the taxation year that includes the transfer time and is deemed to have been allowed in respect of property of that class under regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a);

(e) except as provided in paragraph (m), the transferor's cost of any particular property received by the transferor from the transferee as consideration for the disposition of the property is deemed to be

(i) nil, if the particular property is a unit of the transferee, and

(ii) the particular property's fair market value at the transfer time, in any other case;

(f) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of any units of the transferee that were disposed of by the transferor at any particular time that is within 60 days after the transfer time in exchange for shares of the transferor, are deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the units to the transferor immediately before the particular time;

(g) if, at any particular time that is within 60 days after the transfer time, a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee

(i) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the cost to the taxpayer of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the shares immediately before the particular time,

(ii) where all of the taxpayer's shares of the transferor have been so disposed of, for the purpose of applying section 39.1 in respect of the taxpayer after that disposition, the transferee is deemed to be the same entity as the transferor,

(iii) for the purpose of the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210, the units are deemed not to have been held at any time by the transferor, and

(iv) where the taxpayer is at the particular time affiliated with one or both of the funds,

(A) those units are deemed not to be identical to any other units of the transferee,

(B) if the taxpayer is the transferee, and the units cease to exist when the taxpayer acquires them (or, for greater certainty, when the taxpayer would but for that cessation have acquired them), the taxpayer is deemed

(I) to have acquired those units at the particular time, and

(II) to have disposed of those units immediately after the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of those units at the particular time, and

(C) in any other case, for the purpose of computing any gain or loss of the taxpayer from the taxpayer's first disposition, after the particular time, of each of those units,

(I) if that disposition is a renunciation or surrender of the unit by the taxpayer for no consideration, and is not in favour of any person other than the transferee, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed to be equal to that unit's cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition, and

(II) if subclause (I) does not apply, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed to be equal to the greater of that unit's fair market value and its cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition;

(h) where a share to which paragraph (g) applies would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, cease to be a qualified investment (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1), 146.1(1) or 146.3(1), section 204 or subsection 205(1) or 207.01(1)) as a consequence of the qualifying exchange, the share is deemed to be a qualified investment until the earlier of the day that is 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time and the time at which it is disposed of in accordance with paragraph (g);

(i) there shall be added to the amount determined under the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the transferee for its taxation years that begin after the transfer time the amount, if any, by which

(i) the transferor's refundable capital gains tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 131(6) or 132(4), as the case may be) at the end of its taxation year that includes the transfer time

exceeds

(ii) the transferor's capital gains refund (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 131(2)(a) or 132(1)(a), as the case may be) for that year;

(j) no amount in respect of a non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss of a fund for a taxation year that began before the transfer time is deductible in computing the taxable income of either of the funds for a taxation year that begins after the transfer time;

(k) if the transferor is a mutual fund trust, for the purposes of subsections 132.1(1) and (3) to (5), the transferee is deemed after the transfer time to be the same mutual fund trust as, and a continuation of, the transferor;

(l) if the transferor is a mutual fund corporation

(i) for the purpose of subsection 131(4) but, for greater certainty, without having any effect on the computation of any amount determined under this Part, the transferor is deemed in respect of any share disposed of in accordance with paragraph (g) to be a mutual fund corporation at the time of the disposition, and

(ii) for the purpose of Part I.3 but, for greater certainty, without having any effect on the computation of any amount determined under this Part, the transferor's taxation year that, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, would have included the transfer time is deemed to have ended immediately before the transfer time;

(m) for the purpose of determining the funds' capital gains redemptions (as defined in subsection 131(6) or 132(4), as the case may be), for their taxation years that include the transfer time,

(i) the total of the cost amounts to the transferor of all its properties at the end of the year is deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of a property that was transferred to a transferee on the qualifying exchange, or

(B) the cost amount to the transferor at the end of the year of a property that was not transferred on the qualifying exchange, and

(ii) the transferee is deemed not to have acquired any property that was transferred to it on the qualifying exchange; and

(n) except as provided in subparagraph (l)(i), the transferor is, notwithstanding subsections 131(8) and 132(6), deemed to be neither a mutual fund corporation nor a mutual fund trust for taxation years that begin after the transfer time.

[o), (p)] [see Proposed Addition of Oct. 31, 2011 at end of proposed 132.2 — ed.]

Technical Notes (July 2010): Definition "designated beneficiary"

New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iii) applies in determining whether a person is a "designated beneficiary" (as defined in section 210 of the Act) of a trust. Under the definition designated beneficiary, certain persons or partnerships that are beneficiaries under a trust may be treated (or may cause trusts or partnerships of which they are beneficiaries or members to be treated) as designated beneficiaries under the trust, unless the relevant interest in the trust is held at all times by the person or partnership, as the case may be, or by another person exempt because of subsection 149(1) from tax, under Part I of the Act, on all of the other person's taxable income.

In a qualifying exchange, a mutual fund trust or mutual fund corporation (transferor) transfers all or substantially all of its property to another mutual fund trust (transferee) and takes back units of the transferee. Those units are then provided by the transferor to its investors in exchange for their shares or units of the transferor. New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iii) ensures that, in these circumstances, the transferor is treated, for the purpose of the definition designated beneficiary, as not having held the units of the transferee.

This amendment applies for qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998. A similar rule, in former subparagraph 132.2(1)(j)(iii), applies for qualifying exchanges that occurred after June 1994 and before 1999.

New paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g) are amended to ensure that the mutual fund merger rules do not apply inappropriately to create artificial or "phantom" losses. Although the changes reflected in these new provisions are not expected to be relevant to most qualifying exchanges, the following is a description of their purpose and effect.

Under the definition "qualifying exchange" in new subsection 132.2(1), all or substantially all of the outstanding shares issued by the transferor must be disposed of to the transferor within the 60 days after the transfer time, and every person so disposing of shares of the transferor must receive only units of the transferee as consideration. The second leg of a qualifying exchange is thus a set of transactions in which the transferor's investors replace their shares of the transferor with units of the transferee. The tax effect of those transactions are governed by paragraphs 132.2(1)(f) and (g). For clarity, these notes reflect the legislation by referring to investments in the transferor — whether a corporation or a trust — as shares, reserving the term "units" to refer to the units of the transferee mutual fund trust.

Existing paragraph 132.2(1)(i) provides that if, within 60 days after the transfer time, the transferor fund disposed of units of the transferee in exchange for shares of itself, its proceeds of disposition are deemed to be nil. Since the units acquired by the transferor in return for its property are deemed, under existing paragraph 132.2(1)(h) (now new paragraph 132.2(3)(e)), also to have had a cost of nil, this provision allows the transferor to roll those units out to its investors with no tax consequences to it. New paragraph 132.2(3)(f) provides that if, within 60 days after the transfer time, the transferor fund disposes of units of the transferee in exchange for shares of itself, its proceeds of disposition will be deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the units to the transferor immediately before the disposition. This change — from nil proceeds to proceeds equal to cost amount — ensures appropriate results if the transferor held units of the transferee that were acquired otherwise than as a result of the qualifying exchange. In this situation, that first tranche of units will have a cost base that, pursuant to section 47, will be averaged with the second tranche of units (i.e. the units that the transferor acquired in the qualifying exchange). Existing paragraph 132.2(1)(i) deems the proceeds of the disposition of the second tranche of units to be nil, an inappropriate result in that it creates a phantom loss. New paragraph 132.2(3)(f), deeming the proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount of the units to the transferor immediately before the disposition, ensures that the transferor can still roll units of the transferee out to its investors with no tax consequences to it, and avoids the creation of a phantom loss.

Existing subparagraph 132.2(1)(j)(i) provides that, where a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within that same 60-day period, both the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the taxpayer's cost of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the shares immediately before the transfer time. New subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(i) provides that, where a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within that same 60-day period, both the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the taxpayer's cost of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount of the shares immediately before the disposition. This change — from measuring the cost amount of the shares immediately before the transfer time to measuring it immediately before the disposition — ensures that the transferor's investors will not realize any gain or loss on their exchange of their shares for units of the transferee.

Paragraph 132.2(3)(g) also includes a new subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iv) to address the disposition by certain persons or partnerships of the units in the transferee that they received on the qualifying exchange. Those affected by this new provision are those who, when they acquire the units, are affiliated with one or both of the funds. This could include, for example, the transferee itself, or a corporation it controls.

The subparagraph first deems the units received in the qualifying exchange not to be identical to any other units of the transferee. This segregates the new units from the averaging effect of section 47.

Next, the subparagraph specifies the effects of disposing of the new units. If the taxpayer is the transferee, and the units cease to exist when the taxpayer acquires them (if, for example, the units are cancelled immediately on receipt), clause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(B) provides two effects. First, to prevent any possible question in this regard, the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired those units. This ensures, among other things, that subparagraph (i) establishes the taxpayer's cost of the units. Second, the taxpayer is treated as having disposed of those units immediately after it acquired them, for proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of those units at that time. This ensures, for greater certainty, that a transferee that had an investment in the transferor prior to the qualifying exchange will not incur a phantom loss as a result of exchanging its shares in the transferor in return for units of itself.

If the taxpayer is affiliated with one or both of the funds, but is not the transferee, clause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C) provides that, for the purpose of computing any gain or loss of the taxpayer from the taxpayer's first disposition of each of those units, the proceeds of disposition of the unit will depend on whether the disposition is a renunciation or surrender of the unit or some other disposition.

New subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(I) provides that, if the disposition is a renunciation or surrender of the unit by the taxpayer for no consideration, and is not in favour of any person other than the transferee, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed to be equal to that unit's cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition. This ensures that an affiliated taxpayer will never incur a phantom loss or gain on the renunciation or surrender of the unit.

If the disposition is not a renunciation or surrender of the unit described in subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(I), the affiliated taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that unit are deemed by subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(II) to be equal to the greater of that unit's fair market value and its cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before that disposition. This ensures that the taxpayer will never incur a loss, including a phantom loss, on a disposition of one of those units, but may incur a gain.

Two additional points should be noted with respect to the operation of new subparagraph 132.2(3)(g)(iv).

- The deeming, by subclause 132.2(3)(g)(iv)(C)(II), of a taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the units the taxpayer acquired on the qualifying exchange applies only to the first disposition of each unit. It is possible that a taxpayer might dispose of a unit and then reacquire the same unit (under, for example, the change in residence rules in section 128.1). The subclause will not apply to any subsequent disposition of the unit by that taxpayer.
- In some circumstances, an affiliated taxpayer may have a latent loss on a share of the transferor prior to the qualifying exchange, and may wish to realize that loss. This can be done, if the affiliated taxpayer disposes of the share prior to the qualifying exchange. However, the possible application of the Act's "superficial loss" and loss deferral rules would have to be borne in mind.

New paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g), together with the rest of new subsection 132.2(3), generally apply to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998. A limited exception applies in respect of certain qualifying exchanges in respect of which a return of income, claiming the losses sought to be prevented by these amendments, was filed by the transferee mutual fund before July 18, 2005.

Related Provisions: 54"superficial loss"(c) — Superficial loss rule does not apply to disposition under 132.2(3)(a) or (c); 132.2(4) — Transfer of non-depreciable property; 132.2(5) — Transfer of depreciable property.

Regulations: 1105 (prescribed classes of depreciable property).

(4) Qualifying exchange — non-depreciable property — If a transferor transfers a property, other than a depreciable property, to a transferee in a qualifying exchange

(a) the transferee is deemed to have acquired the property at the acquisition time and not to have acquired the property at the transfer time; and

(b) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of the property and the transferee's cost of the property are deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property at the transfer time, and

(ii) the greatest of

(A) the cost amount to the transferor of the property at the transfer time,

(B) the amount that the funds agree on in respect of the property in their election, and

(C) the fair market value at the transfer time of the consideration (other than units of the transferee) received by the transferor for the disposition of the property.

(5) Depreciable property — If a transferor transfers a depreciable property to a transferee in a qualifying exchange,

(a) the transferor is deemed to have disposed of the property at the depreciables disposition time, and not to have disposed of the property at the transfer time;

(b) the transferee is deemed to have acquired the property at the depreciables acquisition time, and not to have acquired the property at the transfer time;

(c) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of the property and the transferee's cost of the property are deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property at the transfer time, and

(ii) the greatest of

(A) the lesser of its capital cost and its cost amount to the transferor immediately before the depreciables disposition time,

(B) the amount that the funds agree on in respect of the property in their election, and

(C) the fair market value at the transfer time of the consideration (other than units of the transferee) received by the transferor for the disposition of the property;

(d) where the capital cost of the property to the transferor exceeds the transferor's proceeds of disposition of the property under paragraph (c), for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the property's capital cost to the transferee is deemed to be the amount that was its capital cost to the transferor, and

(ii) the excess is deemed to have been allowed to the transferee in respect of the property under regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years ending before the transfer time; and

(e) where two or more depreciable properties of a prescribed class are disposed of by the transferor to the transferee in the same qualifying exchange, paragraph (c) applies as if each property so disposed of had been separately disposed of in the order designated by the transferor at the time of making the election in respect of the qualifying exchange or, if the transferor does not so designate any such order, in the order designated by the Minister.

(6) Due date — The due date of an election referred to in paragraph (c) of the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsection (1) is

(a) the day that is 6 months after the day that includes the transfer time; and

(b) on joint application by the funds, any later day that the Minister accepts.

(7) Amendment or revocation of election — The Minister may, on joint application by the funds on or before the due date of an election referred to in paragraph (c) of the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsection (1), grant permission to amend or revoke the election.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 90, will amend s. 132.2 to read as above, applicable as follows:

- the definitions "first post-exchange year" and "share" in subsec. 132.2(1), and subsecs. 132.2(2) to (5), are applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998, except that

  (a) if a qualifying exchange occurred before July 18, 2005 and the transferee has before July 18, 2005 filed a return of income, for any taxation year, that identified the realization of any loss that would not have been realized if paras. 132.2(3)(f) and (g), as amended, had applied in respect of the qualifying exchange, those paras. are to be read in their application to the qualifying exchange as follows:

  (f) the transferor's proceeds of disposition of any units of the transferee that were received by the transferor as consideration for the disposition of the property, and that were disposed of by the transferor within 60 days after the transfer time in exchange for shares of the transferor, are deemed to be nil;

  (g) if, within 60 days after the transfer time, a taxpayer disposes of shares of the transferor to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee

  (i) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the cost to the taxpayer of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the shares immediately before the transfer time,

  (ii) where all of the taxpayer's shares of the transferor have been so disposed of, for the purpose of applying section 39.1 in respect of the taxpayer after that disposition, the transferee is deemed to be the same entity as the transferor, and

  (iii) for the purpose of the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210, the units are deemed not to have been held at any time by the transferor;

  (b) before the 2008 taxation year, para. 132.2(3)(h) is to be read as follows:

  (h) where a share to which paragraph (g) applies would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, cease to be a qualified investment (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1), 146.1(1) or 146.3(1) or section 204) as a consequence of the qualifying exchange, the share is deemed to be a qualified investment until the earlier of the day that is 60 days after the transfer time and the time at which it is disposed of in accordance with paragraph (g);

  (c) for the 2008 taxation year, para. 132.2(3)(h) is to be read as follows:

  (h) where a share to which paragraph (g) applies would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, cease to be a qualified investment (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1), 146.1(1) or 146.3(1), section 204 or subsection 205(1)) as a consequence of the qualifying exchange, the share is deemed to be a qualified investment until the earlier of the day that is 60 days after the transfer time and the time at which it is disposed of in accordance with paragraph (g);

- for qualifying exchanges that occurred after June 1994 and before 1999, para. 132.2(1)(j) is to be read as follows:

  (j) where shares of the transferor have been disposed of by a taxpayer to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within 60 days after the transfer time,

  (i) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares and the cost to the taxpayer of the units are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the shares immediately before the transfer time,

  (ii) if all of the taxpayer's shares of the transferor have been so disposed of, for the purposes of applying section 39.1 in respect of the taxpayer after that disposition, the transferee is deemed to be the same entity as the transferor, and

  (iii) for the purpose of the definition "designated beneficiary" in section 210, the units are deemed not to have been held at any time by the transferor;

- the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsec. 132.2(1) and subsecs. 132.2(6) and (7) are applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after June 1994 except that, before December 20, 2007, the opening words of the definition "qualifying exchange" are to be read as follows:

  "qualifying exchange" means a transfer at any time (in this section referred to as the "transfer time") of all or substantially all of the property of a mutual fund corporation or a mutual fund trust to a mutual fund trust (in this section referred to as the "transferor" and "transferee", respectively, and as the "funds") if

If a valid election referred to in para. (c) of the definition "qualifying exchange" in subsec. 132.2(2) was made, the election continues to have the effect of having s. 132.2, as modified from time to time, apply to the transfer.

If a valid election referred to in subsec. 159(4) of the Income Tax Amendments Act, 1997 [S.C. 1998, c. 19; see History to subsec. 132.2(1)] was made in respect of a qualifying exchange to read subsec. 132.2(1) of the Act without reference to para. 132.2(1)(p), the election is, on the application of this amendment, deemed to have the effect of reading subsec. 132.2(3), in respect of the qualifying exchange, without reference to para. 132.2(3)(i).

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 132.2 provides rules to allow two mutual fund trusts, or a mutual fund trust and a mutual fund corporation, to merge on a tax-deferred basis. Such a merger is referred to as a "qualifying exchange".

In addition to introducing several substantive improvements to the rules in section 132.2, these amendments restructure the provision as a whole. In general terms, the section is now organized as follows: new subsection 132.2(1) sets out definitions that apply for the section; subsection (2) describes the order in which the events that make up a qualifying exchange are considered to have occurred; subsection (3) provides a set of general rules; subsection (4) deals with non-depreciable property that is transferred on the qualifying exchange; and subsection (5) deals with depreciable property that is transferred. Subsection (6) establishes the due date for the election to treat a transfer as a qualifying exchange; and subsection (7) provides authority for the Minister of National Revenue to allow that election to be amended or revoked.

Despite this restructuring, the basic principles of section 132.2 remain unchanged, as do most aspects of its operation. The exceptions — the areas where these amendments change the provision substantively — have to do with depreciable property that is transferred on a qualifying exchange, and with the election to treat a transaction as a qualifying exchange. Further modifications have been made to prevent the creation of artificial or "phantom" losses, generally in circumstances where one fund holds units or shares of the other fund immediately before the transfer time.

Transfers of Depreciable Property

In its current form, section 132.2 does not deal comprehensively with transfers of depreciable property between mutual funds. In particular, the deemed timing of the transfer, in relation to the deemed year-end of the funds, may prevent either fund from claiming capital cost allowance (CCA) for the last taxation year that began before the qualifying exchange. The transferor has disposed of the property two moments before the end of its year, and the transferee will not acquire it until the last moment of its own year.

To ensure that one CCA claim is available for that last year, new subsection 132.2(5) provides a special regime for qualifying exchanges that include transfers of depreciable property. A key aspect of these special rules is the ordering of events in accordance with new subsection 132.2(2). That subsection provides that, starting with the actual (i.e., legal) transfer of property between a transferor fund and a transferee fund that carry out a qualifying exchange, the following series of times occurs, each immediately after the previous one:

Name of Time	Description	Reference
the transfer time	The actual transfer of the property between the funds takes place.	definition "qualifying exchange" in 132.2(1)
the first intervening time	The funds are treated as having disposed of and re-acquired non-transferred property (other than depreciable property).	132.2(3)(a)
the acquisition time	The transferee is treated as having acquired transferred property (other than depreciable property); the funds' taxation years are treated as ending.	132.2(4)(a); 132.2(3)(b)
the beginning of the funds' first post-exchange years		132.2(3)(b)
the depreciables disposition time	The transferor is deemed to have disposed of any transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(5)(a)

Name of Time	Description	Reference
the second intervening time	The funds are treated as having disposed of and re-acquired any non-transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(3)(c)
the depreciables acquisition time	The transferee is deemed to have acquired any transferred property that is depreciable property.	132.2(5)(b)

As a result of this timing, the transferor fund will be treated as owning, until after its first post-exchange year has begun, any depreciable property that is being transferred. This will ensure that the transfer does not prevent the transferor from deducting CCA in respect of property of that class, for its taxation year that ends at the acquisition time. The new rule also ensures that the transferee does not duplicate that deduction, by treating the transferee as having acquired the property only after its new taxation year has begun.

This treatment of depreciable property applies, along with most aspects of the restructuring of section 132.2, to qualifying exchanges that take place after 1998.

Timing of Election

For section 132.2 to apply to a transfer of property between mutual funds, the definition "qualifying exchange" currently requires the funds to file their joint election in prescribed form with the Minister of National Revenue within six months after the transfer time. This timing requirement is changed to allow greater flexibility. The amended definition "qualifying exchange" requires that the funds' election be made before the election's "due date", defined in new subsection 132.2(6) to mean either the day that is six months after the day that includes the transfer time or any later day that the Minister accepts, on joint application by the funds. An example of a case in which the Minister might accept such an application would be one in which the Minister has already decided to accept a late filing of the funds' returns of income for the taxation year that includes the qualifying exchange.

In certain cases, mutual funds that have elected to treat a transfer as a qualifying exchange may wish to amend, or even revoke, their election. New subsection 132.2(7) allows the funds to do this, on joint application and with the permission of the Minister.

New subsections 132.2(6) and (7), and the amended definition "qualifying exchange" in subsection 132.2(1), apply to qualifying exchanges that take place after June 1994, except that, in applying the amended definition before December 20, 2007, the definition is to be read as though it did not contain the phrase "(other than a SIFT wind-up corporation)".

Proposed Addition and Repeal — 132.2(3)(j.1)

(j.1) if shares of the transferor have been disposed of by a taxpayer to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within 60 days after the transfer time, for the purposes of applying section 116 in respect of the disposition, the shares are deemed to be excluded property of the taxpayer;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 38(4), will add para. 132.2(3)(j.1), applicable for qualifying exchanges that occurred after June 1994 and before 1999.

Technical Notes: See under 132.2(3)(o), (p) below.

Proposed Addition — 132.2(3)(o), (p)

(o) if shares of the transferor have been disposed of by a taxpayer to the transferor in exchange for units of the transferee within 60 days after the transfer time, for the purposes of applying section 116 in respect of the disposition, the shares are deemed to be excluded property of the taxpayer; and

(p) for the purposes of applying section 218.3 in respect of that exchange, the payment or crediting of the units to the taxpayer by the transferor is deemed not to be an assessable distribution.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 38(1), will add paras. 132.2(3)(o) and (p), para. (o) applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998 and para. (p) applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 2004.

Technical Notes: Section 132.2 provides rules to allow two mutual fund trusts, or a mutual fund trust and a mutual fund corporation, to merge on a tax-deferred basis. A merger of this type is referred to as a qualifying exchange.

If a transferor mutual fund acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a transferee mutual fund in the course of a qualifying exchange, section 116 may apply to impose a reporting and withholding obligation. Section 116 generally applies when a non-resident person disposes of taxable Canadian property that is not excluded property. Proposed subsection 132.2(3) is amended to ensure that a qualifying exchange is not subject to section 116.

If a transferor mutual fund acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a transferee mutual fund in the course of a qualifying exchange, Part XIII.2 may apply to impose a 15% tax. In general, Part XIII.2 will apply only if the units or shares of the transferor are listed on a designated (or for certain earlier periods, prescribed) stock exchange and their value is primarily attributable to real property in Canada, Canadian resource property or timber resource property. If the shares or units meet those conditions, a 15% tax will apply to any amount that is paid or credited to a non-resident investor that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.2. Proposed subsection 132.2(3) is amended to ensure that a qualifying exchange is not subject to Part XIII.2.

It is intended that these amendments be co-ordinated with the proposed changes to section 132.2 contained in draft legislation released on July 16, 2010.

The amendment to eliminate section 116 reporting and withholdings requirements applies to qualifying exchanges that occur after June 1994. The amendment to eliminate the requirement for Part XIII.2 tax on the distribution of units to the non-resident investor applies after 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 14, 2006:

Mr. Stephen S. Ruby, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Ruby:

I am writing in response to your letter of January 31, 2006 requesting that we recommend several technical amendments to the mutual fund merger rules in section 132.2 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). These rules are already the subject of extensive proposed amendments, and all section references in this letter refer to the proposed legislation released in draft on July 18, 2005.

1. Timing

You note that there appears to be an inconsistency in the time periods referred to in the definition of "qualifying exchange" in subsection 132.2(1) and in the preamble of paragraph 132.2(3)(g). The definition of "qualifying exchange" requires that all or substantially all of the shares or units of the Transferor [As defined in section 132.2 of the Act.] be disposed of to the Transferor within 60 days after the "transfer time", which is defined to be the time when all or substantially all of the property of the Transferor is transferred to the Transferee [As defined in section 132.2 of the Act.]. The preamble to paragraph 132.2(3)(g) requires that the exchange of shares or units of the Transferor back to the Transferor in exchange for units of the Transferee occur on a tax-deferred basis only if the exchange takes place within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time.

You have requested that the Act be amended to clarify that the two 60-day periods start at the same time. We note that the time period in paragraph 132.2(3)(f) also refers to an event within 60 days after the day that includes the transfer time. We can confirm that in both instances it was not intended by the addition of the words "the day that includes" to refer to a commencement date on the day following the day that includes the transfer time; rather it has always been intended that the commencement date be the day that includes the transfer time.

To clarify that all of the references to a 60-day period in section 132.2 are intended to refer to the same time period, and that the period is to commence on the day that includes the transfer time, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the references to "the day that includes" in paragraphs 132.2(3)(f) and (g) be deleted. [This was done in the version released on July 16, 2010 — ed.] We will also recommend that these changes be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 1998 — the date that the proposed amendments that include the addition of the words "the day that includes" are proposed to come into effect.

2. Application of Section 116

You have noted that there is a concern that where a Transferor acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a Transferee in the course of a qualifying exchange, section 116 of the Act may apply to impose a reporting and withholding obligation. Section 116 generally applies when a non-resident person disposes of taxable Canadian property that is not excluded property. If the Transferor is a mutual fund trust or a mutual fund corporation at the time of the exchange by a non-resident unitholder or shareholder of the Transferor, the shares or units of the Transferor that the unitholder disposes of will generally not be taxable Canadian property at that time and therefore section 116 would not be applicable. However, your concern arises because paragraph 132.2(3)(n) deems the Transferor not to be a mutual fund corporation or a mutual fund trust, as the case may be, for its taxation years beginning after the transfer time. Pursuant to paragraph 132.2(3)(b), the first taxation year of the Transferor after the transfer time begins immediately after the "acquisition time". Given that the Act provides that the exchange may occur within 60 days after the transfer time, it is possible that the exchange will occur after the acquisition time — generally the time that the Transferee is treated as having acquired the property (other than depreciable property) transferred to it by the Transferor — and thus that the shares or units of the Transferor will be taxable Canadian property.

From a policy perspective it is not intended that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange should be subject to section 116. As a result, we are prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that such a transaction is not subject to section 116 [see proposed 132.2(3)(o) — ed.]. Given that this is an unintended technical deficiency in the Act, we will recommend that the amendment be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after June 1994, the date the mutual fund merger rules were introduced.

3. Application of Part XIII.2

You have also noted that there is a concern that where a Transferor acquires its own shares or units in exchange for units of a Transferee in the course of a qualifying exchange, Part XIII.2 of the Act may apply to impose a 15% tax. Unlike the discussion above, the concern arises only if the exchange occurs prior to the acquisition time, when the Transferor is a mutual fund trust or a mutual fund corporation. In general, Part XIII.2 will apply only if the units or shares of the Transferor are listed on a prescribed stock exchange and their value is primarily attributable to real property in Canada, Canadian resource property or timber resource property. If the units or shares meet those conditions, a 15% tax will apply to any amount that is paid or credited to a non-resident investor that is not otherwise subject to tax under Part I or Part XIII.2.

From a policy perspective it is not intended that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange should be subject to Part XIII.2. As a result, we are prepared to recommend that the Act be amended to ensure that such a transaction is not subject to Part XIII.2 [see proposed 132.2(3)(p) — ed.]. We will recommend that the amendment be applicable to qualifying exchanges that occur after 2004, the date Part XIII.2 was introduced.

In conclusion, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended as discussed above to clarify the commencement of the 60-day period and to clarify that the exchange of units or shares of a Transferor for units of the Transferee by a non-resident in the course of a qualifying exchange is not subject to section 116 or Part XIII.2.

While we cannot offer any assurance that the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation in this regard, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(8) Definitions — In this section,

"allowable refund" of a non-resident-owned investment corporation for a taxation year means the total of amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a taxable dividend paid by the corporation in the year on a share of its capital stock, determined by the formula

$$\frac{A}{B} \times C$$

where

A is the corporation's allowable refundable tax on hand immediately before the dividend was paid,

B is the greater of the amount of the dividend so paid and the corporation's cumulative taxable income immediately before the dividend was paid, and

C is the amount of the dividend so paid;

"Canadian property" means

(a) taxable Canadian property, and

(b) any other property not being foreign property within the meaning assigned by section 206;

History: Para. (a) of the definition "Canadian property" in subsec. 133(8) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 131(3), applicable after October 1, 1996. The para. formerly read:

(a) property of a corporation that would be taxable Canadian property if at no time in the year the corporation had been resident in Canada, and

"capital gains dividend account" of a non-resident-owned investment corporation at any particular time means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of the following amounts in respect of the period commencing January 1, 1972 and ending immediately after the corporation's last taxation year ending before the particular time:

(a) the corporation's capital gains for taxation years ending in the period from dispositions in the period of Canadian property or shares of another non-resident-owned investment corporation, and

134. Non-resident-owned corporation not a Canadian corporation, etc. — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a non-resident-owned investment corporation that would, but for this section, be a Canadian corporation, taxable Canadian corporation or private corporation shall be deemed not to be a Canadian corporation, taxable Canadian corporation or private corporation, as the case may be, except for the purposes of section 87, subsection 88(2) and sections 212.1 and 219.

134.1 (1) NRO — transition — This section applies to a corporation that

(a) was a non-resident-owned investment corporation in a taxation year;

(b) is not a non-resident-owned investment corporation in the following taxation year (in this section referred to as the corporation's "first non-NRO year"); and

(c) elects in writing filed with the Minister on or before the corporation's filing-due date for its first non-NRO year to have this section apply.

Selected Cases [subsec. 134.1(1)]: CGU Holdings Canada Ltd. v. R., [2009] 3 C.T.C. 19 (FCA) (NRO status did not continue following amalgamation).

(2) Application — A corporation to which this section applies is deemed to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation in its first non-NRO year for the purposes of applying, in respect of dividends paid on shares of its capital stock in its first non-NRO year to a non-resident person or a non-resident-owned investment corporation, subsections 133(6) to (9) (other than the definition "non-resident-owned investment corporation" in subsection 133(8)) and section 212 and any tax treaty.

Proposed Amendment — 134.1(2)

(2) Application — For the purposes of applying subsections 104(10) and (11) and 133(6) to (9) (other than the definition "non-resident-owned investment corporation" in subsection 133(8)), section 212 and any tax treaty, a corporation described in subsection (1) is deemed to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation in its first non-NRO year in respect of dividends paid in that year on shares of its capital stock to a non-resident person, to a trust for the benefit of non-resident persons or their unborn issue or to a non-resident-owned investment corporation.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 91, will amend subsec. 134.1(2) to read as above, applicable to a corporation that ceases to be a non-resident-owned investment corporation because of a transaction or an event that occurs, or a circumstance that arises, in a taxation year of the corporation that ends after February 27, 2000.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 134.1 was enacted, along with section 134.2, in 2001 to provide transitional relief for corporations that cease to be non-resident owned investment corporations (NROs). The essence of the relief provided in section 134.1 is to allow such a corporation to recover refundable tax by paying a dividend in its "first non-NRO year". In its current form, the section applies only in respect of dividends paid to a non-resident person or another NRO. There is, however, another kind of shareholder to whom an NRO may pay a dividend in respect of which it is appropriate to apply the section — a trust for the benefit of non-resident persons or their unborn issue. Since such a trust could, under the rules that have governed NROs themselves, have held the shares and debt of an NRO, a dividend to the trust ought to support a refund of the former NRO's refundable tax. Subsection 134.1(2) is therefore amended to include such dividends within the section's scope.

In addition, subsections 104(10) and (11) are added to the list of provisions in subsection 134.1(2) for which a former NRO is deemed to be an NRO during its first non-NRO year. Prior to the repeal of the NRO system, a trust that received a dividend from an NRO and that did not in turn distribute the amount of the dividend to its non-resident beneficiaries was entitled to deduct that amount from the trust's income under subsection 104(10). Subsection 104(11) then deemed the amount deducted under subsection 104(10) to have been paid to a non-resident beneficiary, with the result that Part XIII withholding tax would typically be payable. These two subsections are included in subsection 134.1(2) in order to allow a trust to benefit from these provisions in the year it receives the final payment of dividends from the former NRO.

Both of these amendments apply on the same basis as section 134.1: that is, to a corporation that ceases to be an NRO because of a transaction or event that occurs, or a circumstance that arises, in a taxation year of the corporation that ends after February 27, 2000.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Nov. 1, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter dated October 2, 2001 in which you request that we consider recommending an amendment to section 134.1 of the Income Tax Act, a relieving measure relating to the phase-out of non-resident-owned investment corporations (NROs). Section 134.1 treats a corporation that has ceased to be an NRO as an NRO during its first non-NRO year, so that it can claim a refund of the 25% tax paid while an NRO. The refund is based on dividends paid by the corporation during its first non-NRO year to a non-resident person or another NRO.

Your concern is that the relieving effect of section 134.1 is too narrow, given that the Income Tax Act contemplates that an NRO can be structured so that all of its shares are owned by a trust resident in Canada for the benefit of non-resident persons. In such a case, the NRO would pay dividends in its first non-NRO year to the trust, which would then allocate the dividends to the non-resident beneficiaries, but because the trust is resident in Canada the relief provided by section 134.1 would not be available.

We have reviewed your request, and I can confirm that the denial of the section 134.1 relief to a trust under the conditions you have described is unintended in policy terms. We are therefore prepared to recommend an amendment to the Income Tax Act that would allow an NRO to claim the relief available under section 134.1, where a Canadian-resident trust owns all of the shares of an NRO for the benefit of non-resident persons. We intend to recommend that this change be brought forward in a package of technical amendments at an early opportunity, and that the amendment have effect for the same time period as section 134.1 of the Act.

While I cannot offer any assurances that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Thank you again for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) the lesser of

(i) the total of all amounts, in respect of the taxpayer's receipt in the particular taxation year of tax deferred cooperative shares, that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, be included under subsection 135(7) in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of a tax deferred cooperative share disposed of by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year

(B) the amount, if any, that is included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year because of an election described in subparagraph (a)(ii).

(4) Deemed disposition — A taxpayer who holds a tax deferred cooperative share is deemed to have disposed of the share, for proceeds of disposition equal to the amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, have been included under subsection 135(7), in respect of the share, in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the share was issued, at the earliest time at which

(a) the paid-up capital of the share is reduced otherwise than by way of a redemption of the share; or

(6) Exclusion from withholding obligation — Subsection 135(3) does not apply to a payment pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage that is paid by an agricultural cooperative corporation through the issuance of a tax deferred cooperative share.

(7) Withholding on redemption — If a share that was, at the time it was issued, a tax deferred cooperative share of an agricultural cooperative corporation is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the agricultural cooperative corporation, or by a person or partnership with whom the agricultural cooperative corporation does not deal at arm's length, the agricultural cooperative corporation or the person or partnership, as the case may be, shall withhold and forthwith remit to the Receiver General, on account of the shareholder's tax liability, 15% from the amount otherwise payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation.

Proposed Amendment — 135.1(7)

(7) Withholding on redemption — A person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "redeeming entity") that redeems, acquires or cancels a shareholder's share shall withhold and forthwith remit to the Receiver General, on account of the shareholder's tax liability, 15% from the amount otherwise payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, if

(a) the share was, at the time it was issued, a tax deferred cooperative share;

(b) the redeeming entity is the corporation that issued the share, or a person or partnership with whom the corporation does not deal at arm's length; and

(c) the shareholder is not a trust whose taxable income is exempt from tax under this Part because of paragraph 149(1)(r) or (x).

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 39(1), will amend subsec. 135.1(7) to read as above, applicable to redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occur after 2007.

Technical Notes: Section 135.1 provides rules that apply in respect of agricultural cooperatives and their members. Subsection 135.1(7) applies a withholding requirement in respect of any share that was at the time it was issued a tax deferred cooperative share of an agricultural cooperative corporation. The subsection provides that if the share is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the agricultural cooperative corporation, or by a person or partnership with whom it does not deal at arm's length, that cooperative or person or partnership must withhold and forthwith remit to the Receiver General, on account of the shareholder's tax liability, 15% from the amount otherwise payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation.

Subsection 135.1(7) is amended to provide an exemption from the withholding requirement if the amount payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is to a trust governed by an RRSP or a RRIF that is exempt from tax under section 149. Because a share will only qualify as a tax deferred cooperative share if it is issued to an eligible member, which does not include RRSPs or RRIFs, the withholding exemption is expected to be available only in the relatively unusual circumstances that an eligible member decides to forego the deferred tax treatment of the shares by transferring them to a trust governed by an RRSP or an RRIF.

This amendment applies to tax deferred cooperative shares redeemed, acquired or cancelled after 2007.

Note that, because of the application of new subsection 135.1(10) (described below), subsection 135.1(7) does not impose a withholding requirement for amounts payable on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share that arises as a result of an exchange described by paragraph 87(2)(s) or new subsection 135.1(9). For further information, see the commentary on new subsections 135.1(9) and (10).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 4, 2008:

Mr. Benoit Gagnon, Chief Financial Officer, Agropur coopérative

Dear Mr. Gagnon:

I am writing further to this Division's letter to you of April 25, 2007, and Jocelyn Losiers' subsequent discussions with members of my staff, regarding the rules relating to tax-deferred patronage dividends paid by agricultural cooperative corporations and, in particular, the obligation to withhold 15% on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a tax-deferred cooperative share.

Cooperatives can distribute earnings to their members in the form of patronage dividends, which are paid in proportion to the amount of business the member has undertaken with the cooperative. For income tax purposes, in computing its income, a cooperative may deduct such patronage dividends paid to its members, unlike regular dividends which are not deductible. In turn, the tax treatment of a patronage dividend in the hands of a cooperative member depends upon which of two separate regimes applies in respect of the dividend.

The first, set out in section 135 of the Income Tax Act (Act), applies in respect of ordinary patronage dividends. Ordinary patronage dividends received (other than in respect of consumer goods and services) by a cooperative member must be included in the recipient's income and are taxable in the year they are received.

The second regime, set out in section 135.1 of the Act, applies in respect of tax-deferred patronage dividends. This second regime is more generous than the first in that it allows qualifying members of certain agricultural cooperatives to defer the inclusion of the patronage dividend until the subsequent redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax-deferred cooperative share in respect of which the dividend relates.

Under the ordinary patronage dividend regime the cooperative is generally required to withhold and remit to the government an amount on behalf of the member's tax liability in respect of the patronage dividend. However, an exemption from this withholding requirement is provided when an ordinary patronage dividend is made to a person who is exempt from tax on its taxable income under section 149 of the Act. A requirement to withhold taxes is also imposed under the tax-deferred patronage dividend regime at the time of the redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax-deferred cooperative share, but, as you note, a similar exemption from the withholding requirements is not currently provided in respect of the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of shares held by a person who is exempt from tax on its taxable income under section 149 of the Act.

In an earlier letter to this Department, you indicated that agricultural cooperative members may prefer to hold their tax-deferred cooperative shares inside their RRSPs (and, I would gather by extension, an RRIF). To do so, these members would have to transfer the share to the RRSP or RRIF after having acquired it from cooperative. This is because a share will only qualify as a tax-deferred cooperative share if it issued to an eligible member, which does not include RRSPs or RRIFs. As a result, I would expect that an RRSP would be unlikely to hold tax-deferred cooperative shares given that the transfer of the share to an RRSP or an RRIF would be a taxable disposition, negating any tax advantage of the deferral provided for by the tax-deferred patronage dividend rules. However, I understand from the discussions you have had with my staff that some members may nonetheless wish to make such a transfer to their RRSPs or RRIFs.

You have, therefore, recommended that subsection 135.1(7) of the Act be amended to provide for an exemption from the obligation to withhold in respect of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a tax-deferred cooperative share when the amount is paid to a trust governed by an RRSP or RRIF that is exempt from tax under section 149 of the Act. While, as indicated above, we believe that it will be rare for this situation to occur, we consider the requested amendment to be consistent with the underlying policy objective of the provision. As a result, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to provide such an exemption. Furthermore, if our recommendation were accepted, we would also recommend that the amendment be effective in respect of redemptions, cancellations and acquisitions that occur after 2007.

While I cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(b) para. 135.1(10)(b) is to be read as follows:

(b) in applying subsections (2) and (7) the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the old share for nil proceeds.

Technical Notes: New subsection 135.1(9) sets out the conditions that must be satisfied in order for new subsection 135.1(10) to apply. Under subsection 135.1(10) a taxpayer will not be required to include an amount in income under subsection 135.1(2) if, as set out in subsection 135.1(9), that taxpayer disposes of a tax deferred cooperative share (referred to as the "old share") and the following criteria are met:

- the disposition arises as part of a reorganization of the share capital of the agricultural cooperative corporation;
- the only consideration received by the taxpayer for the disposition of the old share is a share (referred to as the "new share") of the same agricultural cooperative corporation and the new share meets the criteria in paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition "tax deferred cooperative share" in subsection 135.1(1); and
- the amount that the taxpayer is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the new share is equal to the amount that the eligible member would have been entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the old share.

If the conditions in paragraph 87(2)(s) or new subsection 135.1(9) are met in respect of a disposition of a share by a taxpayer, then new subsection 135.1(10) ensures that the taxpayer is not required to include an amount in income under subsection 135.1(2) and that, in conjunction with subsection 135.1(7), no withholding tax is required in respect of the disposition. In addition, new subsection 135.1(10) ensures that the new share will be treated as a tax deferred cooperative share until such time as it is ultimately disposed of by the taxpayer.

In particular, when new subsection 135.1(10) applies:

- the new share issued in exchange for the old share is deemed to have been issued pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage and at the same time that the old share was issued (in this regard, the limited application of subsection 135.1(10) does not allow for the agricultural cooperative corporation to claim a deduction in respect of the issuance of the new share; this is appropriate as the corporation would have claimed a deduction on the issuance of the old share or — in the context of multiple reorganizations — the original tax deferred cooperative share that was first issued to the taxpayer); and

- if no other person or partnership receives any consideration for the old share other than the new share, then the old share is deemed to have been disposed of for nil proceeds when applying subsections 135.1(2) and (7).

New subsections 135.1(9) and (10) apply after September 28, 2009. However, transitional rules are available in respect of shares acquired on an exchange that is described by paragraph 87(2)(s) that occurs before October 31, 2011.

Firstly, if such a share was subsequently disposed before October 31, 2011 new paragraph 135.1(10)(a) is to be read (consistent with subparagraph 87(2)(s)(ii) as it would have actually read at that time) without reference to the condition that the share have been issued pursuant to an allocation in proportion to patronage.

Secondly, new paragraph 135.1(10)(b) is to be read (also consistent with subparagraph 87(2)(s)(ii) as it would have actually read at that time) without reference to the restriction that no other person or partnership receive at any time any consideration in exchange for the old share.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 28, 2009:

Mr. Pierre Lessard, CA, MBA, PriceWaterhouseCoopers LLP, Montréal, QC

Dear Mr. Lessard:

I am writing in response to your letters of April 4, 2008 and April 21, 2009, and further to your discussions with members of my staff, regarding the rules relating to tax deferred patronage dividends paid by agricultural cooperative corporations and, in particular, the tax result that occurs upon a reorganization of the share capital of such an agricultural cooperative corporation.

Cooperatives can distribute earnings to their members in the form of patronage dividends, which are paid in proportion to the amount of business the member has undertaken with the cooperative. For income tax purposes, in computing its income, a cooperative may deduct such patronage dividends paid to its members, unlike regular dividends which are not deductible. In turn, the tax treatment of a patronage dividend in the hands of a cooperative member depends upon which of two separate regimes applies in respect of the dividend. The first, set out in section 135 of the Income Tax Act (Act), applies in respect of ordinary patronage dividends. Ordinary patronage dividends received (other than in respect of consumer goods and services) by a cooperative member must be included in the recipient's income and are taxable in the year they are received.

The second regime, set out in section 135.1 of the Act, applies in respect of tax deferred patronage dividends. This second regime is more generous than the first in that it allows qualifying members of certain agricultural cooperatives to defer the inclusion of the patronage dividend until the subsequent redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the cooperative of the tax deferred cooperative share in respect of which the dividend relates.

Your client, an agricultural cooperative corporation, wishes to undertake a reorganization of its share capital under which its members would receive a share that meets the criteria in paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition of tax deferred cooperative share in subsection 135.1(1) in exchange for each tax deferred cooperative share tendered for cancellation. I understand that the purpose of the exchange is to simplify the share structure and reduce the number of classes of shares outstanding. No other consideration would be received by the member in exchange for the tax deferred cooperative shares tendered for cancellation. The rights, privileges, conditions, restrictions, limitations, paid up capital and redemption value attributable to each tax deferred cooperative share tendered for cancellation would be the same as the rights, privileges, conditions, restrictions, limitations, paid up capital and redemption value attributable to the share received in exchange for that tax deferred cooperative share.

You have concluded that, under the existing tax law, each eligible member who tenders a tax deferred cooperative share for cancellation under the terms of the reorganization will be required to include an amount in income in consequence of the disposition of the share. As a result, you have requested an amendment which would allow the tax deferral to continue until such time as the member disposes the share received on the exchange.

From a policy perspective, it appears appropriate for an eligible member of an agricultural cooperative corporation to defer the income inclusion that would otherwise be required under subsection 135.1(2) when the share capital of an agricultural cooperative is reorganized in a manner described above.

In the event that an amendment is made to accommodate such a further deferral, we further agree that it would be consistent with the underlying policy to provide an exemption from the obligation to withhold under subsection 135.1(7) of the Act on the exchange.

Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended such that subsections 135.1(2) and (7) would not apply upon the disposition of a tax deferred cooperative share where the following conditions are met:

- the disposition arises as part of a reorganization of the agricultural cooperative corporation's share capital;
- the eligible member disposes of all of their shares of a particular class as part of the reorganization;
- the only consideration received by an eligible member in the course of the reorganization in exchange for the disposition of tax deferred cooperative shares issued by an agricultural cooperative corporation are shares of the same agricultural cooperative corporation and the shares meet the criteria in paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition of tax deferred cooperative share in subsection 135.1(1); and
- the cumulative total paid-up capital and cumulative total amount that the eligible member is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the new shares equals the cumulative total amount of paid-up capital and the cumulative total amount that the eligible member is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the old shares.

Furthermore, if our recommendation were to be accepted, we would also recommend that the amendment be effective in respect of redemptions, cancellations and acquisitions that occur after the date of this letter.

While I cannot offer any assurance that our recommendation in this matter will be accepted, I hope our statement of intent in this letter will be helpful in responding to your concern.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Cooperative Corporations

136. (1) Cooperative not private corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a cooperative corporation that would, but for this section, be a private corporation is deemed not to be a private corporation except for the purposes of sections 15.1, 125, 125.1, 127, 127.1, 152 and 157, the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1) and the definition "small business corporation" in subsection 248(1) as it applies for the purpose of paragraph 39(1)(c).

Proposed Amendment — 136(1)

136. (1) Cooperative not private corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a cooperative corporation that would, if this Act were read without reference to this section, be a private corporation is deemed not to be a private corporation except for the purposes of sections 15.1, 123.4, 125, 125.1, 127, 127.1, 152 and 157, the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1) and the definition "small business corporation" in subsection 248(1) as it applies for the purpose of paragraph 39(1)(c).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 92(1), will amend subsec. 136(1) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 136(1) provides that a cooperative corporation that would otherwise be a private corporation is treated as a private corporation for the purposes of specified provisions of the Act. The subsection is amended to include among those provisions section 123.4, which in effect provides reductions in corporate tax rates. This subsection is amended, for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years, to provide that a cooperative corporation that otherwise qualifies as a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) may use the special rate reduction provided for CCPCs.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 20, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of February 26, 2001, regarding the application of proposed section 123.4 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to co-operative corporations.

If it is enacted as proposed, section 123.4 will provide both a general deduction from tax otherwise payable, available to most types of corporation, and a special deduction for Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs). You have asked whether a co-operative corporation could also be a CCPC for the purposes of these new deductions. You identify two important results that follow from the answer to that question. First, a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC will determine its "full rate taxable income" using paragraph (b) of the definition of that term in proposed subsection 123.4(1); one that is not a CCPC will use paragraph (a). Second, a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC may be able to use the proposed 7% deduction from tax on up to $100,000 of active business income in excess of the $200,000 limit for the section 125 "small business deduction".

As you point out, although subsection 136(1) of the Act deems co-operative corporations not to be private corporations for most purposes, that deeming rule does not apply for the purposes of a number of specified provisions, including section 125 of the Act. A co-operative corporation that meets the other relevant requirements is thus not precluded from being a CCPC under the definition in subsection 125(7), nor from taking advantage of the small business deduction itself.

Given the close connection between the new special deduction for CCPCs and the existing small business deduction, in policy terms it seems clear that a co-operative corporation that is a CCPC under section 125 ought also to be treated as such for the purposes of proposed section 123.4. I agree, however, that it may not be obvious from the current version of subsection 136(1) that this is indeed the case.

To avoid any possible confusion, we are therefore prepared to recommend the addition, to the list in subsection 136(1), of a reference to proposed section 123.4. This change, if approved by the Minister of Finance, would be included in a package of draft technical amendments scheduled for release in the coming months.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 136(1)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 16, 2009:

Ms. Gail Ellis, Corporate Treasurer, Amalgamated Dairies Limited, Summerside, P.E.I.

Dear Ms. Ellis:

Thank you for your correspondence of February 23, 2007 in which you recommend that cooperative corporations be treated as Canadian-controlled private corporations (CCPCs) for the purposes of the enhanced dividend tax credit under subsection 89(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act). I apologize for the delay of this reply.

From a policy perspective, it is intended that cooperative corporations be permitted to be private corporations (and thus in some cases, CCPCs) for the purposes of subsection 89(1). By way of background, one of the policy reasons for the enhanced dividend tax credit is to minimize the effect of double taxation in our existing corporate tax system. Under the enhanced dividend tax credit for eligible dividends, subsection 89(1) allows a CCPC's income that was taxed at the full corporate income tax rate to be included in its general rate income pool (GRIP) at the end of a taxation year. Generally, a positive balance in a CCPC's GRIP at the end of a taxation year reflects the amount available for eligible dividend designation by the CCPC.

Subsection 136(1) of the Act deems a cooperative corporation not to be a private corporation, except for certain purposes, including for the purposes of the small business deduction. You have indicated that a cooperative corporation that is in a position to benefit from the small business deduction (pursuant to one of the exceptions under subsection 136(1)) should also be in a position to benefit from having a GRIP.

We agree with this view and are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance the addition, to the list of exceptions in subsection 136(1), of a reference to subsection 89(1). If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

History: Subsec. 136(1) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 161, applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994. Subsec. 136(1) formerly read:

Subsec. 136(1) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 112, to substitute "125, 125.1" for "123.1, 125", applicable after June 1988 except that in its application before April 28, 1989, the subsec. shall be read without the reference to s. 152.

(2) Definition of "cooperative corporation" — In this section, "cooperative corporation" means a corporation that was incorporated or continued by or under the provisions of a law, of Canada or of a province, that provide for the establishment of the corporation as a cooperative corporation or that provide for the establishment of cooperative corporations, for the purpose of marketing (including processing incident to or connected to the marketing) natural products belonging to or acquired from its members or customers, of purchasing supplies, equipment or household necessaries for or to be sold to its members or customers or of performing services for its members or customers, if

(a) the statute by or under which it was incorporated, its charter, articles of association or by-laws or its contracts with its members or its members and customers held out the prospect that payments would be made to them in proportion to patronage;

(b) none of its members (except other cooperative corporations) have more than one vote in the conduct of the affairs of the corporation; and

(c) at least 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming, and at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by those persons or partnerships.

Proposed Amendment — 136(2)(c), (d) [(d) temporary]

(c) at least 90% of its members are individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming; and

(d) at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by members described in paragraph (c) or by trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds or registered education savings plans or TFSAs, the annuitants, holders or subscribers under which are members described in that paragraph.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 92(2), will amend para. 136(2)(c) to read as above and add para. (d), applicable to 1998 et seq., except that, in its application to taxation years before 2009, para. 136(2)(d) is to be read as follows:

> (d) at least 90% of its shares, if any, are held by members described in paragraph (c) or by trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds or registered education savings plans, the annuitants or subscribers under which are members described in that paragraph.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 136(2) sets out conditions that a corporation must meet in order to be a cooperative corporation. The condition in current paragraph 136(2)(c) has two parts: at least 90% of its members must be individuals, other cooperative corporations, or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming; and at least 90% of its shares, if any, must be held by those persons or partnerships.

The second part of this condition is modified to accommodate cases where the shares of a cooperative are held not only by the members themselves, but also by their registered plans (RRSPs, RRIFs, RESPs or TFSAs). If shares are held by a trust that is governed by such a plan, provided a member of the cooperative is the plan's subscriber or annuitant, as the case may be, those shares will be counted in the same way as if they were held by a member personally. Amended paragraph 136(2)(c) and new paragraph 136(2)(d), which give effect to this change, apply to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, except that the accommodation with respect to shares held by TFSAs applies for the 2009 and subsequent taxation years.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 1999:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letter dated June 4, 1999 to Len Farber respecting paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Income Tax Act and subsection 4900(12) of the Income Tax Regulations. Paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act provides, as part of the definition of "cooperative corporation" in section 136, that at least 90% of a cooperative's shares must be held by members who are individuals, other cooperative corporations or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming. Subsection 4900(12) of the Regulations provides that shares of specified cooperative corporations are qualified investments that may be held in an RRSP. You are concerned that the ability of a cooperative's members to hold their shares in RRSPs could, because the RRSPs may not be "members", cause the corporation to lose its cooperative status under section 136.

You have been advised by officials of the Tax Legislation Division that an amendment to paragraph 136(2)(c) is anticipated which would ensure that a cooperative does not lose its status as a consequence of its members contributing their shares to their RRSPs. You are seeking confirmation in writing of this information.

I can confirm that we intend to recommend that paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act be amended to enable individual members of a cooperative to contribute their shares to their own RRSPs without any adverse consequences to the cooperative under the Act. The details of the amendment to be recommended remain to be developed. In general terms, however, I would foresee it being structured either as a rule which attributed the shares held by an RRSP to the annuitant, or which reformed paragraph 136(2)(c) to provide that shares contributed to an RRSP by a cooperative member would be treated as shares held by individuals who are members of a cooperative. We will recommend that this amendment apply to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) the preferred-rate amount of the credit union at the end of the taxation year that immediately preceded the particular taxation year; and

(b) the total of

(i) that proportion of the amount obtained by multiplying 25/4 by the amount deductible under s. 125 for the particular taxation year, that the number of days in the particular taxation year that are in 2007 is of the number of days in the particular taxation year, and

(ii) that proportion of the amount obtained by multiplying 100/17 by the amount deductible under s. 125 for the particular taxation year, that the number of days in the particular taxation year that are in 2008 is of the number of days in the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes: Section 137 provides rules relating to the taxation of credit unions. Paragraph 137(4.3)(a) defines the "preferred-rate amount" of a corporation that is a credit union at the end of a taxation year. Income qualifying for the small business deduction under section 125 — which, pursuant to subsection 137(4), includes income qualifying under subsection 137(3) — is intended to be included in a corporation's preferred-rate amount. To determine the preferred-rate amount, the amount deducted under section 125 is multiplied by a factor that reflects the small business deduction rate. The current factor reflects a small business deduction rate of 16%. The small business deduction rate that is effective for the 2008 and subsequent taxation years has been increased to 17%. Consequently, the multiplication factor used in this paragraph to determine the amount of a corporation's income that has qualified under section 125 is changed to 100/17 from 25/4.

This amendment applies to the 2008 and subsequent taxation years. A transitional rule is provided to determine the preferred-rate amount of a credit union at the end of its taxation year which began in 2007 and ended in 2008. Under the transitional rule, the preferred-rate amount of a credit union at the end of such taxation year will be prorated based upon the number of days of its taxation year that are in 2007 and the number that are in 2008.

(b) where at any time a new corporation has been formed as a result of an amalgamation of two or more predecessor corporations, within the meaning of subsection 87(1), it shall be deemed to have had a taxation year ending immediately before that time and to have had, at the end of that year, a preferred-rate amount equal to the total of the preferred-rate amounts of each of the predecessor corporations at the end of their last taxation years; and

(c) where there has been a winding-up as described in subsection 88(1), the preferred-rate amount of the parent (referred to in that subsection) at the end of its taxation year immediately preceding its taxation year in which it received the assets of the subsidiary (referred to in that subsection) on the winding-up shall be deemed to be the total of the amount that would otherwise be its preferred-rate amount at the end of that year and the preferred-rate amount of the subsidiary at the end of its taxation year in which its assets were distributed to the parent on the winding-up.

(5) Member's income — Where a payment has been received by a taxpayer from a credit union in a taxation year in respect of an allocation in proportion to borrowing, the amount thereof shall, if the money so borrowed was used by the taxpayer for the purpose of earning income from a business or property (otherwise than to acquire property the income from which would be exempt or to acquire a life insurance policy), be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year.

(5.1) Allocations of taxable dividends and capital gains — A credit union (referred to in this subsection and in subsection (5.2) as the "payer") may, at any time within 120 days after the end of its taxation year, elect in prescribed form to allocate in respect of the year to a member that is a credit union such portion of each of the following amounts as may reasonably be regarded as attributable to the member:

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a taxable dividend received by the payer from a taxable Canadian corporation in the year;

(b) the amount if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the payer's capital gain from the disposition of a property in the year exceeds the payer's taxable capital gain from the disposition

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which the payer's capital loss from the disposition of a property in the year exceeds the payer's allowable capital loss from the disposition; and

(c) each amount deductible under paragraph (5.2)(c) in computing the payer's taxable income for the year.

(b) there shall be included in computing the income of a payer for a taxation year an amount equal to that portion of the amount referred to in paragraphs (5.1)(b) and (c) that the payer allocated under subsection (5.1) in respect of the year to its members; and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 93(2), will amend subsec. 137(7) to read as above, applicable to 2001 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 137(7) provides that a credit union that would otherwise be a private corporation is treated as a private corporation for the purposes of specified provisions of the Act. The subsection is amended to include among those provisions section 123.4, which in effect provides reductions in corporate tax rates. This amendment, which applies to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years, provides that a credit union that otherwise qualifies as a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) may use the special rate reduction provided for CCPCs.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 20, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing, with the concurrence of Mr. Roger Champagne of the Fédération des caisses Desjardins du Québec, to provide you with the enclosed copy of my response to a recent letter from Mr. Champagne. In my response, I agree to recommend an Income Tax Act amendment to allow a credit union to be treated as a private corporation for purposes of the new deductions from tax otherwise payable, found in section 123.4 of the Act.

As this is a matter that may be of interest to many of your members, it seemed appropriate that you be advised of our intentions in this regard.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 20, 2001:

Monsieur,

La présente fait suite à votre lettre du 5 novembre dernier au sujet de l'application [xxx] du nouvel article 123.4 de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (« Loi »). Cet article, qui a pour effet de réduire l'impôt que doit payer une société sur une partie de son revenu, que l'on appelle « revenu imposable au taux complet », s'applique différemment aux sociétés privées sous contrôle canadien (SPCC) qu'aux autres sociétés. En particulier, il prévoit une déduction accélérée de l'impôt par ailleurs payable par une SPCC sur un certain montant de son revenu tiré d'une entreprise exploitée activement.

Comme vous l'indiquiez, le paragraphe [xxx] de la Loi traite une [xxx] comme une société privée à certaines fins, notamment en ce qui concerne la déduction accordée aux petites entreprises prévue à l'article 125. Le paragraphe [xxx] ne s'applique cependant pas explicitement aux fins prévues au paragraphe 123.4. Vous avez donc demandé que nous recommandions une modification pour assurer qu'[xxx] est considérée comme une société privée aux fins de l'article 123.4 et qu'elle peut donc, en supposant que les autres critères pertinents sont respectés, profiter de la déduction accélérée consentie aux SPCC.

Selon moi, une telle mesure serait appropriée sur le plan de la politique, et nous recommanderons qu'elle soit incluse dans les prochaines modifications techniques. Le changement s'appliquerait aux années d'imposition 2001 et suivantes, de manière à coïncider avec l'instauration de l'article 123.4. Je vous soulignerais aussi que le « revenu imposable au taux complet » [xxx], au sens de l'article 123.4, exclut les montants visés par la déduction additionnelle prévue au paragraphe [xxx] de la Loi, et que nous ne proposerons donc aucun changement à cet égard.

Directeur, Division de la législation de l'impôt, Direction de la politique de l'impôt, Brian Ernewein

137.1 (1) Amounts included in income of deposit insurance corporation — For the purpose of computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation, the following rules apply:

(a) the corporation's income shall, except as otherwise provided in this section, be computed in accordance with the rules applicable in computing income for the purposes of this Part; and

(b) there shall be included in computing the corporation's income such of the following amounts as are applicable:

(i) the total of profits or gains made in the year by the corporation in respect of bonds, debentures, mortgages, hypothecary claims, notes or other similar obligations owned by it that were disposed of by it in the year, and

(ii) the total of each such portion of each amount, if any, by which the principal amount, at the time it was acquired by the corporation, of a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation owned by the corporation at the end of the year exceeds the cost to the corporation of acquiring it as was included by the corporation in computing its profit for the year.

(2) Amounts not included in income — The amount of any premiums or assessments received or receivable by a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation from its member institutions in a taxation year shall not be included in computing its income.

Proposed Amendment — 137.1(2)

(2) Amounts not included in income — The following amounts shall not be included in computing the income of a deposit insurance corporation for a taxation year:

(a) any premium or assessment received, or receivable, by the corporation in the year from a member institution; and

(b) any amount received by the corporation in the year from another deposit insurance corporation to the extent that that amount can reasonably be considered to have been paid out of amounts referred to in paragraph (a) received by that other deposit insurance corporation in any taxation year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 94(1), will amend subsec. 137.1(2) to read as above, applicable to 1998 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 137.1 provides rules for the taxation of deposit insurance corporations (DICs), including rules that affect the computation of income. In general terms, the premiums that a member institution pays to a DIC are deductible in computing the member's income and are not included in computing the income of the DIC, while any assistance that the DIC provides to the member or the member's depositors is not deductible for the DIC and is included in computing the member's income.

In certain circumstances, two or more DICs may share responsibilities toward a group of members. In such a case, it may be necessary for one DIC to pay to another an amount in respect of premiums. To ensure the appropriate tax consequences of such a payment, subsections 137.1(2) and (4) are amended. New paragraph 137.1(2)(b) excludes from the income of a DIC any amount it receives from another DIC, to the extent the amount can reasonably be considered to have been paid out of premiums or assessments received or receivable by the other DIC from its member institutions. New paragraph 137.1(4)(d), on the other hand, precludes the paying DIC from deducting the amount in computing its own income.

Related Provisions: 137.1(4) — Limitation on deduction; 137.1(11) — Deductions for payments by member institution.

(3) Amounts deductible in computing income of deposit insurance corporation — There may be deducted in computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation such of the following amounts as are applicable:

(a) the total of losses sustained in the year by the corporation in respect of bonds, debentures, mortgages, hypothecary claims, notes or other similar obligations owned by it and issued by a person other than a member institution that were disposed of by it in the year;

(b) the total of each such portion of each amount, if any, by which the cost to the corporation of acquiring a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation owned by the corporation at the end of the year exceeds the principal amount of the bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation, as the case may be, at the time it was so acquired as was deducted by the corporation in computing its profit for the year;

(c) [Repealed under former Act]

(d) the total of all expenses incurred by the taxpayer in collecting premiums or assessments from member institutions;

(e) the total of all expenses incurred by the taxpayer

(i) in the performance of its duties as curator of a bank, or as liquidator or receiver of a member institution when duly appointed as such a curator, liquidator or receiver,

(ii) in the course of making or causing to be made such inspections as may reasonably be considered to be appropriate for the purposes of assessing the solvency or financial stability of a member institution, and

(iii) in supervising or administering a member institution in financial difficulty; and

(f) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is not otherwise deductible by the taxpayer for the year or any other taxation year and that is

(i) an amount paid by the taxpayer in the year pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on borrowed money used

(A) to lend money to, or otherwise provide assistance to, a member institution in financial difficulty,

(B) to assist in the payment of any losses suffered by members or depositors of a member institution in financial difficulty,

(C) to lend money to a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the taxpayer where the subsidiary is deemed by subsection (5.1) to be a deposit insurance corporation,

(D) to acquire property from a member institution in financial difficulty, or

(E) to acquire shares of the capital stock of a member institution in financial difficulty, or

(ii) an amount paid by the taxpayer in the year pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on an amount that would be deductible under subparagraph (i) if it were paid in the year.

Related Provisions: 137.2 — Valuation of property owned since before 1975.

History: Paras. 137.1(3)(a) and (b) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 216(2) to add the words "hypothecary claims" and "hypothecary claim" respectively, in force June 14, 2001.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-483: Credit unions (archived).

(4) Limitation on deduction — No deduction shall be made in computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer that is a deposit insurance corporation in respect of

(a) any grant, subsidy or other assistance to member institutions provided by it;

(b) an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount paid or payable by it to acquire property exceeds the fair market value of the property at the time it was so acquired;

(c) any amounts paid to its member institutions as allocations in proportion to any amounts described in subsection (2); or

(d) [Repealed under former Act]

Proposed Addition — 137.1(4)(d)

(d) any amount paid by it to another deposit insurance corporation that is, because of paragraph (2)(b), not included in computing the income of that other deposit insurance corporation; or

(ii) in computing the insurer's taxable capital gains or allowable capital losses for the taxation year from dispositions of capital property (referred to in this subparagraph as

"insurance business property") that, at the time of the disposition, was used or held by the insurer in the course of carrying on an insurance business,

(A) there is to be included each taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss of the insurer for the taxation year from a disposition in the taxation year of an insurance business property that was a designated insurance property for the taxation year of the insurer, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 95(1), will amend subsec. 138(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 138(2) provides rules for the purpose of computing the income of a life insurer resident in Canada where the life insurer carries on an insurance business in Canada and in a country other than Canada. The subsection provides that the insurer's income from carrying on an insurance business is the amount of its income from carrying in the insurance business in Canada computed in accordance with the Act. As well, the subsection provides that the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business is the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from designated insurance property.

Subsection 138(2) is being amended to extend its application to non-resident insurer's that carry on an insurance business in Canada. As well, it is being amended to provide, for greater certainty, the following:

1. In computing a multinational insurer's income from an insurance business carried on by it in Canada, no amount is to be included in respect of the insurer's gross investment revenue for a taxation year derived from property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business that is not designated insurance property of the insurer. Subsection 138(9) provides that in computing a multinational insurer's income from an insurance business carried on by it in Canada the insurer must include its gross investment revenue for the year from its designated insurance property for the year plus the amount prescribed in respect of the insurer for the year. Designated insurance property is defined in section 2400 of the Regulations.

2. In computing a multinational insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business there is to be included the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from dispositions of its designated insurance property for the year. It also provides that the insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on an insurance business that is its designated insurance property for the year are not to be included in computing a multinational insurer's taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses for the year.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 7, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter of March 23, 2001 seeking confirmation that we are intending to recommend to the Minister of Finance (the "Minister") amendments to the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to ensure that gross investment revenue is included in computing the income of multinational life insurers resident in Canada (and non-resident multinational insurers) from carrying on an insurance business in Canada only to the extent such gross investment revenue is derived from "designated insurance property", as defined in the Act.

We can confirm that we are intending to recommend to the Minister that subsections 138(2) and (9) of the Act be amended. The amendment will clarify that only the gross investment revenue derived by the insurer from "designated insurance property" of the insurer in respect of the insurance business carried on in Canada will be included in the income of the insurer from that insurance business. If adopted it will be recommended that the amendments be effective for taxation years ending after 1999.

We hope this addresses your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 8, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

We are responding to your letter of October 11th, 2000, to Mr. Wally Conway concerning sections 95 and 138 of the Income Tax Act (the Act).

In your letter you expressed concern about the recent decision of the Tax Court of Canada in Munich Reinsurance Company (Canada Branch) v. The Queen [affirmed by the Federal Court of Appeal, [2002] 1 C.T.C. 199 — ed.], where it interpreted subsection 138(9) as not being a complete code with respect to the inclusion of investment income in a multinational insurer's income from carrying on an insurance business in Canada. Instead the court applied the general rules in the Act in determining whether income from a property was income of the insurer from its insurance business carried on in Canada.

You are concerned that, as a result of this decision, the intent of subsections 138(2) and (9) will be ignored and a multinational insurer will be required to include in its income from an insurance business carried on in Canada, its gross investment revenue from investment property that is not designated insurance property in respect of that business but is property factually used or held in that business. Consequently, you are requesting clarifying amendments to subsections 138(2) and (9) of the Act.

We are sympathetic to this request and will recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsections 138(2) and (9) be amended. The amendment will clarify that only the gross investment revenue derived by the insurer from "designated insurance property" of the insurer in respect of the insurance business carried on in Canada will be included in the income of the insurer from that insurance business. The amendments will be effective for taxation years ending after 1999. . .

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(ii) any amount that the insurer claims as a reserve in respect of claims that were received by the insurer before the end of the year under its life insurance policies and that are unpaid at the end of the year, not exceeding the total of amounts that the insurer is allowed by regulation to deduct in respect of the policies,

(ii.1) the amount included under paragraph (4)(b) in computing the insurer's income for the taxation year preceding the year,

(iii) an amount equal to the lesser of

(A) the amount, if any, by which the total of policy dividends (except the portion thereof paid out of segregated funds) that became payable by the insurer after its 1968 taxation year and before the end of the year under its participating life insurance policies exceeds the total of amounts deductible under this subparagraph in computing its incomes for taxation years before the year, and

Proposed Amendment — 138(3)(a)(iii), (iv)

(iii) the amount determined by the following formula:

where

A is the total of policy dividends (except the portion paid out of segregated funds) that became payable by the insurer after its 1968 taxation year and before the end of the year under its participating life insurance policies, and

B is the total of amounts deductible under this subparagraph (including as determined under subsection (3.1) as it read in its application to the insurer's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011) in computing its incomes for taxation years before the year, and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 41(1), will amend subpara. 138(3)(a)(iii) to read as above and repeal subpara. (iv), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(3) sets out certain deductions for life insurers in computing their income from carrying on a life insurance business in Canada.

Subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iii) permits a life insurer to make a deduction in respect of policy dividends paid or payable by it in a year under its participating life insurance policies. This deduction is limited to the insurer's income from its accumulated Canadian participating life insurance business earned after 1968. Under subparagraph 138(3)(a)(iv), a life insurer is also permitted a reserve for dividends that become payable in the following year on its participating policies.

Paragraph 138(3)(a) is amended to remove the restriction, under clause 138(3)(a)(iii)(B), on the deduction of policy dividends paid or payable in a year and to remove the deduction, under subparagraph (a)(iv), for dividends that become payable in the following year.

(v) each amount (other than an amount credited under a participating life insurance policy) that would be deductible under section 140 in computing the insurer's income for the year if the reference in that section to "an insurance business other than a life insurance business" were read as a reference to "a life insurance business in Canada";

(b) [Repealed]

(c) [Repealed under former Act]

(d) [Repealed]

(e) the total of amounts each of which is a policy loan made by the insurer in the year and after 1977;

(f) where the taxation year is the first taxation year of the insurer ending after November 12, 1981, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, in respect of interest on a policy loan that was included in computing the insurer's income for a taxation year ending before November 13, 1981

(i) to the extent that the interest had accrued to it before the commencement of its 1969 taxation year, or

(ii) to the extent that the interest had been included in computing its income for a preceding taxation year; and

(g) the amount of tax under Part XII.3 payable by the insurer in respect of its taxable Canadian life investment income for the year.

Proposed Amendment — 138(3)(b)-(g)

(b) the total of amounts each of which is a policy loan made by the insurer in the year and after 1977; and

(c) the amount of tax under Part XII.3 payable by the insurer in respect of its taxable Canadian life investment income for the year.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 41(2), will renumber paras. 138(3)(e) and (g) as paras. (3)(b) and (c) and repeal para. (f), applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 138(3)(f) provides a transitional rule. Life insurance companies first became taxable in 1969 and were required to include in their income any interest on a policy loan received in that year. At that time, no provision was made to exclude the policy loan interest earned before the 1969 taxation year. Subparagraph 138(3)(f)(i) permits a deduction in respect of policy loan interest earned before 1969 for the first taxation year of an insurer ending after November 12, 1981.

Since 1978, life insurance companies have been required to report their policy loan interest income on a cash basis. Some corporations recorded this income on an accrual basis to the end of the 1977 taxation year. However, when the transition was made in 1978 to the cash basis, no provision was made to exclude from 1978 income the accrued policy loan interest which had been included in income in previous years. Subparagraph 138(3)(f)(ii) permits a similar deduction for any policy loan interest income accrued at the end of the 1977 taxation year and included in the income of a subsequent taxation year.
